INTRODUCTION.

In presenting to the public the Gazetteer, Biographical Record, and Directory of Genesee County we desire to return our sincere thanks to all who have kindly aided in obtaining the information it contains, and thus rendered it possible to present it in the brief space of time in which it is essential such work should be completed. Especially are our thanks due to the editors and managers of all the local papers for their uniform kindness, and for granting the use of their files; to Judge Safford E. North for the valuable paper on the Bench and Bar; to Dr. William B. Sprague, of Pavilion, for the paper on the Medical Profession; to D. R. Bacon for history of the town of Le Roy; to J. Lyman Crocker for assistance on the towns of Le Roy and Pavilion; to David Seaver, of New York, for valuable information pertaining to the Masonic history of the county; to John R. Anderson, of Le Roy, for additional Masonic history; to Charles E. Cook, of Byron, for the article on the fruit interests; to the county clerk, Carlos A. Hull, for his assistance in the use of records in his office; and to many others throughout the county, who have rendered valuable aid.

That errors have occurred in so great a number of names is probable, and that names have been omitted which should have been inserted is quite certain. We can only say that we have exercised more than ordinary diligence and care in this difficult and complicated feature of bookmaking. Of such as feel aggrieved in consequence of errors or omissions we beg pardon, and ask the indulgence of the reader in noting such as have been observed in the subsequent reading of the proofs, and which are corrected at the close of this volume.
INTRODUCTION.

We would suggest that our patrons observe and become familiar with the explanations at the commencement of the Directory on page 3, part second. The names it embraces, and the information connected therewith, were obtained by actual canvass, and are as correct and reliable as the judgment of those from whom they were solicited renders possible. Each agent is furnished with a map of the town he is expected to canvass, and he is required to pass over every road and call at every dwelling and place of business in the town in order to obtain the facts from the individuals concerned whenever possible.

The map, which has been engraved especially for this work, was compiled from latest existing plans in the county clerk's office, and shows all the new and old railroads, highways, and names of post-offices in the county.

We take this occasion to express the hope that the information found in the book will not prove devoid of interest and value, though we are fully conscious that the brief description of the county the scope of the work enables us to give is by no means an exhaustive one, and can only hope that it may prove an aid to future historians, who will be the better able to do full justice to the subject.

While thanking our patrons and friends generally for the cordiality with which our work has been seconded we leave the work to secure that favor which earnest endeavor ever wins from a discriminating public, hoping they will bear in mind, should errors be noted, that "he who expects a perfect work to see, expects what ne'er was, is, nor yet shall be."

GENESEE COUNTY.

To make a history of the importance of a proper one of Genesee County, in the Eden of the Empire State, it would be more complete in itself by introducing, briefly, the early history of the State, the foundation of the title of its territory, its early settlement, and the prominent position this particular county has and does at present sustain in the development of the first State of the Union.

Within the scope of a work of this character the discovery of the continent, and the exploration of its vast territory, need not enter minutely, except so far as relates to our portion of it; the history of its discovery by Columbus, in 1492, is a fact too well known to be repeated, and the discovery of the northern portion by Lief, the son of Eric a Norwegian, who came across the straits from Greenland to Labrador in the year 1000, was only followed by Thorfinn in 1007, who sailed along the same course down the eastern coast to Narragansett Bay, in Rhode Island; this land is called Vinland, and the record of his discoveries is still extant. After quite five centuries had elapsed the intrepid voyager and scholar, Christopher Columbus, by sailing west from Palos, across a then unknown ocean, discovered the Bahama Islands, and was followed by various adventurers from other nations of the Old World who sent them for mercenary motives. In 1497 Henry VII. commissioned John Cabot to sail to this continent, and take possession of it for the Crown of England; and this was successfully accomplished in 1498, on the second voyage by his son, Sebastian Cabot.
In 1524 John Verazzani, in the service of Francis I. of France, sailed along the coast from Georgia to about latitude 41° north, and entered a harbor, which from his description is said to be New York Bay; he remained there 15 days, and is believed to be the first European that landed on the soil of New York; he proceeded northerly as far as Labrador, and, naming the territory New France, took possession for France so far as he could by his rights of discovery. In 1607 Samuel Champlain sailed up the River St. Lawrence in the interest of the French nation; he explored the tributaries of that mighty river, and discovered Lake Champlain, which still bears his name. He also took possession of the "New France," and that nation assumed still greater rights in the new territory.

In 1609 Henry Hudson, an English navigator of note, offered his services to the Dutch East India Company, of Holland, a wealthy corporation formed for trade and colonization, which was accepted; and with a suitable outfit he arrived on the eastern coast of this continent at or near what is now Portland, Me., whence he sailed southward along the coast as far as Chesapeake Bay; from thence he sailed northward again, discovering Delaware Bay, and on the 3d of September anchored off Sandy Hook; he entered New York Bay on the 12th of the same month, and sailed up the river which was given his name, and has been since so called. He anchored just above where the city of Hudson now stands, and sent a boat with a portion of his crew still further up the river on a voyage of exploration; it is supposed, from his description, that the crew ascended above where Albany is now situated. On the 23d of September Hudson descended to the Bay of New York and set sail for home. Holland now claimed the territory from the same right of discovery and exploration, and it will be seen that the three nations mentioned claimed the same; and also that New York State was a part.

It will be no wonder after reading the foregoing that the authority of the different nations should clash somewhat. The Dutch sent out other trading vessels in 1612; these were followed by still more, and Manhattan Island was made the chief depot for trade; the States General granted a charter to the merchants for exclusive jurisdiction over "New Netherlands," as it was denominated, and it included all the territory between 40° and 45° north latitude.

In 1621 James I. granted to Ferdinando Gorges and his mercantile associates all lands between the 40th and 48th parallels of latitude, and from ocean to ocean; claim was made of the Dutch for the territory, which was refused, and the subject of title was already becoming important. Both had grants of the territory from the highest authority of their respective nations.

In 1638 William Kieft was made governor of New Amsterdam for the Dutch. He by his acts was plunged into war with the Indians, which lasted till 1645, when a treaty of peace was made, and Peter Stuyvesant was appointed governor in 1647. To settle the controversy between the English and Dutch settlements arbitrators were appointed to adjust their respective claims; this tribunal assigned the eastern part of Long Island to the English, and a division line specified the boundary between the Dutch New Netherlands and the English Connecticut colonies.

In 1664 Charles II. of England, regardless of the claims of the Dutch or any previous agreement, granted to his brother, Duke of York and Albany,—afterwards James II.,—the whole country from the Connecticut to the Delaware River, which included the entire Dutch possessions. The Duke claimed the territory, which was so strongly to be enforced, if refused, that Governor Stuyvesant surrendered the province September 3, 1664. Thus the possession of New Netherlands passed into the hands of the English, and at once the Duke changed the name to New York, and Fort Orange to Albany. The Dutch attempted to regain the possession of the territory, and nearly succeeded through the treachery of the captain of the fort at New York. Peace was declared between the rival factions in 1674, leaving the English in full possession, but the Duke of York, for his own safety, applied for and received from the Crown a new patent.

The French had not been idle, and in the meantime settlements had been made in New France,—the region north of the great lakes and along the St. Lawrence River,—and had allied themselves with the Algonquins in victories against the Iroquois, which embittered the latter against the French; but a peace was concluded in 1667 by the intercession of the Duke of York.

Trade was successfully prosecuted by the French and English in their respective territories for a few years, but artful advantages, instigated by the Catholic missionaries, disrupted the friendly relations between the Iroquois and English, which resulted in a conference, at Albany, of the governors of New York and Virginia and chiefs of the Iroquois, in 1684, and at which harmony was restored. No sooner was peace restored in this direction than discontent arose in another. De la Barre, French governor of Canada, made complaint that the Senecas,—a nation of the Iroquois,—by their hostilities against the Miamas,—a tribe beyond Lake Erie, with whom the French were allied,—interrupted their trade. In 1687 the French overrun the country of the Senecas,—Western New York,—and erected a fort at the mouth of Niagara River. The Five Nations flew to arms, descended upon the French, and the settlements south of the lake were abandoned by that nation. This gave the English the government of the territory embraced within the limits of the State of New York.

The revolution in England that placed William and Mary upon the throne was followed in 1669 by war between France and England, which involved, also, their colonies in the New World. Count Frontenac, governor of Canada, endeavored to alienate the fealty of the Iroquois from the English, and in other ways harrassed the latter, even sending an expedition, in February, 1690, to massacre the people at Schenectady. To allay this feeling among the allies Major Schuyler called a council at Albany and secured a renewal of friendship. After several invasions and a long, bloody war the peace of Ryswick, in 1697, terminated the barbarous hostilities between the two nations.

In 1710 it was thought necessary by England to subdue or repay Canada for many depredations and hostilities on the part of the French, and an expedition was sent the following year for her reduction, but failed to make an attack. The treaty of Utrecht, in 1713, terminated the war, and the supremacy of the English over the Iroquois, or Five Nations, was conceded. About this date the Tuscaroras, from the south, joined the Five Nations, and the confederation was thenceforth called the “Six Nations.”

A trading post was erected in 1722, at Oswego, by the English, which so displeased the French that they erected one at Niagara to intercept the trade of the western tribes; this led to a chain of forts and trading posts along west and south of the lakes, and the French then claimed possession of the territory west of the Alleghanies. The emissaries of the French again alienated the Six Nations in their allegiance to the English, and, notwithstanding the existing nominal terms of peace, let loose hordes of Indians on the English frontiers, besides many other overt acts of hostility committed. Early in 1755 England sent over vast armies, and four decisive campaigns were inaugurated against the French in all their possessions, viz.:

First, to subjugate their power in Nova Scotia.
Second, against Fort Duquesne for the recovery of power west of the Alleghanies.
Third, against Fort Niagara.
Fourth, against Crown Point at the head of Lake Champlain.
The varied success of these expeditions may be learned in more general histories, but suffice to say that in 1758 and 1759 the French were glad to arrange terms of peace, which was consummated February 10, 1763, by the cession of all possessions in Canada to the English.

During this year the boundary line between the provinces of New York, Massachusetts, and Connecticut was fixed; the line as agreed was to extend north and south, and to be 20 miles east of the Hudson River. The State of New York was now an English province, with no counter claims from the Dutch and French who had so long endeavored to obtain the ascendency on her soil.

The representatives of the provinces now began to remonstrate against various acts of oppression placed upon them by the British Parliament—taxes that abridged their trade and liberties, and the exaction of duties that were unbecoming to a lawful subject. The burden of the late war with France, by which England acquired vast territory, was yet onerous to the provinces, and the arbitrary enforcement of unwholesome collections created a feeling of resistance and revolt. Petitions to King and Parliament were unheeded; the stamp act in 1765 led the colonies to open revolt; its repeal followed in 1767, but in its stead a heavy duty was placed upon tea, glass, lead, paper, etc., that should be brought for the use of their subjects in America; and this led to establishing customhouses, revenue officers, and arbitrary arrests; collisions occurred between British troops in 1770 in New York and in Boston; blood was shed; the tea act followed; the Crown closed the ports of Boston; public meetings were held in all the colonies, and strong resolutions were passed to combine and resist the aggressions of the mother country.

In September, 1774, delegates met in Congress at Philadelphia; a bill of rights was passed and petitions were sent to the Crown for the removal of these grievances; but again they met with disdain. The aggressions of the British troops at Boston in 1775 hastened the call "To arms!" After the British were driven from Boston, in March, 1776, the battle of Long Island was fought, and the British gained the occupancy of New York city.

The Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776, the long war, the many scenes, and active part assumed by New York are more minutely related in general histories.

The struggle lasted until the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, Va., October 19, 1781; a primitive treaty was signed November 30, 1782; and the final, definite treaty was completed and signed September 3, 1783, by which these colonies were free and independent. On the 25th of November following the British troops left New York and sailed for home.

The short, condensed relation of the discovery of the continent; the several grants of the territory comprising the State of New York; the gradual condensation of that title into English possession; and their final quit-claim of all right, title, and interest to the States that gave grants to the original purchasers, has been concisely shown with dates from the best authorities. Nations and provinces, as has been demonstrated, by aggressions in times of peace cause bloodshed; we will mention the last war between our people and Great Britain, and how the latter again attempted to grapple her lost possessions.

THE SENeca INDIANS.

ALTHOUGH much has previously been said in connection with title to the Holland Purchase, concerning the Indians denominated the "Five Nations," it will be well to speak more minutely of the Senecas—the western tribe of this confederacy, and who, by their simple rights, occupied the territory of the "Holland Purchase," and particularly that of Genesee County.

The dim ages of the past offer no rational origin to the aboriginal inhabitants of this territory, and with the shadowy light of their traditions the enlightened world can only speculate as to the beginning. Indeed, it is proven by the only records of the Indians—tradition, from generation to generation—that the territory of Genesee County contains works of which the Indians, who dwelt here when the first white man visited it, have no tradition, showing that at still earlier periods yet another and perhaps more enlightened people may have occupied these same lands. Some mounds seem to have been used as burial-places, and some for defense; they certainly present evidence of no little skill and knowledge of engineering. Without conjecturing as to any earlier people we will return to the Senecas, as found here by the first Europeans. They were muscular, reddish brown, black, straight hair, and beardless. They lived in huts made of barks fastened to poles by withes and thongs, many families often living in one cabin. One of the early Jesuits speaks of finding cabins 40 to 60 feet long "in the Genesee," in which 12 or 14 families were domiciled. They were clothed scantily, with skins; their food was game and fish, and the corn that was raised by the female portion of he tribe; their weapons were the bow and arrow, and tomahawk. Their fondness for paints and gaudy ornaments upon their persons was only equalled by their showy rites and ceremonies.

The chiefs seemed to be the law-makers, and their office was inherited or constituted by supreme acts of daring. Polygamy existed, but among the Senecas was not so common as among other tribes. No public punishment for crime seemed to be enforced by their ideas of law, but justice was meted out by private vengeance, and if the ends of justice were met retaliation stopped. Their religious ceremonies were simple and full of reverence; they worshiped a great spirit, feared the evil spirit (which was a less powerful brother of the good spirit), and strove to go to the "Happy Hunting-Grounds" after death; when the burial took place food and weapons were buried with the remains to help the dead on their way.

In war the Senecas were of the bravest, and tradition tells of their conquests among the Eries, Miamas, and tribes of the southwest; it is thought that the "Five Nations," of which the Senecas held the western door, had carried their conquests to the Gulf of Mexico. They scalped their dead enemies, which was done by seizing the hair on the top of the head with the left hand, cutting the scalp around in a circle with the right, and suddenly jerking the skin from the skull. The greatness of the warrior's exploits was measured by the number of the scalps in his wigwam.

The earthworks, still visible within the limits of the county, are thought to be the fortifications of a race earlier than the Senecas, who held undisturbed possession of the virgin soil when first visited by the whites; still they may have been thrown up by their ancestors, generations before, and the tradition lost by vicissitudes of war. Oakfield has an ancient enclosure, and it has been the most distinctly preserved through the lapse of time of any in the county; northeast of this is another called by writers "bone fort," for it seemed to be the receptacle of the bones of their slain; plenty of arrowheads and simple instruments of war and for domestic uses have been found in and around these works. Two miles north of Le Roy, at Fort Hill, upon a peninsula formed by Fordham's Brook and Allen's Creek,—high land, and most advantageous for defense,—are the remains of another earthwork of mound and ditch, indicating that in generations past the aborigines were necessarily skilled in war. They were implacable in war and generous in friendship, torturing by the most barbarous cruelties a portion of their captives, and adopting others with every evidence of family and tribal affection. Mary Jemison, whose history is so familiar to the citizens of the whole Holland Purchase as a captive member of the Senecas, would not return to her white relatives when urged by her brother. The trails of the Senecas were the chosen routes for public roads in later days, evincing undoubted taste in civil engineering.

As is stated in the general history the Senecas quit-claimed their right, title, and interest to the lands of the Holland Purchase and Morris Reserve, and in return received stipulated sums and annuities; they also reserved lands sufficient for their habits of life, which is also mentioned and described, and to these they retired where the remnant of the once powerful tribe resides. What is true of the Senecas applies to other tribes of the confederacy. They have degenerated from their savagery, have become more or less imbued with ideas of civilization, are protected by the laws, and in time will live only in the "white man's written history."

Red Jacket.—"This great orator was always bitter against everything pertaining to the white race, except whisky, and never became reconciled to the criminal law of the white man. He could not understand the justice of the law that would punish an offender by as long an imprisonment for stealing a trifling article as a larger one. It happened that an Indian was indicted at Batavia for burglary in breaking and entering the house of Joseph Ellicott, and stealing some article of trifling value, the punishment for which was a sentence of imprisonment for life. At the same time a white man, who had stolen a larger amount than the Indian, but without the accompaniment of burglary, was sentenced to only a few years imprisonment. Red Jacket with his chiefs attended the trial, for the purpose of rendering what aid he could to his unfortunate brother. The proof was clear and a verdict of guilty followed the trial. When the prisoner was arraigned for sentence, and the usual question pronounced, why the sentence of the law should not be pronounced, Red Jacket, who had been watching the proceedings with intense interest, asked permission to speak in behalf of the prisoner. The request being granted, he rose with his usual dignity, and boldly questioned the jurisdiction of the court, and asserted the independence of his nation. He contended that the Senecas were allies, not the subjects, of the whites; that his nation had laws for the punishment of theft; and that the offender in the present case ought to be delivered up to them, to be tried according to the usages and suffer according to the laws of his own people.
"His manner on the occasion was particularly fine for him, but his argument was not sufficiently powerful to avert the sentence, which was pronounced in due form. The orator was dissatisfied with the result. Estimating the measure of delinquency by the pecuniary loss he could not perceive the justice of incarcerating a man for life, who had stolen a few spoons of small value, when another offender, who had stolen a horse, was sentenced to but a few years imprisonment.

"After the proceedings were over, in passing from the court-house to the inn, in company with a group of lawyers, Red Jacket discerned upon the sign of a printing office the arms of the State, with the emblematical representation of Liberty and Justice emblazoned in large figures and characters. The chieftain stopped, and pointing to the figure of Liberty asked in broken English, 'What him call?' He was answered, 'Liberty.' 'Ugh!' was the significant and truly aboriginal response. Then pointing to the other figure he inquired, 'What him call?' He was answered, 'Justice,' to which, with a kindling eye, he instantly replied, by asking, 'Where him live now?'

One of the highest of the arts of war shown by the Five Nations was the placing of the Mohawks at the east door of their "Long House," as their name Ho-de-no saw-nee implied, and the Senecas at the west—the two strongest tribes of the confederacy.

Indian burial-grounds.—The following is a copy of a letter written July 26, 1845, by D. E. Walker, who was a teacher of a select school in Batavia from about 1840 to 1848. This letter was written to Mr. Schoolcraft, author of Schoolcraft's Notes on the Iroquois:

"MR. SCHOOLCRAFT, Dear Sir: I have visited the mound on Dr. Nolton's farm (about one and a half miles up Tonnawanda Creek). . . . I think it about 50 yards from the creek, and elevated some eight feet above the general level of the ground. A similar one is found about two miles south of this, upon high ground, of circular form, and has a radius of about one rod. They were discovered about 30 or 40 years since. Nothing has been discovered in them save human bones. . . .

"On some two miles beyond the second was discovered a burial-ground. At that place were ploughed up shell, bone, or quill beads. Near this place was found a brown earthen pot, standing between the roots of a large tree (maple, I think), and with a small sapling grown into it some six inches in diameter. Beads of shell, bone, or porcupine quill have often been found. . . . There is also a ridge at the termination of high ground. I say ridge; it appeared to me a regular fortification. It is, I should judge, from 30 to 45 feet in length. It would appear that the ground was dug down from some distance back and wheeled (?) to the termination of high ground, until a bank is thrown up to a height of some 15 or 20 feet. This ridge some think to be natural; others, from the fact that a smooth stone about the size of a pestle was found in it, think it to be artificial. . . . All I could learn (and I rode about seven miles out of my way to converse with an old inhabitant) was that this pestle was found in the ridge, and within three or four feet of the surface. We may perhaps infer something from the size of an under-jaw found here, which is said to have been so large as to much more than equal that of the largest face in the country.

Respectfully,

"D. E. Walker."

Ancient works.—This county is peculiarly noted for its ancient earthworks, which remain the most perfect of any in the State. Oakfield township, just west of Caryville, has an enclosure upon which the eye of the white man may gaze and well wonder to what manner of people the architects belonged. It is situated on the western slope of one of those billowy hills so common there, and is washed on the north by a stream making a high bank, showing an artificial grade. The trench surrounding the works is yet in places visible, showing a vast work and no uncommon engineering skill. Ancient lodges have been traceable to those who visited it years ago, and the usual supply of broken pottery. It has gateways plainly visible, and was no doubt the stronghold of the ancient Senecas when the Eries, Miamas, etc., from the southwest, invaded their territory. The "bone fort," a large enclosure a mile or more northeast of the first, was also built up in the customs of the past, and by some aboriginal tenants of this territory. Since the settlement of the county by the whites the remains of these enclosures have gradually disappeared; at the present time but little remains to mark the spot of the "bone fort," while during the first years of the present century the enclosure contained a mound of bones six feet high, and 30 feet broad at its base.

At Le Roy, three miles north of the village, is other evidence of note. The work occupies a high bank, or table-land, bounded by Fordham’s Brook and Allen’s Creek, which effect a junction here. The peninsula is now high and with steep banks by the long action of the streams upon the strata of lime and sandstone. The fortification is about 1,300 feet from north to south, and 2,000 feet across its broadest part, narrowing to 1,000 at its neck connecting it with the general table-land. There is a trace of an embankment and ditch about 1,500 feet in length across the broad part, east and west, and either are two or three feet in height or depth. Skeletons and pottery used to be found here; also pipes, beads, arrowheads, etc. Heaps of small stones were discovered in the enclosure, which seemed to indicate they were used by the ancients as missiles of protection. Nothing definite can be concluded as to the architects of these different forts, whether the Senecas, or another tribe before their occupation of the soil, were the builders. In 1788 Rev. Samuel Kirkland, missionary to the Seneca Indians, visited these forts or enclosures, and has left a description of the very perfect condition in which he found them at that date. But no historian has gleaned any evidence from the traditions of the Senecas that the race found here were the builders.

Antiquities of Batavia. — Prior to the advent of Joseph Ellicott, and the survey of the Holland Land Company, what is now Batavia was nothing but a favorite stopping-place and large camp-ground of the Senecas, situated on the Wa-a-given-ne-go, or great Indian trail, traversing the State from the Hudson River to Lake Erie. The locality of this camping-place was on the north side of the Ta-na-wun-da (swift water) Ga-hun-da (creek), and in immediate proximity to the bridge at the head of Walnut street. It occupied a space of some two or three acres, extending from the court-house to the old land office. Its area was a grassy plat devoid of trees, and contained a large natural spring opposite the land office, which is still in use. In the Indian dialect this camp-ground was called De on-go-wah (the grand hearing-place)

The trail mentioned above was a well-beaten or deeply-trodden path through the forest, about one foot wide, and worn from three to six inches in depth. Crossing the Gen-nis-ye-ho (beautiful valley), near Avon, it continued west until it reached the old Roswell Graham farm, about two miles east of the court-house. There, to avoid the Mount Lucy ponds and marsh in that vicinity, it bore off in a southwesterly direction, across the county fair grounds, Levi Otis’s farm, etc., and came out on the east bank of the creek near the residence of A. S. Pratt, and within a few rods of the “great bend of the Tonawanda Creek.” Circling this bend, and continuing on high ground, it nearly followed the line of what is now part of Jackson and Chestnut streets; then near the banks of the creek via the camp-ground, to where the State arsenal now stands. Here the trail bore off northwest, through the oak openings, to the village of Caryville. In addition to this a summer trail, or cut off, was likewise in use when the state of the ground would permit, viz., from the Graham farm, following our present Main street, to the camp-ground and spring. Why is this place called “the bend?” The Tonawanda Creek is a very tortuous stream. Between the villages of Batavia and Alexander, by the highway, is eight miles; but were a person to follow the meanderings of the creek he would travel nearly 23 miles. Flowing from the south, in a circuitous direction, the stream reaches its extreme easternmost point within the limits of the village plat. Here a large bend, or turn, occurs, and thereafter a westerly course is pursued. This, also, is the greatest or longest bend during the entire length of the creek. Hence the "bend" was designated for this locality, as is noticed elsewhere.

GENESEE COUNTY, 1795-1800.

The following extracts are from the pen of the versatile writer, David Seaver, of New York city, (to whom we are indebted for favors,) contributing to the columns of The Spirit of the Times in 1874; and referring to a work to which he had access, describing the journey of one Rochefoucauld Liancourt, a Frenchman, in 1795, from Philadelphia to Niagara Falls, through Western New York, says, after encountering the celebrated chief Red Jacket:

"The road from Ontario to Canawago (Canawaugus) is a good one for this country, but as usual it leads through the midst of the woods, and within a space of 12 miles we saw only one habitation. In this journey we discovered two Indians lying under a tree; though we had seen a considerable number of them, yet this meeting had for us an attraction of novelty, as we found them in a state of intoxication which scarcely manifested the least symptoms of life. One wore around his neck a long and heavy silver chain, from which a large medallion was suspended; on one side whereof was the image of George Washington, and on the other the motto of Louis XIV., nec pluribus impar, with the figure of the sun, which was usually displayed with it in the French army. This Indian, no doubt, was his excellency in a ditch, out of which we made repeated efforts to drag him, but in vain."

"Canawago is a small town, the inhabitants few, but Mr. Berry keeps there one of the best inns we have seen for some time."

"Wednesday, June 17th, 1795. After remaining half a day at Canawago, we at length set out to traverse the deserts, as they are called. A journey through uninterrupted forests offers but little matter for speculation or remark; the woods are in general not close, but stand on fruitful soil. The route is a footpath, tolerably good upon the whole, but in some places very miry; winding through the forests over a level ground that rises but seldom into gentle swells. After a ride of 12 hours, in which we have crossed several large creeks (Oatka and Black), we arrived at Big Plains (Oakfield), which is 38 miles distant from Canawago. We breakfasted at Buttermilk Fall (Le Roy), and dined on the bank of the Tonawaugos (Batavia), and for both these meals our appetites were so keen that perhaps we never eat anything with a better relish."

Liancourt next describes his visit to the tribe of Indians settled at Tonawago. In another article to the Batavia Spirit of the Times Mr. Seaver gives extracts from a work of John Maule, published in London, wherein the author gives his experiences of a visit in 1800, following nearly the same route taken by Liancourt in 1795. The author (Maule) was an English gentleman. In August, 1800, Mr. Maule spent several days in the locality of Genesee Falls (now Rochester). He speaks of In dian Allan's mill at that point, and mentions Colonel Fish (grandfather of the late Eli H. Fish, of Batavia), who at that time was the only resident. Upon leaving the falls he proceeded to the Indian village of Canawaugus (then a mile or so west of what is now Avon), where he found the chief ruler to be Hot Bread, or Ga-kwa da, who was a warrior between 60 or 70 years of age, and sported a beard two inches long. His mother was the royal princess Can-a-wau-gus, from whom the village was named. "She can be proved to be at least 120 years old, and yet is able to walk about and plant her own maize." "She lives surrounded by 40 of her children, grandchildren, etc., and some of the latter old enough to be grandparents."

August 20, 1800, he proceeded on his journey, "accompanied by Hot Bread, who was mounted on a nag, whose ears were rimmed and tipped with silver." After passing Peterson's Big Spring (Caledonia) he arrived at Ganson's (LeRoy), 297 miles, at 11 A. M., and the following entry is made:

"When my friend L. passed this place last year, Ganson's was a solitary house in the wilderness, but it is now in the midst of a flourishing township, in which 21 families are already settled. A new tavern and a number of dwelling houses are building. Two hundred and ninety-eight miles; recross Allen's Creek; the bed a flat limestone rock, 15 or 20 rods wide, with three or four inches of water; a handsome bridge was building. This creek is the western terminus of Capt. Williamson's purchase (Pultney tract). A very handsome road four rods wide has been cut, and the whole distance from Genesee River to Ganson's being 12 miles in nearly a straight line. I now entered into what is called the Wilderness, but at 2 P. M. reached the Holland Company's storehouse and Frederick Walther's tavern (Stafford), 304¼ miles.

"The Holland Company consists of a number of merchants and others, principally residents in Holland, who purchased a very large tract of land of Mr. Morris. This territory, for such it may be called, is on the east bounded by Williamson's purchase, and on the west by Lake Erie and Niagara River. No part of the land is, I believe, yet settled, but at present under survey for that purpose. One of the principal surveyors and his gang were at the tavern, and fully occupied the lodging hut; this, with the additional circumstance of there being no hay for my horses, and no other feed than oats, cut green in the straw, induced me to give up the design of sleeping here this night, but rather to push on to the next station. At 4 P. M. we left Walther's, and at 309 miles (Batavia) fell in with the Tonawauette Creek, sluggish, shallow, and broad. At 6½ P. M. we reached Garret Davis's tavern, 316 miles (Winan's farm near Dunham's Corners), near a small run of good water. This is one of those three stations which the Holland Company has this year established for the accommodation of travelers, who hitherto have been obliged to sleep in the woods. Davis first began to ply his axe in January last; he has now a good log house, a field of green oats, sown 18th of June (the only feed I could get for my horses), and a very excellent garden, the most productive of any of its size I have seen since leaving New York. He had also cleared a pretty extensive field for wheat. On this land the logs were now burning, and I passed a greater part of the night in making up the fires. This employment I preferred to harbouring with a number of strangers, one of whom was sick and not expected to live till morning. This, however, was only the fearful conjecture of Davis. I got some maple sugar for my tea, and Mr. and Mrs. Davis paid me every possible attention, but I cannot praise them for neatness. Perhaps I ought not to expect it when the peculiarity of the situation and a large family of children are taken into account. From Allen's Creek to Walther's was excellent lands, but miserable roads, at times impassable, and the wagoner would take his axe to cut a new passage. From Walther's to Davis's the road is better. At Davis's the woods are composed of small tall, saplings, closely crowded. This morning we experienced a very keen frost with a bright sun, and so late as 11 A.M. I stood in the sun to warm myself, my hands being benumbed with the cold. Very scorching sun in the afternoon after leaving Walther's, and troublesome flies and mosquitoes.

"Thursday, August 21, 1800. Start at daylight, 318 miles; we leave the thick woods and enter upon the Big Plains. These plains (Oakfield) are open groves of oak, in a light shallow soil on limestone. These plains are many miles in extent, and it struck me I had seen park grounds in England much like them. At 321 miles the oaks are smaller and more compact, and at 322 miles we enter woods of beech and maple. At 7½ A.M. we reached the Indian town of Tonawauette, 330 miles. This settlement is on the west bank of the creek, which I now crossed for the second time. It bore, however, a different character here than at 319 miles (Batavia), being clear and rapid.

"Left Tonawauette and passed through open plains of oak with less of tamarisk and more grass to 334 miles, where I fell in with the old road. At 10½ A.M. reached Ransom's station, distance 344 miles (Clarence, Erie County). I was here greatly surprised with an excellent breakfast of tender chicken and good loaf sugar for my tea. Ransom, like Davis, sat down in the woods in January; he has 150 acres, ten acres cleared and in oats. The Holland Company has laid out a new road from Ganson's to Buffalo Creek, which passes to the south of Davis's station, but falls in with the present road at Ransom's, and this new road will make a difference of 10 miles in 42. Ransom informed me that by an account, he had kept, no less than 155 families with their wagons have passed his house this summer, emigrating from Pennsylvania and New Jersey to Canada. Sixteen wagons passed in one day."

TITLE TO THE LANDS.

In a satisfactory manner every shade of the title to the territory of Genesee County has been given in the general history preceding; but a few words of summary will here place the link in the chain of facts.

There are no lands in the State of New York that has or can have better title to the soil than has the Holland Purchase and Morris Reserve, of which Genesee County is a part. In 1697 a memorial by commissioners of trade and plantations relative to the right of the Crown to the sovereignty of the Five Nations says:

"Those nations by many acts, acknowledgments, submissions, leagues, and agreements had been united to, or depended on, the colony of New York."
In 1684, when De la Barre, governor of Canada, commenced an invasion of the territory of the Five Nations, Governor Dongan, of New York, warned the French official that the Indians were the subjects of the King of England, who had sent the Duke of York arms to be set up in every one of the Indians' castles as far as O-ney-gra (Niagara). This was done and the French governor retired. Charles II. granted the province of New York to the Duke of York after the submission and subjection of the Indians therein—when they were lawful subjects. This was the foundation of the claim of sovereignty over the Indians.

In 1768 the proper State authorities agreed that a line running north along the eastern borders of Broome and Chenango counties, to a point seven miles west of Rome, should be a boundary line over which the white man should not settle without the consent of the Indian.

In the Revolution the Iroquois espoused the cause of the mother country,—employed by the British to help subdue the revolting provinces,—and most cruelly did they wage their savage warfare against the people of their own State who had so often protected them. At the close of the war, when England quit-claimed all her right and title to the colonies, the territory belonged to the United States, and the Iroquois could and should have been dispossessed of all their rights in New York; but the proper legal authorities ceded to them all that portion of the State west of the preemption line except the mile-strip along Niagara River. Afterwards Phelps and Gorham and Robert Morris purchased the lands, obtaining the title from the Indians, also by deed; Robert Morris and wife sold to the Holland Land Company, to the Connecticut School Fund, to Cragie, and others; and these became the grantors of the settlers. The wars, encroachments, and full particulars of the title as related in the general history will be read with additional interest after this summary.

Previously we have shown the foundation of the English claim to the sovereignty of the entire territory of the Six Nations, or Iroquois, and how they maintained and repeatedly asserted it up to the time of the Revolution. The first compromise to be recorded between the whites of the province of New York and the Iroquois was in 1768. The encroachments of the settlers upon their hunting-grounds in Central New York caused uneasiness to the Indians, to allay which a council was held that year at Fort Stanwix (now Rome, N. Y.) to agree upon a line west of which settlements were not to be permitted. The line defined was along the eastern boundary of Broome and Chenango counties, and the Indians agreed to surrender to the United States all captives and relinquish all claims to the country lying west of a line starting four miles east of the mouth of Niagara River, following the river by a line four miles east, southerly to Buffalo Creek, thence to the Pennsylvania line, thence to the Ohio River.

The Iroquois, during the Revolution, were more or less the allies of the English,—opposed to the colonies,—and when the struggle ceased were
you had forfeited all rights to their territory in New York and could have been driven out; but the magnanimity of the government was shown when, in 1784,—16 years after the other council,—a proper council met at Stanwix (Rome) and recognized the ownership of the Indians to the western part of the State of New York—all the territory between the line mentioned on the east and the line four miles from Niagara River; and it is well to mention here that this last line was afterwards made one mile from the river.

The charters given by the Crown to its favorite individuals, and to companies in general terms and from imperfect, unknown ideas of the extent of the territory, often conveyed parts of the same, laying the foundation for conflicting claims. For instance, the grant of the province of New York to the Duke of York,—mentioned in former pages,—extended to the Connecticut River, covering a portion of Massachusetts; also in the charter to the Plymouth Company was a portion of the same territory, and both charters covered territory extending indefinitely westward.

In 1781 New York relinquished to the United States her claim to all territory west of the western boundaries of the State; and Massachusetts in 1785 relinquished her claim to the same western lands, contenting herself with claiming that part of New York west of the so-called preemption line. This preemption line was to be run for the purpose, was to begin on the Pennsylvania line and run due north to Lake Ontario, and is easily found now upon any correct map of the State as forming the east boundary line of Steuben County, running north through Schuyler, through the east edge of Yates, through the foot of Seneca Lake, forming the eastern boundary of Ontario, and through Wayne County to the lake.

New York asserted her claim to this same tract, west of preemption line, and in December, 1786, commissioners from the two States met at Hartford to settle this difference; it was agreed that the ownership of the lands in dispute be with Massachusetts, the sovereignty with New York, and that the Indians hold and possess it as long as they chose. The first right to purchase this land of the Indians was given to Massachusetts; hence this east boundary line was called "preemption line." New York retained the right to the ownership of the one-mile strip along the Niagra River.

In 1788 Oliver Phelps and Nathaniel Gorham, citizens of that State, bargained with the State of Massachusetts for its preemption right to all lands west of the preemption line, for $1,000,000, to which the purchasers must extinguish the Indian title; they were to pay the amount in three annual payments, in certain securities of the State, then worth about one-fifth its face value. In July, 1788, Mr. Phelps met the Indians in council at Buffalo and purchased their interest in 2,600,000 acres, as estimated, for $5,000 down and a perpetual annuity of $500. The boundary of the tract which the Indians relinquished to Phelps and Gorham was as follows: on the east by the preemption line, north by Lake Ontario, south by the State of Pennsylvania, and west by a line that should commence in the north line of Pennsylvania due south of the confluence of Canaseraga Creek with the Genesee River, thence north on that line to the confluence, thence northerly along the Genesee River to a point two miles north of Canawagus (Avon), thence due west 12 miles, thence northerly 12 miles from the river to the lake. On the 21st of November, following, the tract above described was deeded to Phelps and Gorham, and has been since known as "the Phelps and Gorham purchase."

A land office for the sale of townships and tracts had been opened at Canandaigua, and sales were brisk; many townships were settled in 1788, and the influx of colonies in 1789 and 1790 to this then wilderness region, as given by Turner in his History of the Holland Purchase, forms a remarkable page of history.

We hear of the "Pultney estate" lands intermingled; let us explain it. On November 18, 1790, Phelps and Gorham sold to Robert Morris (the financier of the Revolution) the residue of their purchase unsold, amounting to about 1,200,000 acres, reserving two townships; for this Mr. Morris paid £30,000 New York currency, and at once sold the same to Sir William Pultney, John Hornly, and another for £35,000 sterling. These lands were scattered over the original Phelps and Gorham purchase, and the reader will see why the "Pultney estate" had its land offices.

Before Messrs. Phelps and Gorham had half paid for their purchase from Massachusetts the securities of the State had risen to par, and, finding they should be unable to fulfill their agreement, they induced the State to resume its right to that portion of New York which they had not yet obtained from the Indians, which the State of Massachusetts did; this left that State the preemption right to all Western New York west of the Genesee River and western boundary line of Phelps and Gorham's purchase; and this agreement was consummated March 10, 1791.

In March, 1791, Robert Morris contracted with Massachusetts for the preemption right to all of the territory of New York west of the purchase of Phelps and Gorham, and it was not until after much difficulty and delay that he completed his title; he met a council of Indians at Genesee in September, 1797, who surrendered their interest to the entire territory, except 11 reservations for their own use, amounting to about 338 square miles. These, in brief, are the reservations, as it will be of interest to the younger readers of Genesee County: the Tuscarora reservation, of one square mile, east of Lewiston; the Tonawanda, of 17 square miles, both sides of the creek; the Buffalo, of 130, both sides of the Buffalo Creek; the Cattaraugus, of 42 square miles, each side of that creek on Lake Erie; the Allegany, of 42 square miles, on each side of that river; the Oil Spring reservation, of one square mile, between Allegany and Cattaraugus counties; the Canadea reservation, of 16 square miles, along the Genesee River; the Gardeau reservation, of 28 square miles, near Mt. Morris; the Squakie Hill reservation, of two square miles, north of Mt. Morris; Little Beard's and Big Tree reservations, of four square miles, near Genesee; and the Canawaugus reservation, of two square miles, west of Avon.

On the 11th of May, 1791, the State of Massachusetts deeded to Robert Morris the whole of said land in five deeds, briefly as follows:

1st. A strip 12 miles wide, beginning on the Pennsylvania line 12 miles from Phelps and Gorham's southwest corner, and running north to Lake Ontario, containing about 500,000 acres.

2d. A strip 16 miles wide, beginning and running in the same manner to Lake Ontario.

3d. Another 16-mile strip, next west of the last, and to be run in same way.

4th. All the land contained within another line to be run 16 miles from the last due north to Lake Ontario.

5th. This last deed included all the land owned by Massachusetts, in this State, west of the last described tract.

The last four tracts were estimated to contain 3,300,000 acres, and this concluded the title of all the available lands of Western New York, west of that of Phelps and Gorham, in Robert Morris. Mr. Morris retained the land set forth in the first deed to sell as he chose, and it was called the "Morris Reserve."

On December 24, 1792, Robert Morris and his wife deeded to Hermon Le Roy and John Linklaen 1,500,000 acres west of the strip 12 miles wide that Mr. Morris reserved. February 27, 1793, he gave a deed for 1,000,000 acres to these persons and Gerrit Boon. July 20, 1793, he conveyed to the same three parties 800,000 acres. July 20, 1793, he conveyed to Hermon Le Roy, William Bayard, and Matthew Clarkson 300,- 000 acres, and these four deeds conveyed all the land west of the Morris Reserve, except the reservations previously mentioned. These individuals purchased for others who were aliens and could not hold real estate in this State; but the legislature of 1798 removed this restriction and the trustees turned over the property to the actual owners. There were several gentlemen who became the owners of this vast tract of territory, and who were known as the "Holland Land Company." The tract covered the present counties of Niagara (except the mile-strip along the river), Erie, Chautauqua, Cattaraugus, the two western ranges of towns in Allegany, and all of the counties of Wyoming, Genesee, and Orleans except the eastern ranges of towns in each, which are east of the "east transit line," and in the Morris Reserve.

Our younger readers must learn that a land office is a place opened for the sale of the lands of any particular tract, and is called by the name of its territory; there is always found the agent assisted by an efficient corps of clerks; such offices are discontinued when the affairs connected with the tract are completed.

The land office of the Holland Purchase was opened at Batavia in 1801, and discontinued in 1837. It was opened at Ransom's Corners (now in Erie County), and in 1802 an office was built at Batavia, in the forks of the road and facing the east. This spot afterwards became the center of the flourishing village of Batavia, and Joseph Ellicott was its founder.

The first treaty by Robert Morris with the Indians, which was to get their title to the lands he had sold to the Holland Land Company, was in 1797. Joseph Ellicott, the first occupant of the land office, was present. He came from Philadelphia on horseback, by Wilkesbarre, Tioga Point, Elmira, Bath, Dansville, and down the Canaseraga Creek and Genesee River to Geneseo, where the treaty was held. While here in the Genesee country he made all the arrangements for the survey of the vast territory, returning the following February on horseback.

In May, 1798, Joseph Ellicott came into the Purchase to open up the lands and arrange for its sale in parcels; he came on horseback to Avon, thence to Buffalo. The stores for the surveyors' and land office use were sent from Philadelphia in April, 1798, and were sent in bateaux to New York, up to Albany, up the Mohawk to Wood Creek, thence to Oswego River, down to Lake Ontario, thence to the mouth of Genesee River. Mr. Brisbane, who was in charge, went up the Genesee as far as he could with one load, and the remainder went to Lewiston. Mr. Ellicott was really the founder of prosperity of Genesee County, and was land office and general agent until 1821, when he was succeeded by Jacob S. Otto.

The original intention was first to divide the Holland Company's lands into townships of 16 sections, each one and one-half miles square, sub-dividing into lots each three-quarters mile long and one-quarter wide, each lot being 120 acres. This plan, however, was abandoned, and finally the bulk of the tract was divided into lots three-quarters mile square, or 360 acres each.

The company had a traveling agent named Timothy Backus, who relates the fact that he came upon a man making staves from the company's timber, and to his question, "What are you doing there?" received the reply, "You will never catch me here again." About three months afterwards Mr. Backus passed that way again, and discovered the same trespasser, to whom he said, "I thought you told me, some time ago, that I'd never catch you here again." "Well, now, look here," said the stovemaker, "after you've heard my story you'll never say a word. In the first place I steal my timber, contract with one man to let him have my staves, receive half pay from him, and when done sell them to another man and get full pay, and can't make a living at that!" He was left to do the best he could.

In the summer of 1819 two strong men came to the land office armed with very heavy, long-handled axes, and inquired for Mr. Ellicott. Upon stating their business it was learned that they had heard he had offered 100 acres of land to any two men who would cut down Big Tree. They were ready for the job. They were deeply chagrined to learn that Big Tree was a noted Indian chief at Geneseo, and it was plain that some joker had imposed upon their credulity.
LAND OFFICE NOTES.

Many laughable scenes transpired that were no part of the land office records, but are handed down as pleasant recollections of the times. An Irishman came one day to purchase a piece of land, but had forgotten the lot and township; as he left the office he said, "Well, Mr. Landlord you will plaze kape it till I find out what land it is, wont you?"

Agencies were established about 1812 to accommodate settlers, where they could deliver wheat and cattle and have the amount endorsed on their debts for land; this was a bad policy for the company, but very pleasing to settlers.

In 1802 a relative of Mr. Ellicott's from Maryland was very solicitous about his social relations, and wrote thus:

"I observe thee says thou art living without society, that thy nearest neighbor is 10 miles. Pray, can a person be justifiable in spending the few years he has to live in a way that is not the most agreeable to him? Think on this and retire from that toilsome life thou hast pursued so long, and enjoy thy few remaining years to the fullest extent."

Mr. Ellicott borrowed a horse to go from Schlosser to Niagara while he was there on business, and in some manner the horse was missing. The owner, knowing he had a good customer, set an exorbitant price on the animal, which Mr. Ellicott had to pay after all efforts to recover the horse had proved ineffectual. He found afterwards that the Tonawanda Indians had need of the animal, and had "confiscated" him.

In February, 1836, a party of anti-renters broke into the land office at Mayville, and purloined the records and burned them. The lands in the southern part of the Holland Purchase had been sold to a trust company, and an office opened there. Word was received at Batavia soon after that the men at Attica and Alexander were about to perpetrate a similar burglary upon the office there. Fifty men were posted in the land office after the records were removed to a place of safety; the bells rang and citizens gathered well armed; the mob several hundred strong appeared in the street near the land office, and halted. The approach of Sheriff Townsend, with 120 men armed with bright, loaded muskets, added to the already formidable force, saved any open attack, and, probably, much bloodshed; for it is a matter of record that if any attempt at violence had been made by the mob they would have been slain by scores at the delivery of the first fire from the sheriff's force and the citizens.

The old stone office is still intact, occupied as a dwelling, and it is hoped sufficient interest will soon be exhibited by the citizens of Batavia to purchase it, and preserve it as a pioneer building, devoted to the storing of relics of bygone days.

ORGANIZATION AND DEVELOPMENT.

In early colonial days all of Western New York was called Tryon County, then Montgomery; after 1788, when the preemption line was agreed upon, the territory west of that was called Ontario; after the western bounds of the Phelps and Gorham purchase were determined, the portion of the State west of it was called Genesee County. The county was established in 1802 as Genesee, embracing what is now eight counties. In 1801 Joseph Ellicott erected the land office of the Holland Land Company at Batavia, and this became the center; its judicious selection on the main Indian trail, and in the direct path of emigration, with its natural advantages and surroundings, has rendered Batavia one of the wealthiest and most beautiful villages of Western New York.

- Allegany, in 1806, with Angelica as capital.
- Niagara, in 1808, with Buffalo as shire town; Lockport county seat in 1821.
- Chautauqua, in 1811, county seat at Maysville.
- Cattaraugus, in 1817, jail and court-house at Ellicottsville.
- Erie, in 1821, erected from Niagara with Buffalo for its shire.
- Orleans, in 1821, county seat at Albion.
- Wyoming, in 1841, with Warsaw for its shire.

Genesee, in its present organization, retains the original county seat,—Batavia,—with history and importance sufficient to almost render it classical. It has been and is the beehive of industry and facts from which those counties and colonies have swarmed.

Prior to the erection of the counties named above Genesee was divided into four townships: Northampton, Leicester, Southampton, and Batavia. Northampton embraced the northern portion of Morris Reserve, Leicester the central portion, and Southampton the southern; Batavia embraced the entire Holland Purchase.

PRESENT ORGANIZATION OF THE COUNTY.

The name Genesee is of Seneca origin, signifying "pleasant valley." The county is divided into 13 townships bearing the names of Alabama, Alexander, Batavia, Bergen, Bethany, Byron, Darien, Elba, Le Roy, OAKFIELD, PAVILION, PEMBROKE, AND STAFFORD. The territory embraced in the towns of Byron, Bergen, Le Roy, Pavilion, and the eastern portion of Stafford is east of the "east transit line," consequently from the Morris Reserve; and the greater and remaining western portion of the county is from the Holland Purchase. All previous history concerning title will apply equally to the Morris Reserve and Holland Purchase.

April 11, 1804, the town of Batavia, which, as has been described, included all the Purchase west of east transit line, was divided into four towns. The one farthest east retained the old name, and included all the territory east of a meridian line from the lake southward that passed through the western part of the present Orleans County; the next town was Willink, which included the territory between Batavia and the west transit line (running through Lockport); the next was Erie, which embraced one tier of townships in the present county of Chautauqua; and the next was Chautauqua, which included the remainder of old Batavia. This was Genesee County of that day; but the rapid settlement of its vast territory, and the development of its unlimited resources, soon called for the formation of other counties and centers, so that in about 1825 the county of Genesee was greatly narrowed in its limits, being 36 miles north and south and 26 east and west, with its county seat, Batavia, only nine miles from its northern boundary. The removal of the county seat to a geographical center, or the formation of a new county, was urged, and the organization of Wyoming was the result. Its present well-chosen and clearly defined outlines will no doubt remain through many generations. It is now 18 miles by 26 east and west, and its county capital could not be removed in any direction to make it more central.

The surface is rolling, generally sloping to the north, and lies principally in the second terrace with the south part in the central district. It was originally covered with heavy timber of every variety, and for salubrity of climate from its peculiar position and richness of soil it may be equalled, but not excelled, in the State. It contains about 219,520 acres.

EARLY SETTLERS AND THEIR EXPERIENCE.

Previous to the war of the Revolution the tide of emigration had commenced its flow from New England, but was arrested by the fear of hostile Indians. After peace was declared the tide again set in for this section. We are told by competent authority that Charles Wilbur settled in Le Roy as early as 1792 and the Gansons in 1798, but the beginning of the present century must be given as the date of the first high tide of immigration.
Perhaps it is sometimes thought by those living in the older settled sections, where comfort and luxury abounds, where refined society and the best educational advantages are clustered, that the pioneer who would enter the dense wilderness to build himself a home, for a long time depriving himself of the pleasures of life, must be an inferior being; but they were of the most determined, independent class, and such spirits in a few years had for themselves the foundation laid for future wealth and greatness. A small log house in some well-selected spot would be rolled up and made comfortable; the furniture scanty, but sufficient; the fare simple, but wholesome.

The first settlements in Genesee County were along the Indian trails, now the course of the principal thoroughfares; but the more enterprising would strike off into the heavy timber, where the sound of his axe could not be heard. Some had bid adieu for a time to the young wife at home, who watched for the return of the sturdy pioneer; after months of solicitude he returns to spend a short time and the better prepared to occupy the cabin in the wilderness with all its discomforts, but cheered by the presence of the wife. The forest now begins to fall under his blows; a patch is burned off and the crop of corn for the next winter's use is planted.

The improvements must be made in the cabin, also, as necessity and health demand; a door must take the place of a blanket, and with axe, nails, hammer, auger and knife, a rude one is made to swing upon its heavy wooden hinges; the wooden latch, with a leather string attached and hanging outside, has given rise to the homely but hospitable saying: "The latch-string is out." A bedstead must be made, too. Holes were bored into the logs in one corner of the cabin, at sufficient height, one end of a stake or pole placed therein, the other supported by a crotch, then poles cut and placed across these, and then thickly covered with a mattress of hemlock boughs; upon blankets over this soft, fragrant, clean bedding our first pioneers and their wives slept the sleep of health and prosperity. Chairs were composed of blocks hewn from basswood, and the legs added to it by the inevitable axe and auger. Tables were often made in the same manner, and with the axe a floor to the cabin when they needed one. The utensils for cooking were rude and few; plates and trenches of wood often served the early pioneers. The ancient "bake kettle" used by the pioneer, an indispensable article of the time, now forgotten nearly, should be perpetuated through all time, in story at least. It was a shallow iron vessel, with legs to raise it the desired height, so a mass of coals could be put under it; then with a cover with turned-up edge to hold the hot coals over the food to be cooked; and it was wonderful how nicely the corn-cake and other bakings could be done. In place of a crane a pole with hooks did service.

This was kitchen, dining room, sitting room, parlor, and bedroom, this one cozy room; and was very often the workshop for making ox-bows and rude sleds preparatory to the logging and summer fallowing for the first crop of winter wheat, a large patch for which had been filled by the industrious pioneer. The rudy blaze of the fire furnished heat and light for culinary and evening work, and the usual rag in a small dish of oil from some wild animal served upon special occasions. Soon a few sheep could pick their living, and the hand-cards and spinning-wheel were heard preparing the cloth for garments. The barks for coloring cloths were well known to the housewife, and the old "dye-tub" that graced every hearth corner in olden time is not forgotten by some of our elder readers to this day.

Nor were the social enjoyments of life entirely ignored, for soon neighbors a mile away, each with his clearing and his family in the woods learned to visit and assist each other; and the settlement with its little store, a few miles away, situated on some main trail, was to be visited occasionally for simple necessaries, and to learn the news that may have been left by passing emigrants. The anticipations of the future was the incentive for all this seeming hardship.

But the crops of the second year are quite extensive; the clearings broaden, the stock has increased; the neighbors are plentier; and the deprivations are far less onerous. If the pioneer was a single man he has passed the winter in his old home with parents, brothers, and sisters, and perfected the arrangements for a companion in the new home. An outfit can be taken to the western home now that a road is cut, and the ox-team and a few household utensils to improve the convenience of the former year. The garden seeds are properly planted, a larger and better prepared piece of corn is planted, many improvements are made, fences are built, and the virgin soil yields abundant harvests. Another cabin has been built for the animals; a mill to do coarse grinding has been erected on the creek three miles away; and the settler finds much time to still clear away the forest even during the winter months, to enable his animals to brouse. The pigs and fowls are fed at the door daily by the wife. The echo of the husband's axe during the day, and the hum of the wife's wheel during the evening, was a happy chorus that was sure to bring prosperity and wealth. Other settlers had come; social evenings passed; no conventionalities were needed; more could be present at logging bees and house raisings; no criticisms; no jealousies nor bickerings.

Stick chimneys plastered with mud have been built; a glass window has taken the place of the greased paper; a log bridge spans the creek near by; a better and more spacious log barn has been prepared for the largely increased stock; the prattle of the first-born gladdens the wife and mother. Still the forest falls, the fields broaden, and plenty abounds.

The tide of immigration has continued; the curling smoke from the "clearings" can be seen near together throughout the vast wilderness; roads have been opened; fences have appeared around the verdant fields and meadows; shouts of merry children are heard; and the once pioneer settlement assumes the high niche of a "rural neighborhood."

TWENTY YEARS' CHANGES.

STILL greater changes have taken place in the time. The old house is the wing of a large, hewed log house, with paneled door and glazed windows. A lawn is in front; a growing, fruitful orchard in the rear; a large barn occupies the site of the log shanty; forests of waving grain stand where the forests of trees were. In sight stands the comfortable log school-house; the peculiar noise of a saw-mill is heard on the stream above; a good bridge spans the stream in place of the logs; the first-born in the full vigor of manhood has driven by to the barn with a load of hay, driving a spirited team in place of the oxen; the matronly lady at the well and the middle-aged, strong man coming from the mill are the young, hopeful couple who dared breast the privations of pioneer life over 20 years ago.

Another 20 years has passed. An elegant mansion stands on the site of the old log house. Its entire surroundings show the wealth and refinement of its owners. The saw-mill has gone; the stream passes under a stone-arched bridge. Only patches of wood land can be seen, and elegant farm houses dot the landscape. In the distance a train of cars speeds over the plain. A tall spire of a church is plainly discerned in the little village beyond. An elderly gentleman is busy with the cattle near the barn; a motherly lady is knitting and listening to the plays of grandchildren. These are the worthy husband and wife, who, over 40 years ago, came to this very spot, and with hopeful hearts engaged to "make the wilderness blossom as the rose." One of the sons manages the farm, and two others have gone West to start in life as their father did.

This, dear reader, is a fair, not overdrawn, painting of the average settler in Genesee County at the commencement of the present century.

CHANGES IN TRADE.

The vast difference between the trade and value of products from the first settlement to the present should be noted. Now, all products have a cash value and a cash market; then, there was not sufficient money or a market for such; now, all the necessaries and luxuries of life are based upon the cash value; then, the potash manufactured from ashes was the only cash article. The little stores of the early day kept only the bare necessaries for the settlers, and at high prices because of transportation: yarn and log chains, pork and tea, tar and molasses, pins and crowbars—everything was kept in a grand chaos. Now, our readers know what a store is without explanation.

Teams hauled the products of this county—after it had been converted into saleable compounds by the old-time asheries and distilleries—to Albany during the first years of trade, bringing in return the goods for the frontier store. In after years the canal opened up new changes, other markets, more and cheaper goods, and better prices for products; and still greater changes have been produced by the railroads. This change, plain to be seen, has been equally operative and beneficial to all branches of trade, and has only kept contemporaneous with the improvements of the settlers of Genesee as they developed the howling wilderness into fruitful fields and thriving villages. All honor to the pioneer settlers of Genesee County of four-score years ago!

Prices sixty years ago.1—"An account book of 1826, or 60 years ago, shows up some of the prices of our ancestors, and gives us food for thought in comparing with the prices of to-day.

"The location was Rochester, N. Y., and the accounts were of a general character. As ladies should always come first I will begin on their goods: Calico, 31 cents per yard; ginghams, 40 cents; flannels, 50 cents; dress silks were from $1 to $3 per yard; ladies' shoes, $1.50 per pair; men's boots from $3 to $5 per pair; ladies' bonnets were then seldom changed in style or fashion, and prices ranged from $1 to $8. Elias Howe, the inventor of sewing machines, was then unheard of, and tailors received for making, coats from 75 cents to $3 each. Pants and vests were each got up in the then prevailing style for from 25 to 50 cents each. The hero of these accounts was then a bachelor some 30 years of age, and several enteries show where 50 cents per dozen

was the price paid for laundry work. Old folks will remember "dickies," a sort of false shirt front, which are in several places charged 40 cents each.
"Of building material, bricks are quoted at $9 per M.; nails, 12 cents per pound;
glass, 8x10 light, 15 cents; lime per bushel, 15 cents; hauling with team per day, $75. Laborers' wages were 40 to 60 cents per day. Stone masons, brick layers, and carpenters are in several places, in the book, credited with work at $1.50 per day Board for workingmen nine cents per meal, or $1.75 per week. Smoked hams were seven cents per pound, fresh beef four cents, fresh pork three and one-half cents; mutton by the quarter, 22 cents; butter, 15 cents; eggs, 12½ cents per dozen; potatoes, 25 cents per bushel; coffee, 20 cents; tea, Young Hyson, $1.40 per pound; rice, six cents; sugar, seven cents; molasses, 40 cents per gallon; maple molasses and sugar were quoted at about the same price; salt, 70 cents per bushel; 'locofoco' matches, 25 cents per box, for about as many as are now sold for three cents, and very few appeared to be sold as tinder and steel were relied on for fire. Why the matches were called 'locofoco' I have never understood, but presume some of our old grandsires could tell. Coal for fuel was not then used, and four-foot cord wood is in several places charged for at $1 per cord. Cooking stoves were then just coming in use of the 'horseblock' pattern, and cost $18 each. Corn was 65 cents per bushel. Flour fluctuated from $4 to $10 per barrel, but the average was nearer the former price. Tobacco sold at 40 cents per pound, and cigars appear to have been unknown, at least none are charged. Whisky—not our modern tanglefoot, but good—was 35 cents per gallon. Santa Cruz, Jamaica, Porto Rico, and various kinds of rum were from 50 to $1 per gallon. 'Black strap,' a favorite old-time beverage, commanded $1 per gallon, and was the favorite tipple for 'general training day,' as the day for general muster of State militia was called, and which in those days was a roaring farce. Among the items of the spring of 1827 is one as follows: 'Rev. William Patterson, Cr.: By service at wedding, $5,' and about the same time Mr. Patterson is charged 'One hat, $5,' from which it is presumed that these were the ruling prices for these necessities of life. Money was of gold, silver, and paper as to-day, but was very scarce, and 'barter or trade' was mostly used in traffic. Only the larger cities and towns had their own newspapers, and news was stale. Postage on letters was 12½, 18½, or 55 cents per letter, according to the distance carried, and stamps were unknown for nearly 20 years after. At the option of the sender postage on letters could be prepaid or not; and right here one of the most highly esteemed old ladies of this country one day received notice of a letter with '25 cents due,' that was held in the postoffice for her. Not having the money she herself killed and skinned a calf, selling the hide to a tanner for 25 cents to redeem the letter.'

WAR OF 1812.

The State of New York, particularly the middle and western portions, after the treaty of peace in 1783 had become settled; the Indian title had been extinguished; villages, settlements, and post roads had become established, which will be fully taken up further on. The War of 1812 was of vital importance to the State of New York, for its northern borders were the frontiers, and its settlers were compelled to defend their homes, and especially were the occupants of the Holland Purchase.
The aggressions of Great Britain, for years after peace was declared, was a subject of anxiety to our government, and notwithstanding the strict neutrality observed by the States during the war between England and France the British government was guilty of many overt acts; but not until American vessels were searched by British men-of-war, and American subjects forced into service regardless of law and justice, did the States remonstrate. The continuation of such indignities caused the declaration of war against Great Britain, June 19, 1812. This measure was not fully sanctioned by the people; the Federal party were opposed to it, and but a small portion of the Democratic party favored it; it was not from political prejudice so much, they claimed, but because the country was so poorly prepared.

The invasion of Canada was deemed expedient by the administration, and preparations were made accordingly by posting forces along the frontier from Plattsburgh to Detroit.

The proclamation of President Madison was announced June 19, 1812. Express riders carried the news which reached Gen. Lewis at Fort Niagara and Col. Swift at Black Rock on the 26th of June. The news was not long in reaching the various settlements of the pioneers on the Purchase. Up to this time their struggle to make a home had been a severe one, but now all preparations of clearing the farm and raising crops were suspended; some prepared to leave their homes and bent their faces eastward.

As there were at this time not 1,000 men under arms on the Niagara frontier, in pursuance of an act of Congress the governor of the State ordered a draft of militia, but generally the military force was composed of volunteers. On the 10th of July there were about 3,000 men comprising the force on the frontier. Gen. Amos Hall was placed in command, and in the spring of 1813 the force was augmented somewhat by the assistance of Red Jacket (who for once cast his influence in favor of the United States) and his warriors.

We do not intend to enter into detail all the transactions of this war; only to make such references to it as most directly concerns the territory comprised within the then settlements of the Holland Purchase.

As a result of the disasters to our forces by the capture of Fort Niagara the Niagara frontier was desolated. Those Indians (who had allied themselves with the English) plundered, burned, and massacred without restraint. The towns of Niagara and Lewiston, and the village of the friendly Indians at Tuscarora, were laid in ashes. Governor
Tompkins, on being informed of the removal of the regular troops from the Niagara frontier, on the 27th of November gave orders for the assembling of sufficient bodies of militia to supply the places of those under General McClure, who had charge of the defense of the Niagara frontier. Owing to delays incident to such operations they failed of arriving until after the capture of Niagara, and the destruction of the frontier below the falls. General Hall, commanding the western division of militia, had assembled at Buffalo and Black Rock 2,000 men. The enemy attacked on the night of the 29th; the militia were ordered out to repel the attack, but they fled at the approach of the enemy without firing a gun. One small regiment alone attempted to cope with the British, but without avail. Thus the flourishing villages of Black Rock and Buffalo, as well as the neighboring settlements, were deserted, and fell a prey to the British and Indians. General Hall retired with the remains of his dispersed militia to Eleven Mile Creek, where he was able to collect only about 300 troops. With these he preserved a show of resistance, to cover the flying inhabitants and check the advances of the enemy. All the flourishing villages and settlements on the Niagara, between the lakes, and to a considerable distance in the rear, were laid in ashes; the Indians were let loose upon the flying inhabitants, and hundreds of them were overtaken and massacred. The frontier presented one scene of universal desolation. The miserable inhabitants who escaped the Indian tomahawk fled to the interior, without shelter or means of support, in the depth of winter, and subsisted on the charity of their friends. More than 200 houses, with an immense value of property, were pillaged and destroyed, and the wretched inhabitants and owners reduced to poverty. General Hall retired to Batavia, 50 miles in the rear of Niagara, where he was enabled to collect 1,800 militia for the protection of the public stores and the defense of those settlements which had escaped desolation.

Turner says:

"Batavia became the headquarters, the final rallying point, of small remnants of an army; a halting-place for the fleeing, homeless, houseless citizens of the frontier, to the extent of the capacity of all the tenements in the village and neighborhood. The most valuable effects of the land office were taken beyond the Genesee River; the house of Mr. Ellicott was converted into quarters for army officers and his office a hospital; private houses were thrown open, barns and sheds occupied; families that were separated in the hasty departure from Buffalo became united there, their scattered members, male and female, dropping in one after another. All along the Buffalo road, as far as the Genesee River, there had been deserted houses, which did not fail to have new occupants soon after the flight from the frontier commenced."

WAR AND PENSIONERS OF 1812.

Very high credit was given to Gen. Peter B. Porter, who took part in the war, both for his eloquence in engaging the volunteers and his skill and valor in leading them. The press sounded his praises; the citizens of Batavia tendered him a dinner; the governor breveted him a major-general; and Congress voted him a gold medal, he being the only officer of volunteers to whom that honor was awarded during the War of 1812.

Pensioners of 1812—By reference to records at the court-house we find the following persons were entitled to pensions, recorded in 1819: Lieut. Darius Howe, $20 per month; Sergt.-Maj. Samuel Huntington, Sergt. Nathan Parker, Privates Jacob Annis, Timothy Baker, Joseph Riddle, Levi Vinton, William Kelly, B. Potts, John Lyman, Nathan Sherwood, Samuel Camp, Peter Truman, and John C. Calhoun (then Secretary of War), each $8 per month.

A treaty of peace was concluded at Ghent, December 24, 1814, but the good news did not reach here until Gen. Jackson had fought and won the battle of New Orleans.

We have given a concise history of all the wars that have affected the Holland Purchase except the late Rebellion, which will be given in its proper place. The Holland Purchase, in its settlement and prosperity, was greatly retarded by the War of 1812, as its borders were the scenes of many battles and skirmishes; its pioneer settlers were compelled or volunteered to go "upon the lines" in defense of their homes; constant fear of invasions by the foe, especially Indians, caused many to abandon their settlements and flee east of the Genesee River.

The roads and improvements of the Holland Purchase were of much importance in the success of the war in this part of the State. The population of the tract at this time was about 25,000, and the influx of settlers had made some quite compact settlements, especially along the road to Buffalo.

The noted Ridge road was not in operation until after the War of 1812. Soldiers were marched from Rochester to Clarkson, thence to Le Roy, thence to Buffalo and Lewiston, because there were no other land routes. Batavia was at one time the halting-place—the rallying point—of fleeing soldiers and citizens of Buffalo and the frontier; the back settlements of the Holland Purchase were deserted, and Buffalo and the western frontiers were a blackened ruin of desolation. It is said by historians cotemporary with those times that there were no better soldiers "on the lines" than those from the Holland Purchase.

ture of the State, the common councils of New York and Albany, and the subscriptions of individuals in those cities, as well as Canandaigua and other older towns, for the building up and relief of Buffalo and the settlers of the Holland Purchase. The amount of $63,000 was judiciously distributed among the sufferers, and the wilderness commenced "to blossom as the rose."

HOLLAND PURCHASE LAND TITLES.

HAVING shown the absolute title of the colony of New York to the Duke of York, and the severance of all allegiance to the mother country, we will enter minutely into the title of the lands of Western New York, particularly those of the Holland Purchase and of Genesee County.

Prior to the advent of the white man to the State of New York nothing was known of its occupants, but the habits of the aborigines, their customs and history, have been defined since. The present territory of the State was occupied by the "Five Nations," as the English called the confederacy of the five tribes, and "Iroquois," as they were denominated by the French. This confederacy extended through the center of the State, east and west, with the Mohawks at the eastern extremity, the Senecas at the western, and the Oneidas, Onondagas, and Cayugas between. The Senecas occupied the lands of the Holland Purchase, and more especially the lands of the "Genesee."

The superiority of the Iroquois—the confederacy—has been conceded by all writers. It was shown by the original, strong organization of the league, the conception of their campaigns, forms of government, and wisdom and oratory in council. Their origin, or that of any of the Indian races, has not been satisfactorily given, and the opinions are almost as numerous as the tribes. With no written language the traditions of generations past was perverted or lost. The Senecas who occupied the western part of the State,—from Geneva to Buffalo,—and whose moccasined feet had so long trodden the lands of the county of Genesee, were the highest in the confederacy. Red Jacket and other notable braves conducted their councils, but of the origin of the Senecas nothing was known. Their traditions told that the tribe, or its progenitors, issued from the large hill near the head of Canandaigua Lake, called by them Genundewah, and that is its present name. The same hill was used for the annual gatherings of the Senecas in some of their rites within the memory of the first settlers. Mary Jemeson, who lived so long on the Gardeau Reservation of the Holland Purchase, has given the most complete history of the "great hill" people.

FIRST LANDLORDS AND TAVERNS.

The original survey of this section, begun by Joseph and Benjamin Ellicott in 1798, was completed in 1799, so far, at least, as running the township and range lines. No settlements having been made, inducements were made to such parties as would locate and erect taverns for accommodations of would-be settlers. Accordingly three lots were sold, with that end in view, first, to Asa Ransom, who settled in what is now the town of Clarence (Erie County), the condition being "on or before January 1, 1800, he should erect on the lot a messuage fit for the habitation of man, not less than 18 feet square; and should live and reside, or cause a family to live and reside, therein during the term of five years next ensuing, and that before the 1st day of July next not less than eight acres of land should be cleared and fenced." Asa Ransom died in Buffalo in 1835. The second lot sold was to Garret Davis, on the Lewiston road, about five miles from Batavia (now in Oakfield), and was known for years as the old Erastus Wolcott stand, where a tavern was erected and kept for years. The contract was dated September 16, 1799, located on Lot 13, Sec. 5, Tp. 13, Range 2, and called for 150 acres at 120 pounds (New York currency), or $2.00 per acre, with like conditions as to Ransom's. Garret Davis died in November, 1801. The third lot was sold to Frederick Walther, October 1, 1799, in Tp. 12, Range 1, "beginning in the Transit Meridian line, being the Eastern boundary of the aforesaid Township, 13° ch. 38 L., S. of the 68 Mile Stone from the North boundary of Pennsylvania, containing 150 acres." This lot embraced all the present village of Stafford that lies west of the transit line. The tavern house was built on the north side of the old Genesee road, near the creek on the west side. Walther only remained a year or two, then went south.

COURT-HOUSE AND JAIL.

Mr. Ellicott gave his attention to the building of a court-house and jail immediately after the act was passed to form Genesee County. In May, 1802, Mr. Busti, writing to him, says:

"I am happy in the promptness with which you have agreed to carry into effect the erection of the court-house and jail, as stipulated to be erected at the expense of the company, by Mr. Ogden and myself. This stipulation was one of the principal inducements towards our effecting the passage of the law establishing the new county."

Isaac Sutherland and Samuel F. Geer were employed as chief architects by Mr. Ellicott to adopt and carry out a building plan sent on by Mr. Busti. From that plan was created the building now known as Ellicott hall. It is built of heavy oak timbers, and it took three days to raise the frame work. The workmanship was of a superior order for those days, and the building remains a monument to the mechanical skill and energy of its founder, Joseph Ellicott. It was enclosed in the fall of 1802, and finished so far as to permit of holding the first sessions of the courts in the spring of 1803. The north half was used as a court-room and jail; the south half for a tavern, and occupied as such until about 1820. The tavern-keeper was then dismissed and the whole upper part used as a court-room, and the lower part (except the jail) became the residence of the jailor, and so continued until the erection of the new jail in 1850, on West Main street. For several years the old court-room was used as a place for religious meetings, the gallery being put in for additional seating capacity.

In 1819 Mr. Ellicott addressed "the Honorable the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, and the Supervisors of the County," to the effect that the needs of the county (Wyoming County not having been erected) required an enlargement of the court-room, and proposed, as agent of the Holland Land Company, to convey to the supervisors the triangular piece of land (now bounded by Ellicott, Main, and Court streets), the consideration being for the county to pay $3000; also to convey to the company the oblong piece of land, 100 feet wide, located about midway between Genesee (Main) street and Big Tree (Ellicott) road, and extending from a point on what is now Clark Place, back of Biere's store; also a strip about 35 feet wide extending from Genesee street to the main strip, known as "lot 81." (It was on this lot the first execution by hanging occurred in the county.) The suggestion was accepted, and a few years afterwards a new jail was built (now occupied by the Hook and Ladder Company); also a county clerk's office was built in the northeast corner of the triangle. Both were built of brick. This was occupied until the present court-house was built, in 1842, when the county clerk's office was moved to the basement of the same; but again moved to its present location, when it and the surrogate's office was completed in 1873.

The circumstances that led to the building of the new court-house:
were, first, a strong effort being made to remove the county seat to Attica; second, a movement on foot to divide the county; third, the old court-room being too small and inconvenient. The supervisors thought by this stroke they could defeat the removal of the county seat and division of the county. The present court-house was built in 1843, and cost about $17,000.

In 1849 the board of supervisors granted to the village of Batavia the old court-house, conditioned upon its being repaired. Repairs were made, and now the building is used for some town meetings, and is known as Ellicott hall.

POLITICAL AND CIVIL HISTORY.

At the earliest settlement of the county two political parties existed—the Federal, opposed to the war and friendly to Great Britain, and the Republican. The Federalists became quite unpopular by opposing the War of 1812, and in this part of the State gradually dropped the name and were stigmatized as "Democrats," which name was finally adopted. "Bucktails" was a name given to the Republican party of that day, and their opponents were called "Clintonians." Then followed the terms "National" and "Democratic" Republicans.

In 1826 the famous Morgan excitement arose to change the political phase of this section, and its origin was at Batavia. William Morgan wrote an exposition of the so-called secrets of Free Masonry, and it was to have been published at Batavia. It was alleged that for this exposure he was abducted and murdered by the Masons; the details or truth of the transaction do not belong in this history. The feeling of the people of Genesee County was so aroused that a party, called the "Anti-Masonic," at once was formed, and was an overwhelming party for a short time in Western New York. It became fully organized in 1828, and a coalition was made in 1832 between the Anti-Masons and the National Republicans of this State in order to carry the State for the Anti-Masons and elect Henry Clay President of the United States. The scheme failed and both designs failed. The Anti-Masonic party by this coalition merged into the "Whig" party, and remained until the "Republican" party of 1856 was formed.

In 1833 the agitation of the slavery question commenced and an anti-slavery party was formed. No issue has wielded a more potent influence upon national or local politics than this. "The legislature of this State passed an act in 1799 for the gradual extinction of slavery within its borders. Although it did not exist in the Holland Purchase, yet it was a legal institution in the older settled portions. Subsequent enactments entirely obliterated all traces of the dark stain—slavery—from the State of New York on July 4, 1827. Ten thousand slaves were set free by the act. Anti-slavery meetings were broken up in the early years of this excitement by the opposition. Gerrit Smith became the fearless leader of the anti-slavery faction, and it gradually developed into formidable proportions.

Genesee County took an active part in this move. In 1836 a strong anti-slavery feeling existed here, and was as strongly opposed; a society was formed and wished to hold a public meeting at Batavia. The assurance by prominent men, although doubtful as to the justice of the claims of the "Abolitionists," that they should oppose any interference with a meeting in accordance with the right of free speech, that was properly conducted, led to a call for a meeting at the court-house in Batavia, March 12, 1836, at 2 P. M., to take into consideration what measure it was necessary to adopt with reference to the proposed meeting of the Abolitionists in this village; and the call closed with this appeal: "Let all opposed to fanaticism, and who value the existence and perpetuity of the Union, attend."

This meeting was largely attended and passed strong resolutions against the object of the Abolitionists, that they were opposed to any such meeting in the village of Batavia, and would not be responsible for consequences if the Abolitionists held their meeting as proposed. (These resolutions and full details can be found in Young's History of Warsaw.) The meeting appointed a committee of 50 to wait upon the Abolition Society, should it meet in Batavia, and inform it of the wishes of the village, etc.

The Anti-Slavery Society met pursuant to notice at the court-house. Before its organization the committee of 50 entered the hall, and its chairman read the resolutions of their meeting, and also made a short speech. The Anti-Slavery Society appointed a committee of five to prepare a reply. This committee was: Henry Brewster and Seth M. Gates, of Le Roy; Gen. John D. Landon, of Castile; William Patterson, of Warsaw; and Huntington Lyman. In the reply they disclaimed a want of respect for the citizens of Batavia, was not appointed without consultation with respectable citizens, asserted the right to peaceably assemble to discuss the interests of their common country, and could not acknowledge the right of any persons or body of men to molest them or require them to cease deliberations. The long report was made to the committee of 50 and the Anti-Slavery Society proceeded with its organization, but was interrupted with stamping and unusual riotous proceedings, and after an ineffectual expostulation and remonstrance adjourned to Warsaw one week from that day.

The meeting was held pursuant to adjournment, March 22, 1836, declared its sentiments, and pledged $1,000 for the first year's support of a free paper. Such a paper was established (The American Citizen) in Warsaw, and was subsequently removed to Perry, then to Rochester.

It was at a convention in Warsaw (then Genesee County) that the first proposition was made to nominate a President of this stripe, and after a stormy debate, in which Myron Holley and William L. Chapin were its advocates, James G. Birney was nominated. A division followed, but the vote was concentrated on the members of Congress who favored the anti-slavery movement. This party was now called the "Liberty party," and numbered about 1,500 in the State. In 1848 they joined the "Free Soil" party. The people of Genesee were divided, and very significantly so, in the campaign of 1848, and were first in the "Hunker" and "Barn-burner" division upon the slavery question. The latter division, which opposed the introduction of slavery into new territory, received strong support in Western New York, and gave Martin Van Buren, its candidate, a hearty support in 1848. In 1850, when Horatio Seymour was nominated for governor, the Whig and Democratic parties became divided into the "Hard" and "Soft" factions, the first supporting President Fillmore's administration, the latter led by William H. Seward and opposed. In 1852, on the election of Franklin Pierce by the coalition of the Anti-Slavery or Soft Shell divisions, the Whig Party was practically annihilated, and the Republican party sprang into being, carrying the anti-slavery element with it. In all these movements no section was more active than Genesee County. The "American party," following in 1853, called "Know-Nothing party" from its secrecy, had a brief existence. In 1856 John C. Fremont was the candidate of the Republicans for President, but was defeated. Those opposed were called the Democratic party. In 1860 the choice of Abraham Lincoln was made by the Republicans, and he was elected President. The feeling between the slave-holding States and the North had been growing during these years, and many bitter words and aggressive acts were committed by both sections, which led to the passage of ordinances of secession by the slave States, the inauguration of the civil war of 1861–65, and the extinction of slavery forever.
The Republican and Democratic parties continue to oppose each other on minor issues, alternating the "outs" and "ins," and at this writing the Republicans are in the ascendancy, with Benjamin Harrison, President.

Mention should be made of the Prohibition party, which has for the past few years steadily gained in numbers in Genesee as well as in other counties and States. The party advocates the enactment of laws to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors,—a commendable object,—but many temperance defenders do not sustain the party.

The "Greenback party," of which Genesee County has only a few adherents, has not yet been able to effect a permanent organization.

The increase in parties, and the particular complexion of Genesee County during the past half century,—since the organization of the present county,—will be seen by the aggregate for each presidential election:

Genesee County is the oldest county west of Ontario; its organization is given under the proper title. Its importance in the past and present in the affairs of the State is evident; its position among the first, its rapid development, and its admirable local government for a brief century is directly attributed to the justice and firmness of its rulers and citizens. We append a list of officers from its organization to the present time, and leave its civil and political status to be felt in the councils of the State as in former days. Under the first constitution all officers were appointed in the counties by the governor, and one senator from each of the four districts into which the State was then divided; this constituted the appointing power. Under the constitution of 1821 sheriffs and county clerks were elected by the people at the November elections. In the lists following the years of appointment and election are given.

BENCH AND BAR.¹

The editors of the Gazetteer and Biographical Record have asked for their publication a sketch of the lives of the men who in the past have been representative members of the legal profession in Genesee County. The scope of this article does not include any lawyer now living. It is only of those whose earthly labors are ended that we are to speak. Within the limit of space assigned it will be impossible to give more than an outline of the lives of these men, many of whom have been among the foremost citizens of Genesee County. It is not claimed that mention is made of every lawyer who has practiced here, neither does this sketch include those who have pursued their studies or practiced in this county for a short time, but who have made their reputations elsewhere. In any community the members of the bar are always in a large sense public men. Many important judicial positions are necessarily filled from their ranks, while legislative and other official places are often occupied by lawyers. The bar of Genesee County forms no exception to this rule. There has never been a time when it did not include many men of recognized ability, and the bar as a whole has always compared favorably with that of any other county of anything like equal size. Of those whose names are here recorded only Martindale, Wakeman, Hewitt, and Taggart were personally known to the writer. The estimates given of the professional characteristics of the men who form the subject of this article have been derived largely from conversation with those who knew them as lawyers and citizens, and partly, of course, from such printed sketches as were available. The historical facts have been gathered from biographies found in many different places, from newspaper files, court records, from recollections of old inhabitants, and in several instances from such meagre statements as are chiseled in marble in the cemetery, or are written down in not less formal phrase in the books of the surrogate's office.

The first judge of the county was Joseph Ellicott, the same man who, as surveyor, blazed his way through the primeval forests of Western New York, and laid out the counties, towns, and villages of the Holland Purchase. Mr. Ellicott was not a lawyer. He resigned the position of judge a short time after his appointment in 1803, and was succeeded by Ezra Platt. Of Judge Platt but little information is available, except that he discharged the few duties of the office until about 1812. His will is recorded in book I of Wills in the surrogate's office, at page 11, and is the third will entered in the county records. The first was that of Daniel Totten, recorded January 20, 1808, and the second, that of David Franklin, was recorded March 30, 1809, while the record of Judge Platt's will was made January 9, 1812, making three wills in four years.

The succeeding judges down to 1847 were John H. Jones, Isaac Wilson, John Z. Ross, William H. Tisdale, William Mitchell, Phineas L. Tracy, and Edgar C. Dibble. During the same period the surrogates of the county had been Jeremiah R. Munson,—whose name does not appear in any of the records of the office,—Richard Smith, Andrew A. Ellicott, Ebenezer Mix, Harvey Putnam, Timothy Fitch, and Samuel Willett. Mr. Mix filled the office from 1821 to 1840. Under the law as it has existed since 1847 the functions of county judge and surrogate have been performed by the same official. The duties of surrogate prior to that date were few, as estates were seldom settled.
Richard Smith, whose portrait has for many years hung in the courthouse, over the chair occupied by the presiding judge, was born in Connecticut, February 17, 1779, and died December 31, 1859. He was a graduate of Yale College and removed to Genesee County in 1803. He was at one time a partner of Daniel B. Brown. Judge Smith seldom, if ever, appeared in court. It is not known that any of the other incumbents of the office up to that time were particularly prominent as lawyers, neither is much information available as to any county judge prior to Phineas L. Tracy. Judge Ross is spoken favorably of as a citizen and lawyer. He died October 27, 1826, at the age of 40 years.

Few men have been more closely identified with the history of Genesee County than Judge Tracy. He was born December 25, 1786, at Norwich, Conn., and graduated at Yale in 1806. He was admitted to the bar at Albany in 1811, and removed to Genesee County in 1813. For many years he had an extensive and lucrative practice, and was a man of marked force and ability. He was elected to Congress in 1827 and again in 1829, and in 1841 was appointed "first judge" of the county by William H. Seward, then governor. After his retirement from the bench in 1846 he practiced law but little. He was for many years a member of the vestry of St. James's Church. His death occurred December 22, 1876. An obituary published at that time says: "He would have been 90 years old on Christmas day. A good and just man, full of years and ripe for the harvest, has gone to his peaceful rest."

The next county judge was Edgar C. Dibble, who held the office during the year 1846, and again from 1852 to 1856. Judge Dibble was a fairly well-read lawyer, a man of good character, and he discharged the duties of his office satisfactorily. He died February 28, 1862, at the age of 57 years. During the period of his professional career he was at different times in partnership with Timothy Fitch, John H. Martindale, and Martin F. Robertson.

Judge Dibble was succeeded by Horace U. Soper, who served four years. Judge Soper is said to have made a good record upon the bench, but was never especially prominent as a practitioner. He was an amiable and agreeable gentleman, of attractive manners and large general information. He died January 15, 1878, at the age of 72 years, leaving no descendants.

Joshua L. Brown became county judge and surrogate in 1856 and held the office four years. He died at the age of 48, June 19, 1860, a few months after the expiration of his official term, at St. Louis, Mo. Judge
Brown was a good citizen, and a lawyer of extensive learning and decided ability. He is said to have possessed less aptitude for the trial of causes before a jury than for the other duties of his profession, although he tried a large number of cases. Before the court, or as a counselor in his office, he was a strong, safe man. A member of the bar now living tells how he had a habit during the trial of criminal causes, where, as often occurs, the defense was conducted by some young man designated by the court, of taking a seat near the junior thus assigned, when, as the trial proceeded, he would draw his chair up and make suggestions. After a little he would be on his feet arguing a law point, and in one case at the close of the evidence he proceeded at once to sum up to the jury, much to the discomfiture of the young lawyer who had prepared, with great care, an address which was to make his reputation. Judge Brown was for many years a partner of Maj. Henry I. Glowacki, who in well earned retirement from the active labors of life still survives. The firm of Brown & Glowacki enjoyed for many years an extensive and lucrative practice, which was at its full height at the time of Judge Brown's death.

Moses Taggart, who succeeded Judge Brown, died at his home in Batavia, February 17, 1883, at the ripe age of 82 years. He was the Nestor of our bar, having been in active and continuous practice for about 55 years. During his eventful life he had endeared himself to the profession, of which he was an honored member, and was universally respected in the community where he had so long resided. As a lawyer he was thoroughly grounded in the elementary principles of legal science. Throughout his career he was esteemed for his good judgment, safe counsel, and extensive research rather than for any special ability as a trial lawyer. He had little liking or aptitude for the work of an advocate. A strong, helpful friend of young men, he had witnessed the career of every man at the bar at the time of his death, and it is safe to say that every one of the number felt a sincere attachment for the venerable and honored father of the fraternity. Judge Taggart was born at Colerain, Mass., August 21, 1799. At the age of 18 years he left his native town to find a home in the newer region of Western New York, and traveled all the way to Byron on foot. His legal studies were pursued in the office of Phineas L. Tracy. Upon his admission to the bar he became a partner of Albert Smith, who at that time was an able and noted practitioner. At different periods of his life he was in partnership with Daniel H. Chandler, Charles Henshaw, Seth Wakeman, and during the latter years of his life with his son-in-law, W. Harris Day. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1846, and in 1851 was appointed justice of the Supreme Court to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Judge Sill. This position he filled until the close of 1853, and during the last year of his service became, under the then existing provisions of law, a member of the Court of Appeals. In 1860 he was elected county judge and surrogate of this county, and filled the office acceptably for two terms of four years each. In 1871 Judge Taggart was appointed postmaster of Batavia, which position he held for about four years. He maintained his excellent health and vigorous bearing almost to the end of his life, while his intellectual powers remained unimpaired to the last.

Charles Henshaw was born at Java, Wyoming County, and studied law with Gen. L. W. Thayer at Warsaw. He was elected county judge and surrogate in 1868, and died in office September 18, 1870, at the age of 48 years. A man of sterling worth, honest through and through, he possessed qualifications which rendered him in some respects the most remarkable lawyer who has ever practiced at our bar. It is doubtful if any other lawyer of this county has acquired so extended a knowledge of the law itself. His memory was unfailing, and his familiarity with both elementary law and judicial decisions was vast and perfectly at his command. He could always say "on such a book and page you will find the law." He disregarded all forms, and fashioned his papers briefly and accurately to suit himself. Unwilling or unable to try a case before a jury, he seldom if ever appeared in this capacity. His judicial career, upon which he had but fairly entered, gave great promise, and had he lived Charles Henshaw would have filled higher positions upon the bench.

The incumbents of the office of county judge and surrogate since Judge Henshaw's death are, in this year 1890, all living.

A sketch of the life of the Hon. Heman J. Redfield, prepared for this article, has been omitted, since an extended notice of his career is printed elsewhere in this volume.

Among the members of the legal profession who have practiced in Le Roy besides Mr. Redfield there may be mentioned Jacob Bartow, Alfred F. Bartow and Charles Bartow, his sons, Seth M. Gates, Charles Danforth, Samuel Skinner, Perrin M. Smith, and Augustus P. Hascall.

Jacob Bartow, although never distinguished as a lawyer, was a man of large attainments and rare scholarly tastes. He was a law student with Aaron Burr. He died about 1845. His son, Alfred F. Bartow, studied law with Heman J. Redfield, and later became his partner. He removed west and died a few years ago in Chicago. Mr. Bartow was an excellent practical business lawyer, and was a prominent and respected citizen of Le Roy. He was for many years a member of the vestry of St. Mark's Church, and took much interest in the work of that society. Charles Bartow studied law with A. P. Hascall, and during the time he practiced in Le Roy was in partnership with Hiram W. Hascall, and afterwards with John R. Olmsted. He removed to New York, where he died. Augustus P. Hascall was for a long time an honored and prominent citizen of Le Roy. He served as presidential elector in 1848, and was a Representative in the 32d Congress. He died June 27, 1872, aged about 76 years. Charles Danforth was a graduate of Williams College, and was at one time judge of Common Pleas in this county. He was a good lawyer and gave satisfaction as a judge. Samuel Skinner was one of the earliest lawyers in Le Roy, and is said to have been an able, well-read member of the bar. He was a graduate of Williams College, and was possessed of scholarly tastes. He died in Le Roy about the year 1853. Perrin M. Smith studied law with Mr. Redfield and became a partner of Mr. Skinner. He removed from Le Roy to the West, where he died many years ago. Seth M. Gates practiced law in LeRoy for many years, and was an able man. He was proficient alike as an office lawyer and in the trial and argument of cases. He was elected to Congress in 1839, and soon after completing his term of service removed to Warsaw, where he died about the year 1876. During his residence in Le Roy he was 10 years associated in business with D. R. Bacon, who still resides in Le Roy, an honored citizen of that village. Mr. Bacon was at one time a law partner of James Summerfield, but upon becoming connected with manufacturing interests several years ago retired from active practice of his profession.

A citizen of Le Roy, having at his command sources of information not available to the writer of this sketch, has included in an article prepared for this work much additional information concerning Le Roy lawyers, which might otherwise have been of interest here.

Among the more prominent of the early Batavia lawyers may be mentioned Albert Smith, who in his day had a wide reputation for extensive legal knowledge, and for his power as an advocate. He was a Representative to the 28th and 29th Congresses from this district, and served in the Assembly in 1842. At different times he was associated as a partner with the ablest lawyers of the county. Mr. Smith removed west soon after his service in the State legislature, and has long since been dead.
Daniel B. Brown was born October 18, 1780, and died July 7, 1822, leaving, it is said, no descendants or near kindred. He is reputed to have been one of the most brilliant advocates who ever practiced in this county. He was somewhat intemperate in habits and erratic in disposition, and consequently never won for himself the position which he otherwise would have gained. It is hardly probable that he is practicing law in the other world, yet his tombstone bears the inscription, copied quite likely from his sign used while living: “Daniel B. Brown, Attorney and Counselor at Law.”

Levi Rumsey was a prominent citizen of this county at an early day, and was intimately concerned in that class of law business connected with the formative period of our history. But little information concerning him is now available, yet an old citizen of Batavia well qualified to know and judge says of him, that in the prime of life he was not only the foremost lawyer of this county, but of Western New York. He was unquestionably a man of high character and of decided ability. Mr. Rumsey was district attorney of this county from 1829 to 1834. He was born in Connecticut, December 8, 1776, and died December 29, 1833.

Ethan B. Allen was among the most prominent of the early lawyers of the county, and was a man of high character and unusual attainments. In personal bearing he was “a gentleman of the old school.” He was born in Columbia County, October 21, 1787, and died April 19, 1835. He was the father-in-law of that distinguished advocate and jurist, Isaac A. Verplanck. Mr. Allen was a State senator from this district from 1826 to 1830. Upon his tombstone are inscribed the words “intelligent, virtuous, and affectionate, he fulfilled the various duties of a legislator, a citizen, and a friend.”

Daniel H. Chandler, who was for many years a prominent citizen of this county, was born in 1795 and died March 29, 1864, at Madison, Wis., where he had removed in 1847. He was district attorney of this county from 1834 to 1838. Mr. Chandler was an able and thoroughly equipped lawyer, combining in an unusual degree the characteristics of advocate and counselor. He was a partner at one time of Senator Ethan B. Allen, and later with Hon. Moses Taggart. Mr. Chandler is well remembered by quite a number of our older residents, all of whom attest his worth as a man and his talents as a lawyer. His ability as a trial lawyer brought him actively into the management of many notable cases, where he won for himself high commendation from bench, bar, and clients. He was the father of the late Rear-Admiral Ralph Chandler, of the United States navy. After his removal to Wisconsin Mr. Chandler acquired a large practice, and fully maintained the reputation he had gained here.

George W. Lay, the fourth son of John Lay, Esq., was born at Catskill, N. Y., July 27, 1798. He graduated at Hamilton College, N. Y., in the class of 1817. He came to Batavia the same year and studied law in the office of Hon. Phineas L. Tracy. After his admission to the bar he became a law partner of Mr. Tracy. The firm of Tracy & Lay did an extensive law business in the territory now embracing the counties of Genesee, Wyoming, and Orleans, and enjoyed a wide reputation and extensive acquaintance throughout the State. At that time the Genesee County bar was composed of lawyers of marked ability and talent. John B. Skinner, Daniel H. Chandler, Ethan B. Allen, Heman J. Redfield, Daniel B. Brown, Moses Taggart, Albert Smith, and many others attended the courts and were in full practice. Mr. Lay was a close practitioner under the old system, and was noted for his skill and dexterity as a pleader. The partnership ended in 1832. Mr. Lay was at that time elected to Congress. He then became a partner with James G. Merrill and Horace U. Soper. In 1840 he was elected to the Assembly of the State of New York, and served as chairman of the canal committee. His canal report was characterized as a document of marked foresight and ability. In 1842 he was appointed Chargé d'Affaires at the court of Norway and Sweden, and resided three years at Stockholm. After his return home his health failed, he became a confirmed invalid, and died October 21, 1860.

Isaac A. Verplanck, who was ranked as one of the of the ablest lawyers in Western New York, practiced for several years in Batavia. He was born October 16, 1812, and came to Genesee County in 1831. For a considerable time he was in partnership with John H. Martindale, the two forming a very strong law firm. Mr. Verplanck lacked the industry and indomitable energy which characterized his distinguished partner, but compensated by his masterly abilities, by his extensive knowledge of the law, and his great forensic power. He was district attorney of this county from 1838 to 1842, and again in 1846. Soon after this he removed to Buffalo. He was elected one of the judges of the Superior Court of that city, and held the position during the remainder of his life. For the last three years he was chief judge. His death occurred October 15, 1873.

Elijah Hurty, whose early death terminated a career of marked promise and usefulness, was a man of scholarly tastes, genial disposition, and excellent character. He was born in Bethany, in this county, and when quite a young man became principal of Union School in Batavia. Soon after his admission to the bar he formed a partnership with Hon. George Bowen, under the firm name of Hurty & Bowen. He died August 10, 1854, at the age of 32 years.

James G. Hoyt spent but a small portion of his professional life in this county, and although a sketch of his career is hardly within the scope of this article, yet so well was he known here that his name cannot properly be omitted. He was born in Camden, January 25, 1806, and removed to Genesee County in 1812. His father died six years later, leaving a widow and nine children in such poverty that the future jurist was at once thrown upon his own resources. In 1830 he was elected a constable, and discharged the duties of his office with so much promptness and intelligence as to attract the attention of leading business men. In 1834 he was elected justice of the peace, and the same year began to read law with Moses Taggart. Shortly after his admission to the bar he removed to Attica, which was then included in Genesee County. He gained almost immediate recognition as a lawyer of unusual industry, thoroughness, and ability. After a few years he removed to Buffalo, and was twice elected justice of the Supreme Court. In the discharge of the exacting duties of that office he gained a high reputation, and is remembered by all our older lawyers as one of the ablest of the many eminent men who have filled the position. He died October 23, 1863. His widow, to whom he was married in 1831, still survives.

Probably no firm of lawyers ever enjoyed so varied and extended a practice in this county as Wakeman & Bryan, who were copartners from 1852 until the death of Mr. Bryan, which occurred in October, 1867. The combination was one of unusual strength. Seth Wakeman was a successful trial lawyer, while William G. Bryan was a counselor of learning and discretion. Mr. Wakeman was born in Vermont, January 15, 1811. His father was a soldier in the War of 1812, and died in the service, leaving a widow and a large family of children in destitute circumstances. They soon removed to this county. When quite a young man Mr. Wakeman was elected a constable of the town of Pembroke, and it was by reason of his occasional duties at justices' courts that he became interested in law. In 1838 he was elected a justice of the peace, and six years later, at the age of 33, he was admitted to the bar. After a brief partnership with Joseph Sleeper the firm of Wakeman & Bryan was formed. After Mr. Bryan's death Mr. Wakeman was for a time a partner of Judge Taggart, and afterwards, and up to his forced retirement on account of failing health in 1875, he was associated with William C. Watson, the firm doing an extensive business. Mr. Wakeman was a Whig until the dissolution of that party, when he became a Republican. He was elected district attorney in 1850 and served two terms. In 1856 and 1857 he was member of Assembly. In 1867 he was a member of the State Constitutional Convention, and in 1870 he was elected to the 42d Congress. As a citizen Mr. Wakeman was generous, companionable, and kind. Distinctively a self-made man, he was always in warmest sympathy with every person whom he found struggling with adverse fortune. While eminently fair as a lawyer his strongest antagonists always found in him "a foeman worthy of their steel." He was an admirable trial lawyer, and gained a splendid practice and reputation as such. Possessed of few of the graces of oratory, Mr. Wakeman was nevertheless a strong, trenchant, and convincing speaker. He died January 4, 1880.

William G. Bryan was born January 28, 1822, in Brighton, England. He came to America and settled in Le Roy in 1830. His law studies were pursued with Albert Smith and with Moses Taggart. In 1851 he formed a partnership with John H. Martindale, which was soon dissolved by the removal of the latter to Rochester. In politics Mr. Bryan was an ardent Democrat, and was a trusted adviser in all party matters. He was a lawyer of decided ability, but from choice spent his time inside his office, preparing papers, giving counsel, and examining cases. He was a man of refined tastes, of scholarly attainments, and great personal worth. Between him and Mr. Wakeman the strongest attachment existed. His untimely death, at the age of 45, was the result of an accident. He had gone to Burlington, Iowa, on a visit, and while there, in endeavoring to control a frightened horse, he was thrown from a carriage and killed. A public meeting of the citizens of Batavia was held on the sad occasion. His accomplished and estimable wife, for many years principal of the Bryan Seminary, still survives.

James M. Willett was born October 10, 1831. He graduated at the Albany Law School in 1856. In 1859 he was elected district attorney, being the first Democrat ever elected to that office in this county. He entered the army in 1862 and became major of the famous Eighth New York Heavy Artillery. In the fearful ordeal through which that regiment passed at Cold Harbor he was severely wounded. Upon rejoining his regiment, three months later, he became colonel, and to the close of the war commanded a brigade. After leaving the army he engaged in business in New York until 1870, when he removed to Buffalo and formed the well-known law partnership of Laning, Folsom & Willett. The firm were the legal representatives of the New York Central Railroad, and did a large general practice. Colonel Willett continued to suffer from his army wounds, his health gave way, and he died June 6, 1877. He was a strong, well equipped lawyer, a genial and companionable friend, a Christian gentleman. Few men ever practiced at our bar who had so strong a hold on the affections of his associates and the people at large.

Martin F. Robertson was a native of Genesee County, and passed his life in Batavia. He was possessed of decided ability, fair legal learning, and was a good trial lawyer. As a man he was very companionable and popular. He died March 21, 1868, at the age of 48 years, never having married.

Benjamin Pringle, for many years one of the foremost citizens of this county, was born in the year 1807, at Richfield, in this State. He came to Batavia in 1830 and formed a partnership with Albert Smith, and later became a partner of Heman J. Redfield. He was judge of the county from 1841 to 1846. In 1852, and again in 1854, he was elected to Congress. In 1862 he was member of Assembly, and in 1863 President Lincoln appointed him judge under a treaty between the United States and Great Britain for the suppression of the slave trade. He remained in the discharge of the duties of this office for seven years at Cape of Good Hope. Judge Pringle was a competent equity lawyer, but without special taste for the trial of causes. As a citizen he was public spirited and patriotic. In private life he was exemplary. For many years he was a warden of St. James's Episcopal Church, of which he was a devoted member. During his old age he divided his time between Batavia and Hastings, Minn., where his sons lived. He died at the latter place June 7, 1887. His remains are buried in Batavia.

Marlbro W. Hewitt, though never particularly active as a practitioner, was a respected member of the bar, and an esteemed and well-known citizen of Batavia. He was for a great many years a justice of the peace, and discharged the duties of that office with fidelity and unusual intelligence. Mr. Hewitt died February 23, 1880, at the age of 64 years.

One of the most interesting figures in the history of the bar of Genesee County and of Western New York was Gen. John H. Martindale. Although most of his professional life was passed in Rochester, whither he removed in 1852, he had prior to that time served two terms as district attorney of this county, and had laid the foundation for his brilliant career as an advocate and orator. Having received a military education at West Point he entered the army at the breaking out of the Rebellion. He did active and efficient service in the field quite early in the war, and later served as military governor of the District of Columbia, with the rank of major-general. He was elected attorney general of this State in 1865. General Martindale became famous in his management of actions for damages for personal injuries brought against railroad corporations, particularly the New York Central. His most frequent antagonist was that most brilliant and admirable trial lawyer, the late Albert P. Laning, of Buffalo. They tried a large number of cases opposed to each other in this county, and the memory of those days is an ever recurring delight. The court-house was always filled and the audience always entertained. The limits of this article forbid what might be made an interesting account of this remarkable man. Always eloquent, he had the faculty of being most so in cases otherwise commonplace. The writer has heard many of his addresses to juries, but the most eloquent is remembered as his summing up in the case of Garwood against the New York Central Railroad, an action brought to recover damages for injury to plaintiff's mill-power by pumping water from the Tonawanda Creek into tanks, for the use of locomotive boilers. The theme was certainly not one which would seem to afford opportunity for a display of oratory, yet the speaker proved superior to the occasion, and the result was an address seldom equalled. Although of agreeable disposition General Martindale was rather easily ruffled when engaged in the trial of important cases. His wily opponent learned well his sensitive points, and never failed to take advantage of them. As General Martindale always appeared for the plaintiff in railroad cases he had the advantage of the closing address. He was quite fond, in talking to a Genesee County jury, of indulging in reminiscences, and often referred to his acquaintance with the fathers of some of the younger jurymen, and to old associations connected with Batavia. On one well remembered occasion, when Mr. Laning thought his florid antagonist would be apt to find opportunity for a display of this kind, he turned his weapons against him in that quiet and inimitable manner so strikingly in contrast with the exuberant style of his opponent. He told the jury what the General would shortly proceed to narrate in their hearing, including all that Martindale could possibly say about his early home, his dead partner, "the classic Verplanck," his friends and neighbors, the old church, etc. The result was that the orator was compelled to change his tactics. The contests between Martin-dale and Laning will always be remembered by those who enjoyed the privilege of listening to and witnessing the efforts of these remarkable but wholly dissimilar men. In private life General Martin-dale was greatly esteemed. His character was above reproach, and he was a man of sincere piety. His personal appearance and bearing attracted admiration at all times. In 1881 he went to Europe in a vain search for health, but died at Nice, France, on the 13th of December of that year, at the age of 66.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

In preparing a chapter upon the medical profession of Genesee County the writer, by direction of the publishers, has mentioned only those physicians now dead, or removed to other localities, leaving to the gentlemen canvassing the several towns the furnishing of information concerning those now living and in active practice. The scope of this work must necessarily be limited to little more than a mention of the names of the old physicians, their places of birth and education, the time when they practiced here, the dates of their death or removal, and a few items of special importance concerning them. It has been in some instances impossible to learn all we desired about the early practitioners, but what we have written will, we think, be found reasonably correct.

The modern doctor who drives in an easy carriage, over smooth roads, and with everything needful to protect him from the hot sunshine or the storm, who charges good fees and collects the most of them, who has at his command the elegant and chemically accurate medical preparations of the present day, can have little appreciation of the labors incident to the practice of the pioneer physician, who rode on horseback through the woods, carried his medicines in saddlebags, dug out of the ground almost everything but calomel he prescribed, and did a very great deal of gratuitous work for the early settlers, who were not, as a rule, overstocked with worldly goods. It may be well to state in this place that in the olden time physicians received their diplomas from the medical society of the county in which they intended to practice, and not, as at present, from medical colleges.

THE GENESEE COUNTY MEDICAL SOCIETY.

It appears that there was an association of physicians in Western New York, then nearly all in the county of Ontario, as early as the year 1801, for we find the name of Dr. D. McCracken, of Batavia, as member of a medical society at that time. As, however, Genesee County was not organized until the next year this could not be called in reality the Genesee County Medical Society. Meetings were held each year until 1807, when a society bearing the above name was established under the law passed the year before, by which the New York State Medical Society was legally incorporated.

The first delegate sent from Genesee County to the State society was Dr. Levi Ward, of Bergen, who attended a meeting held at Albany, February 6, 1810. No other mention is made in the State Transactions of any delegate from this county until 1828, when Dr. J. A. Billings, of Batavia, was in attendance. The officers of his society at that time were: Dr. J. A. Billings, president; Dr. John Cotes, vice-president; Dr. Richard Dibble, secretary; Dr. O. P. Smith, treasurer; Dr. Frederick Fitch, Dr. Charles C. Ford, Dr. William H. Webster, Dr. J. K. Barlow, and Dr. Levant B. Cotes, censors. Several of these names appear in the history of the several towns, and some of them became famous.

The County Medical Society was represented by delegates every year until 1883, when a division of sentiment concerning the counselling with irregular physicians nearly broke it up. The new State Medical Association, formed in 1884, drew away many members, and the old organization gradually died out. The officers of the society at the date of the last report to the State society (1882) were: Dr. I. V. Mullen, president; Dr. Henry Pamphilon, vice-president; Dr. J. R. Cotes, secretary and treasurer. The following is a list of the members on the roll at that time: Dr. S. Barret, Le Roy; Dr. S. C. Bateman, Alabama; Dr. J. F. Cleveland, Le Roy; Dr. John R. Cotes, Batavia; Dr. F. W. Crane, Corfu; Dr. G. W. Croff, Bethany; Dr. O. R. Groff, Bethany; Dr. J. C. Davidson, Batavia; Dr. A. G. Ellenwood, Attica, Wyoming County; Dr. B. A. Fuller, Le Roy; Dr. G. B. Gilbert, Byron; Dr. G. U. Gleason, South Byron; Dr. A. P. Jackson, Oakfield; Dr. J. M. Lewis, Elba; Dr. H. A. Morse, Batavia; Dr. I. V. Mullen, Alexander; Dr. John N. Mullen, Alexander; Dr. Henry Pamphilon, Stafford; Dr. William Pardee, Oakfield; Dr. C. F. Rand, Batavia; Dr. A. D. Smith, East Pembroke; Dr. E. C. Smith, East Pembroke; Dr. William B. Sprague, Pavilion; Dr. M. W. Townsend, Bergen; Dr. L. L. Tozier, Batavia; Dr. J. W. Warner, Elba; Dr. R. Williams, Le Roy; and Dr. A. F. G. Zurhorst, Alabama. The delegate to the State Medical Society was Dr. A. P. Jackson, of Oakfield.
The physicians from Genesee County who became prominent members of the New York State Society were, from Alexander: Dr. John R. Smith, elected in 1854; Batavia: Dr. Charles E. Ford, elected in 1852; Dr. John Cotes, elected in 1855; Dr. Levant B. Cotes, elected in 1860; Dr. John Root, elected in 1864; and Dr. J. R. Cotes, elected in 1873. Bergen: Dr. M. W. Townsend, elected in 1869; Pavilion: Dr. Warren Fay, elected in 1858, and Dr. William B. Sprague, elected in 1874. After a feeble existence of two or three years Dr. B. A. Fuller, of Le Roy, then president of the society, called a special meeting July 27, 1887. Dr. E. C. Smith was chosen secretary. A resolution was offered which rescinded so much of the old code of ethics as forbade the members consulting with irregular practitioners. This was voted on and declared lost, and the meeting adjourned. Dr. Sprague then invited the physicians present to meet for the purpose of organizing a new society, as a voluntary association, with no connection with any other society. This was agreed upon, and Drs. Sprague, Tozier, and Townsend were chosen as a committee to prepare a constitution and by-laws. This committee reported at a meeting held at Batavia, August 9, 1887, Dr. Fuller being chairman, and Dr. Wells, secretary. The report was adopted, and the new organization formed with the following officers: President, Dr. W. B. Sprague; vice-president, Dr. L. L. Tozier; secretary, Dr. W. L. Bolton; treasurer, Dr. E. C. Smith. The meetings of the society are held in January and June, and several valuable papers have been read. At this time (1889) the same officers retain their positions.

The following physicians filed their certificates in the county clerk's office at the dates opposite their names, but we can learn nothing more about them; it is possible they may have resided in places not now within the limits of Genesee County: Dr. Jonah Brown, from Columbia County, 1813; Dr. Robert H. Henderson, from Washington, 1813; Dr. Myron Orton, from Vermont, 1814; and Dr. John W. Bronson, from Vermont, 1814.

ALABAMA.

DR. FLINT L. KEYES joined the County Medical Society in 1829, Guy B. Shepard in 1831, and Alexander H. Cox in 1839. Dr. Samuel C. Bateman came to the town in 1846, and joined the society in 1859. He was killed by the cars at Sanborn, June 15, 1887. Dr. Pettibone came a few years after Dr. Bateman, practiced awhile, and left. Dr. Townsend also practiced in Alabama about 1855, and went to Michigan. Another physician was Dr. Emery, who died in Batavia. Drs. Cox and Tyler lived at South Alabama, and a Dr. Nelson Horning was in practice here a short time. Dr. Horning joined the Medical Society in 1866. He died from an overdose of aconite. Dr. William M. Wallis was a resident about 1870, and Dr. C. R. Pearce about 1872.

ALEXANDER.

Dr. Charles Chaffee came to Alexander (then a part of Batavia) in 1810. It is believed that he was the first physician in that town. A Dr. John Hall died there in 1812. We find no record of any other until Dr. Ammi R. R. Butler, who came from Stafford in 1823. He was for a time associated with Dr. Stephen Martin, about whom little is known: Dr. Butler, however, was in active practice nearly to the date of his death, which occurred at the residence of his daughter, in Buffalo, in 1858. He was an excellent physician, and an exemplary man.

In 1835 Dr. Amos Walker, in 1837 Dr. Erasmus D. Baker, and in 1839 Dr. Lemuel McAlpine practiced in Alexander. In 1860 Dr. H. B. Miller became a member of the County Medical Society, and participated actively in its transactions, being its president in 1867. He removed to Johnsonsburg, Wyoming County, about 1868, and soon after died there.

Dr. Isaac V. Mullen, formerly of Stafford, graduated from the Vermont Medical College in 1850. He served for four years in the war of the Rebellion, and in 1866 located in Alexander. Here he practiced 23 years, and removed to West Bethany, where he now resides. His son, Dr. John R. Mullen, is now at Alexander, and another son, Dr. I. T., was graduated in 1884 at Buffalo, went to Stafford soon afterward, where he remained about six years, and removed to Oakfield, where he now practices.

BATAVIA.

Our record gives the names of 46 physicians who formerly practiced here, but have died, or removed to other places. It is not at all likely we have them all, for some may have staid but a brief time, and left leaving no sign. It is believed, however, that those most conspicuous by reason of their skill and abilities have been remembered.

In 1801, the year previous to the formation of the town of Batavia, Dr. David McCracken came to "The Bend," as the little settlement on the Tonawanda Creek, now the village of Batavia, was then called. We have no account of his antecedents, but he was evidently a man of good standing in his profession. He moved to Rochester in 1818. Dr. Asa McCracken is recorded in 1805. Whether this related to David is not known. Among the slain in the attack on Lewiston was Dr. Joseph Alvord, who was an early physician (about 1802) from Batavia. In 1811 Dr. John Z. Ross was here. He died in 1826. In 1809 Dr. Ephraim Brown came in. He was quite prominent in medical matters, and practiced here until his death in 1826 or 1829. In 1815 Dr. Orris Crosby, who died in 1862, and in 1816 Drs. Charles S. Rumsey and Winter Hewitt, who died in 1824, are registered. Next came Dr. John Cotes, who was born in 1794, in Eastern New York. He studied medicine in Otsego County, and came to Batavia in 1817. He soon formed a partnership with Dr. Ephraim Brown, above mentioned, whose sister he married two years later (1819). After the death of Dr. Brown Dr. Cotes took as a partner Dr. Levant B. Cotes, his brother; they were together two years, and he then formed a connection with William Seaver in the drug and medicine business. About this time he took Dr. Truman H. Woodruff as a partner in the practice of medicine. In 1830 he visited Europe, and spent more than a year studying in the schools and hospitals of London and Paris. On his return, in 1831, he resumed his practice here in company with Dr. Woodruff, continuing the partnership until the latter’s death. Then Dr. Holton Ganson became his partner, remaining with him until 1855, when Albert Cotes, his youngest son, engaged in business with him, for a short time only, and removed to the West. For 42 years he devoted himself ardently to his profession, and died in 1859, at the age of 65 years.

The year following the advent of Dr. Cotes Dr. James Avery Billings made his appearance in Batavia. He was the eldest son of Perez Billings, of Saratoga County, N. Y., was born in 1795, received a good preliminary education, and was graduated from the University of New York in 1818. He came to this county the same year, and purchased the land upon which he resided until his death. This was the first lot deeded by the Holland Land Co. He was a man of sound judgment, and of more than ordinary ability. Coming as he did to a new country, he was well prepared to sympathize with the early settlers in their varied conditions, their trials and privations, and he became their friend and neighbor. He was at one time a partner with Dr. Winter Hewitt, whose coming in 1816 we have mentioned. He was a member of the Episcopal Church, a loyal supporter of the Democratic party, and one of its chosen leaders. He was twice married. His death occurred August 2, 1858, and at the next annual meeting of the Genesee County Medical Society Dr. R. Williams, of Le Roy, then president, delivered an able and well prepared eulogy upon him.
Dr. Gilbert B. Champlin was here in 1821, Drs. Samuel Z. Ross and Amos Towne (died in 1832) in 1823, and in 1826 we are informed that Dr. H. Thomas delivered a Fourth of July oration. We know nothing more than this about him, but have no doubt his speech was a good one. Dr. E. A. Bigelow was here the same year, and it may be heard Dr. Thomas's oration. The year following (1827) Drs. Richard Dibble and C. Bradford were in company. Dr. Bradford had been here previously, for in The People's Press, of August 20, 1825, we find an account of the operation of bronchotomy performed by him shortly before.

Dr. Charles E. Ford came in 1826 and remained until his death in 1848. He was also postmaster about 1844. In 1827 came Dr. L. B. Cotes. We copy from the Transactions of the New York State Medical Society for 1882 the following obituary notice:

"Levant Ballard Cotes was born in the village of Springfield, Otsego County, N. Y., July 15, 1801, of early English ancestry. His early education was under private tutors and at academies, principally Fairchild Academy, N. Y. He entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, also located at Fairchild, Herkimer County, N. Y., where he graduated January 21, 1826, his diploma bearing the distinguished names of Westel Willoughby, T. Romeyn Beck, and James McNaughton. He settled in Batavia, after graduation, where, for upwards of 50 years he enjoyed a lucrative and successful practice, largely surgical and obstetrical. He was for more than half a century a member of Genesee County Medical Society, during which time he had occupied its several offices; was a permanent member of the Medical Society of the State of New York, elected in 1860; and of the American Medical Association, elected in 1856. He has contributed papers on medical subjects to the local and State societies, and also reports of cases, among the latter being one on Urethrocele, complicated with diseases of the bladder and kidneys. This case was published in the Transactions for 1874. . . . He was curator of the medical department of the University of Buffalo for 25 years; was formerly postmaster of Batavia; and for the last 10 years of his life was U. S. examining surgeon for pensions. In 1827 he married Miss Eliza A. Ketcham, who died in 1872. Dr. Cotes continued in the active practice of his profession until about four years prior to his death, when failing health warned him to relinquish the most laborious part of his duties; he however, still gave the benefit of his large experience and wise judgment, in the way of consultations, up to very near his end, which came quietly and peacefully, at his residence in Batavia, N. Y., September 11, 1880, its immediate cause being apoplexy. He leaves two sons, the eldest, Dr. John R. Cotes, a physician of 30 years' experience, still continuing the practice of medicine at the family residence. [Dr. J. R. Cotes has since died.] Dr. Cotes was a man respected by a large circle of acquaintances, and endeared to the community where he lived so long, as only a man can be who has ministered tenderly and skillfully to the sufferings of his fellow-men for nearly two generations."

In 1828 appeared Drs. Jonathan Hurlburt and William H. Webster, G. B. Worthington, Esq., an old resident of Batavia, speaks highly of Dr. Webster. He practiced here 14 years and died in 1841. Dr. T. H.
Woodruff, whom we have previously mentioned as a partner of Dr. John Cotes, came in 1829, as also did Drs. Eleazer Bingham and Elihu Lee, who seem to have been partners at one time. Then in 1830 Drs. J. V. C. Teller and R. Belden; in 1831 Dr. Zebulon Metcalf; in 1833 Dr. E. H. Rokewood; in 1834 Drs. S. P. Choate, C. V. N. Lent, E. Farnham, and A. F. Dodge, of none of whom can we find much information. Thus it is with the human family: they grow up, become active and useful, and pass away, many of them to fill unremembered graves. Many "mute, inglorious Miltons" of the medical profession have existed, and, it may be, will always exist, only to be soon forgotten.

Dr. Holton Ganson came to Batavia in 1835. He was born in Le Roy in 1810, was a member of the Ganson family of pioneers of that town, and received his early education there. We do not know where he obtained his medical education, but he went to Europe after several years of practice to complete it. He was, as we have seen, for some 20 years a partner with Dr. John Cotes; and the medical firm of "Cotes & Ganson" was known and honored throughout Western New York. Dr. Ganson made a specialty of surgery, and performed with much skill many of the most difficult operations of that department of practice. His practice was large and lucrative, but while still in the prime of active life he received an apoplectic stroke, from which he never fully recovered. He is known as having been the first to use chloroform as an anæsthetic in this region. By the terms of his will his whole estate was to be given to charitable objects in Batavia, viz.: $1,000 to each of the Christian churches, and the remainder to a hospital to be afterwards established. Unfortunately the Doctor wrote his own will, and not being accustomed to that kind of business failed to comply with some legal requirements necessary to its validity. The will was set aside, and the property distributed according to law. There was in the will also a provision for the erection of a monument, at a cost of $550, to General Davis, of Le Roy, who was killed in the War of 1812. His death occurred December 1, 1875, from a second apoplectic seizure.

From 1836 to 1854 there were in Batavia the following: in 1836 Dr. Z. S. Jackson; in 1838 Dr. Thomas E. Everett; in 1841 Dr. Caleb H. Austin; in 1842 Dr. W. B. Slosson; in 1847 Dr. L. D. Stone; in 1848 Dr. C. D. Griswold and Drs. Foote and Baker; and in 1854 Dr. Albert L. Cotes, who was in business with his father (Dr. J. Cotes) a short time, and then removed to the West.

Dr. John Richard Cotes was born in Batavia in 1829. He obtained his early education in the schools of that village, studied medicine with his father, Dr. Levant B. Cotes, and received his diploma from the Buffalo Medical College in 1850. He practiced in Batavia a little while, and went to Michigan, where he remained four years; then returning he continued in practice seven years until the breaking out of the war. He was surgeon of the 151st Regiment N. Y. Volunteers, served during the war, then came back to Batavia, where he enjoyed a good practice until his death in 1884. He was for many years secretary of the Genesee County Medical Society, was a prominent member of the New York State Medical Society, was for four years physician to the Blind Institution, and was coroner of the county for one term. Dr. Cotes was a man of ripe scholarship in medicine, and a thorough and safe practitioner. Disdaining the petty artifices by which lesser men gain notoriety, he kept constantly in mind the honor and dignity of his profession, and observed in all respects its most trivial as well as its weightier obligations. In his intercourse with other physicians he was strictly honorable, and adhered at all times implicitly to the code of ethics, which should govern all regular physicians. He held no truce nor made any terms whatever with quackery either in or out of the profession. His death was occasioned by "Bright's disease" of the kidneys.

Dr. John Root came to Batavia in 1856 or 1857. He was born in Sweden, Monroe County, in 1824, was educated in the schools of his native town, and was graduated at Union College in 1844. He studied medicine with Dr. Van Ingen, of Schenectady, and received his diploma from the Buffalo Medical College in 1850. He practiced awhile in Lockport before settling in Batavia. He married Miss Margaret C. Billings, daughter of Dr. James A. Billings, and had five children, three of whom are now living. Dr. Root was for many years an active member of the Genesee County Medical Society, and contributed several papers at its meetings. He was scholarly and courteous, and a strict observer of professional etiquette. His death was from consumption, and occurred November 29, 1876. The committee which was appointed to draft resolutions concerning his death, in their report to the Medical Society, paid a most flattering though well deserved tribute to his worth as a physician, and as a man.

During the year 1859 Dr. J. Nolton died, aged 61 years. In 1867 Dr. B. H. Benham came to Batavia from Honeoye Falls. He remained a few years, and returned to his former home. He was esteemed by his medical associates, and by the community.
Dr. Norris G. Clark came to Batavia in 1859. He was born at West Bloomfield, Ontario County, in March, 1818, was educated there, and received his diploma from the University of Pennsylvania. He practiced awhile at Clarkson, Monroe County, also at Bloomfield, and came to Batavia to assist his brother, Dr. Oliver P. Clark, whose health had failed. The latter dying soon afterward left Dr. Clark deeply engaged in business. He had a large and profitable practice, which steadily increased until his last sickness. His death occurred July 22, 1876, and was suitably noticed at the next annual meeting of the county society, of which Dr. Clark was a member.

Dr. John L. Curtis was born in Genesee County, and graduated at Philadelphia in 1855 or 1856. He practiced for a time at Elba, and then removed to Batavia. He advertised extensively in the newspapers and otherwise, sold proprietary medicines, and did some other things in violation of the code of ethics of the American Medical Association, so that when, in June, 1870, he applied for admission to the county society his application was rejected. He applied to the Supreme Court for relief, and by a writ of mandamus issued by the court the society received him under protest in January, 1872. Charges were soon preferred against him, and he was expelled April 9, 1874, for "gross violation of the Code of Medical Ethics." He did a large business both in the sale of his medicines and by his practice, having at one time offices at Rochester and Buffalo, as well as at Batavia. He died June 5, 1880, of hemorrhage of the lungs.

BERGEN.

Our researches concerning the early medical history of this town have yielded but scanty results. When the town was formed, in 1812, we learn that Dr. Levi Ward was in practice there, and his name appears upon the roll of the Genesee County Medical Society as early as 1805. The Transactions of the New York State Medical Society show that he was a delegate in 1810. He was evidently a good deal of a man, and was recognized as an equal by those prominent in the profession all over the State. The Ward family seems to have been quite prominent among the pioneers as people of character and enterprise. Dr. Ward moved to Rochester about 1817, where he died.

Dr. Apollos P. Auger did business in Bergen in 1818, and the records of the county society show no other physician from that town until 1826, when Dr. Eugene O. Donoghue joined that organization. He practiced here until his death in 1868. At the first meeting of the county society after his death was announced a committee consisting of Drs. L. B. Cotes, Townsend, and O. R. Croff reported resolutions concerning him, in which tribute was paid to his faithful membership of the society and of the profession, and "the courtesy, kindness, and affection manifested in all his professional intercourse, as well as in his private, social, and domestic life." These resolutions were unanimously adopted by the society, and published in the local papers.

In 1836 Dr. Thomas M. Hendry appears to have been in Bergen, but how long a time he remained we are not informed.

Dr. Levi Fay is registered in 1840. He was president of the Genesee County Medical Society in 1853, and excepting those physicians now in practice, with whom this chapter has nothing to do, no other name appears until 1868, when Dr. M. J. Munger joined the society. He attended the meetings for a few years, and then appeared no more. His residence was at North Bergen.

In 1868 there were in Bergen Drs. R. Andrews, M. B. Gage, and R. Gay, none of whom joined the county society, and we do not know their present whereabouts. Dr. Andrews advertised as a cancer doctor. Drs. Gilbert Churchill, R. Gay, and Orrin Lee are also mentioned as having practiced at some time.

BETHANY.

In 1813 Dr. Benjamin Packard, of Bethany, was elected a member of the Genesee County Medical Society. As the town was organized the previous year he may justly be called the pioneer physician. In 1816 Dr. Daniel Spalding and in 1817 Dr. Daniel Rumsey appeared, and in 1818 Dr. Jonathan K. Barlow's name is recorded. It is a somewhat singular circumstance that in the reports of the Genesee County Medical Society to the New York State Medical Society from 1825 to 1841, in each of which the names of the officers are given, Dr. Barlow's name is not given twice alike. It is always Dr. Barlow of Bethany; but it is sometimes James Barlow; next Jotham K. Barlow, again Jonathan A. Barlow, etc., etc. It seems that the secretary either of the county society, or that of the State, thought with the late Josh Billings, "that it was n't much of a man who could n't spell a word but one way." Dr. Barlow stood well in the profession, was a man of scientific attainments, and somewhere in "the forties" procured the necessary apparatus and went about lecturing upon electricity. He explained the magnetic telegraph, thunder storms, etc., and gave his audiences an opportunity to be shocked. We have no record of him later than 1850 or 1851. It is believed that he resided and practiced in Bethany more than 30 years. In 1819 Dr. Beriah Douglas was in Bethany. We suppose him to have been the same Dr. Douglas who practiced in Le Roy for a time. Dr. William W. Markham came in 1829, Dr. Theodore C. Hurd in 1835, and another Dr. Hurd (William P.) in 1837. At East Bethany there was for a time Dr. Loomis, and at Linden Dr. John G. Meachern, who afterwards removed to Warsaw, and Dr. John Howard. Old residents speak also of a Dr. Alden, at one time partner of Dr. J. K. Barlow, at Bethany Center.

BYRON.

Prior to the formation, in 1820, of this town there were residing within its present limits in 1812 Dr. Silas Taylor, and in 1813 Dr. Samuel Taggart. Of them we know nothing but their names. In 1821 Dr. Oliver Hulett is recorded, and in 1828 Dr. Landon D. Woodruff.

The town of Byron must have been a very healthy place of residence, for no other physician is mentioned as having come there until 1840, when Dr. Emery made his appearance. Sanford Emery, M. D., was born in Vermont, was graduated from the Burlington Medical College in 1838, removed to Byron in 1840, and practiced there about 30 years. He then went to Alabama, doing business there a short time, thence to the northern part of Batavia, where he remained until his death in 1880. He married, first, Elizabeth Warner; his second wife was Chloe Beebee, of Byron. He had four children by his first marriage, and three by the second.

Dr. J. D. Fowler was a son of Deacon David J. Fowler, one of the pioneer settlers of Covington, Wyoming County. He studied medicine with his brother-in-law, Dr. Eben Warner, was graduated, and began the practice of his profession in Byron. He became a member of the Genesee County Medical Society in 1841, and died two years later from the poison received in a post mortem examination. He was a young man of great promise, and his early death was much regretted by all who knew him.

Dr. Appleton W. Billings was born in Barre, N. Y., in 1821. When 24 years of age he commenced to study medicine with Dr. Willard Eaton, of Orleans County, and was with him six years. In 1851 he settled to practice his profession at South Byron, and located where he now resides. Until 1888 he faithfully and successfully administered to the sick and afflicted, and is now on the retired list as much as his old patrons will permit him. He married, in 1851, Miss Lavina T. Thatcher, of Orleans County, and they have had seven children. Their son Charles and daughter Hattie reside near their parents.
In 1846 Homer P. Smith, M. D., resided in Byron, and in 1852 Dr. C. C. F. Gay recorded his name on the secretary's book of the Genesee County Medical Society. Dr. Gay was born at Pittsfield, Berkshire County, Mass., January 7, 1821. While a mere lad his parents removed to Lebanon Springs, Columbia County, N. Y. His early education was received at the schools of that vicinity, and at the Collegiate Institute at Brockport, N. Y. In 1844 he began the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. Joseph Bates, of Lebanon Springs. He attended lectures at Woodstock, Vt., and also at the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, from which he was graduated in 1846. He took a course of lectures at the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, after his graduation. He began practice at Bennington, Vt., and afterward removed to Byron, this county. His success here was good, but he desired enlarged opportunities, and in 1853 removed to Buffalo, where he remained until his death. Here he advanced rapidly in professional esteem, and soon took a leading position. He was for many years surgeon to the Buffalo General Hospital, was a prominent member of the Erie County Medical Society, and of the Buffalo Medical and Surgical Association. He was also a permanent member of the New York State Medical Society, and of the American Medical Association. During the last war he was surgeon in charge of Fort Porter. In 1883 he was appointed professor of operative and clinical surgery at Niagara University, Buffalo. Aside from his knowledge of medicine Dr. Gay was an ardent student of the natural sciences, botany being his favorite branch. He died at Buffalo, March 27, 1887.

About 1864 Dr. Earl B. Lounsbury came from East Pembroke to Byron. He was here more than 10 years, when he removed to the West, where, after a further service of 11 years, he died. During Dr. Lounsbury's membership of the county society he was one of its most faithful members. He made several reports of cases, participated actively in its discussions, and was loyal to its requirements. His wife was Miss F. M. Rumsey, of Bethany.

Dr. A. C. Hall, of South Byron, and Dr. Lafayette Carpenter, of Byron Center, are mentioned, but we have no knowledge of the time of their residence here.

In 1873 Dr. B. A. Fuller located at Byron Center, and at about the same time Dr. George U. Gleason was at South Byron. Dr. Fuller removed to Le Roy shortly after the death of his father (Dr. A. W. Fuller) in 1877, where he now resides.
In the year 1868 there were also in Byron (so it is said) Drs. Joseph C. Walker and A. W. Billings.

DARIEN.

The physicians of this town have been James E. Seaver, 1817; William P. Harris, 1829; Erastus Cross, 1830; John M. Harrington, 1832; Isaiah Rano, 1836; and E. W. Marsh, 1870. Other information concerning a few early physicians may be obtained by referring to the history of the town.

ELBA.

In the year 1823 Dr. Amasa Briggs had "a local habitation and a name" in the then new town of Elba. He is supposed to have been the first physician in the place, although some claim priority for a Dr. Woodward, of whom we can learn nothing. In 1829 Dr. Benedict practiced there, and in 1830 Dr. J. A. Campbell. Soon after this time Dr. Jonas S. Billings came to Elba. He joined the County Medical Society in 1833, usually attended its meetings, and participated in its discussions. The last meeting he attended was in June, 1869; and we believe his death occurred soon after. Dr. Francis Smiley died at Elba in 1843, aged 86 years. We have no details of his residence there. In 1831 Dr. James H. Smith is registered, and in 1841 Dr. E. B. Benedict. We do not know whether this is the same Dr. Benedict previously mentioned or not; if so, he was somewhat dilatory in joining the county society.

We do not know of any other physicians of Elba excepting those now there.

LE ROY.

The first physician inhabiting the present town of Le Roy (then Caledonia) was Dr. William Coe, who came in the year 1803. In 1814 he lived on the farm now owned by Mr. Osborn, west of the village. He had the reputation of being an honest, worthy man, and a good physician.

Dr. Ella G. Smith was here in 1805, and Dr. Fred Fitch moved in in 1808. He stood well in the profession, and was very stirring and enterprising. He raised a company of artillery, of which he became captain. While attending with his company a "training" at Stafford he was wounded accidentally in the leg, and suffered amputation in consequence. He built the house where Rev. Samuel Bowden now lives, and also one formerly occupied by R. L. Lawson. We cannot ascertain the date of his death.
Dr. William Sheldon rode into Le Roy on horseback one evening in 1810, and stopped at the famous "Ganson tavern," where is now the residence of H. H. Olmsted. He was looking for a place to practice, and had with him all his earthly possessions, consisting of his horse, saddle and bridle, a pair of saddle-bags, containing a small stock of medicines, with a lancet, and turnkey for extracting teeth. He had ridden from Bennington, Vt., and was weary with his long journey, and nearly penniless. He, however, turned his horse out to grass, made a supper of bread and milk, and went to bed hoping something might turn up to enable him to pay his bill in the morning. Fortunately for him Mrs. Ganson was taken quite ill during the night, and the young M. D. was called up to prescribe. His efforts were quite successful, and as there was a good deal of sickness in the settlement, and no physician, he was urged by the neighbors to remain there. This he did, and for many years enjoyed an active and lucrative practice. During the War of 1812 he was for a time captain of a militia company, but afterwards became surgeon and aid-de-camp upon the staff of General Davis, and was near him when he was killed. He participated in seven battles; was taken prisoner at Black Rock, and carried to Montreal, where he remained for about six months, being discharged in May, 1814. He filled, with much credit, several positions of responsibility, serving as county sheriff two terms.

In June, 1871, Dr. Sheldon, by invitation of the writer, attended the annual meeting of the Genesee County Medical Society. We quote from the secretary's report the following:

"Dr. Sheldon, from Le Roy, one of the pioneers of the society, now old and feeble, whose membership dates back to 1810, by invitation proceeded to make a few remarks concerning the early days of the society. He spoke of the progress made in medicine and surgery since he had ceased to be an active practitioner, and of many other things relating to medicine, which were very interesting, and were listened to with great pleasure."

Dr. Sheldon died in January, 1874.

Dr. Chauncey P. Smith came in in 1814. He lived for a time on the Woodward farm north of the village, and afterwards built the stone house, on Lake street, now occupied by S. Loucks. A popular and hard working man, he saved a large property during the quarter century he practiced here, but investing it in the drug business in company with a dishonest partner, he lost nearly all. His friends made him comfortable in his old age, until his mental powers gave way from brain disease, and he died in the alms house.

Dr. Elizur Butler, of Le Roy, joined the Genesee County Medical Society in 1816, but we can find nothing more about him.
Dr. Ezekiel Kelsey, born in Greenfield, Saratoga County, N. Y., in 1801, came to the Genesee country with his father about 1817, settling one mile south of Le Roy. He taught school a number of years, then studied for a physician, and opened up an office about 1830, and continued a very successful practice till his death in 1840. He was buried in what is known as the Van Allen Cemetery.

In 1818 Dr. Lakey moved to Le Roy. He is described as being an active and intelligent practitioner, and with a remarkable memory for incidents. He staid a few years, and went to Palmyra, N. Y.

Dr. Edmund Barnes resided here at about the same time. He married a sister of Henry Olmsted. He built the house just east of Mrs. Bissell's, on West Main street, and died there a few years later. His widow afterwards married Dr. Chauncey Smith, before mentioned.

In March, 1819, Dr. Stephen O. Almy received a license to practice from the board of censors of Genesee County, and began business with Dr. Fitch, his preceptor. Dr. Almy was born in Sterling, Conn., June 18, 1798. His parents soon afterward removed to Vermont, then to Saratoga County, N. Y., and finally to the present town of Pavilion. While still a lad he spent his summers in clearing off timber, and his winters in teaching school. During the summer of 1815 he cleared off 10 acres of land where Roanoke village now stands. After one year's partnership with Dr. Fitch he bought out his little drug store, and went twice on foot to Albany to purchase drugs. In 1821 he attended medical lectures at Yale College, and received a diploma from that institution. In 1823 he married Maria B. Brown, and built a cottage where Ingham University now stands. After about 15 years of active practice he engaged in the lumber business at Olean, in company with Herman Le Roy, sons, and grandsons. He remained at Olean until 1841, when he removed to Cincinnati and engaged still more extensively in the lumber trade. This lasted but a short time, for his many friends, knowing his professional skill, urged him so strongly to resume practice that he finally consented to do so. He practiced about eight years, when his health failed, and forming a partnership with Dr. Alfred Wilcox, a former medical associate in Le Roy, engaged in a private banking business. The financial crash of 1854 nearly ruined them, and Dr. Almy returned to medicine again. He was in Buffalo during 1855 and 1856, and the writer, then a student, remembers well his cheerful face and pleasant smile. He soon returned to Cincinnati, and practiced there until 1866, when the death of his wife, followed soon after by that of his daughter, broke up his household, and as soon as he could settle up matters he returned to Le Roy with the intention of spending the remnant of his days there. In September, 1869, he was attacked with apoplexy, resulting in hemiplegia, or paralysis of one side. He lived after this a little more than seven years, in an entirely helpless condition, being an inmate of the home of the late S. C. Kelsey. His death occurred January 2, 1877. We quote the following from a notice of his death which appeared in one of the Le Roy newspapers:

"No man ever enjoyed a fuller measure of popular esteem and affection than did Dr. Almy. He was every man's friend, every man's helper. He had a word of good counsel and cheer for all, and smiles of approval for all who needed them."

Dr. Benjamin Hill, a native of Guilford, Conn., was born April 15, 1765. In 1788 he studied medicine with Dr. Cone, of Pittsfield, Mass. He practiced in Killingworth, Conn., about 40 years. In 1808 he came to Le Roy on horseback, and bought 448 acres of land. In 1819 his son Albert came out and began clearing the land. In 1826 Dr. Hill came again, and in 1828 he brought his family, locating on 160 acres of an additional purchase, residing there until his death in April, 1849, at Pavilion. His practice in Connecticut was very extensive, but limited in this county. Being contemporary with Dr. Sheldon and others he was often called as counsel. He was a self-made man, and respected by all his friends and neighbors.

Of Drs. B. Douglas, who was in Le Roy in 1819 or 1820; Warren A. Cowdery, 1820; Daniel Woodward, 1823; and Nicholas D. Gardner, 1828, we can find nothing more than the record of their names. Dr. Douglas, it is believed, went to Bethany.

In 1830 Dr. Alfred Wilcox, after two years' practice in Pennsylvania, took up his abode here. He was a partner with Dr. Almy, Dr. Pratt, and others during the 20 years he resided here. He resumed partnership with Dr. Almy in Cincinnati, as before mentioned. His health failing he went to California and died there.

Dr. John Codman came to Le Roy when quite young, followed teaching awhile, and studied medicine with Dr. Almy. He practiced here from 1836 to 1840, then removed to Adrian, Mich., and after 10 years to Kalamazoo, where he died in 1870, aged 73. He was an excellent physician, a consistent Christian, and a pronounced temperance man.

In 1830 appears the name of Dr. Prescott Lawrence. He had the faculty of winning the confidence of his patrons in a very marked degree. He lived but a few years and died here. Of Drs. Graham Fitch and
THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

The year 1834 brought to Le Roy Dr. Charles Smith, younger brother of Chauncey Smith, and Dr. Ezekiel Kelsey. The latter died after a few years. Like many others he taught school to enable him to pursue his medical studies.

Dr. Caleb H. Austin was here from 1836 to 1840. Dr. Benjamin Bliss also commenced business here in 1836. He built a house on the present site of Mrs. Barrett's, and followed his calling acceptably to the people until near his death, which took place in 1843.

Dr. Almond Pratt came in 1837. He staid about 15 years, when he removed to Palmyra, and thence to Rochester, where he died.

In 1840 Dr. Joseph Tozier came to Le Roy. He had practiced previously in York, Livingston County. He removed in 1845 to Clarkson, Monroe County, where he died, after many years of successful practice, respected by all who knew him. His son, Dr. L. L. Tozier, has been for many years the leading physician of Batavia.

In 1841 Dr. D. C. Chamberlain made his appearance in Le Roy, where he remained 37 years. We cannot do better than copy a letter written to the present writer by Dr. Chamberlain, in response to some inquiries addressed him concerning his life, etc., omitting some paragraphs of a purely personal character:

"Dear Sir: I am in receipt of yours of the 30th ult., and in answer thereto would say: I was born of American parents (emigrants from Vermont), in the parish of Mascouche, in the then province of Lower Canada, now called 'Quebec,' and first saw the light of day January 8, 1815, the day 'Old Hickory' fought the battle of New Orleans, and at the age of eight was sent from the paternal roof to be brought up under the care of a maternal aunt residing in Hubbardton, Rutland County, Vt. Here I passed through boyhood into early manhood, acquiring as good a preparatory education as straitened circumstances and opportunities would allow. In 1833 commenced the study of medicine under the instruction, and with the aid, of Dr. Charles W. Horton, in Sudbury, Vt., and after three courses of lectures in the Vermont Academy of Medicine was graduated in November, 1837.

"I commenced practice in Cuttingsville, Rutland County, Vt., in July, 1838, and remained there until January, 1840; then 'struck tent,' and took a private course of lectures on anatomy and surgery at Castleton under instruction of the late Prof. Robert Nelson, the Canadian patriot and refugee. Soon after, the health of my old preceptor failing, I became associated with him in practice at Sudbury, Vt., and there remained until 1841, when I again packed up for a move, having in mind this time the 'Genesee country,' which was then regarded as quite away West. After debating the pros and cons between Le Roy and Warsaw—the latter place having just been designated by the commissioner appointed as the site of the county buildings of the newly-organized county of Wyoming—I made a choice of Le Roy as my future field of labor, and in July, 1841, hung out a doctor's 'shingle' and inserted a card in the Le Roy Gazette. I was received as a member of the Genesee County Medical Society at its annual meeting in January, 1842.

"For further details of my career in Le Roy I would respectfully refer you to the old inhabitants of that town, adding only that I left Le Roy in September, 1878, since which time I have enjoyed all the blessings and comforts that human life can expect;—more perhaps than I deserve,—but I enjoy them all the same.

"As to the practice of our noble profession, I have been egotistical enough to regard whatever I have done or may do in that line as more of a favor to others than to myself.

"The old partaker of my joys and soother of my sorrows has gone down the hill of life, and sleeps at the foot in Machpelah Cemetery, and I am now also moving down, and by and by we both shall 'sleep thegither at the foot,' like good, old 'John Anderson, my Jo.'

"As regards my military service, I was engaged and interested in 1861, during the fall, in enlisting and recruiting men for the suppression of the Rebellion; was examining surgeon of the recruits that were brought to Le Roy to form the regiment that was finally organized and mustered into the United States service as the 105th Regiment, N. Y. Inf. Vols., and was commissioned as its surgeon. I went with it to the field, and to the front. We were always in the 'Army of the Potomac.' I continued my connection with it until the expiration of my commission, March 26, 1865, and not relishing a falling from a senior to a junior rank, which would occur in case of new commissions, remained an independent volunteer until Lee's surrender at Appomattox."

This concludes what we wish to publish of Dr. Chamberlain's letter, and inaddition we can most heartily say that no physician of our acquaintance ever was so universally respected and esteemed as was he. During his 37 years of practice in Le Roy he devoted himself entirely to his patients, and in attending so carefully to their interests greatly neglected his own, so that, although doing a large business, he never accumulated much property. He is now in receipt of a pension, which is sufficient for his needs, and a seat of honor and a warm welcome always await his acceptance in the homes of all his old friends. When, in the years 1852 and 1853, typhoid fever prevailed so extensively in and about Le Roy, Dr. Chamberlain was one of the first physicians to substitute the supporting treatment for the bleeding and purging plan previously in use. He gained a well deserved reputation in the treatment of this disease, and was called often in consultation to neighboring towns.

The Doctor says in his letter that he left Le Roy in September, 1878, but he says nothing of the farewell banquet given in his honor by his fellow physicians of Genesee County at the residence of Dr. Cleveland, in Le Roy, and the presentation to him of a silver tea set. On this occasion Dr. S. Barrett, a neighbor and professional friend of many years standing, made the presentation speech, in the course of which he referred to a time, when Dr. Moses Barrett and Dr. Chamberlain occupied adjoining houses, and they were wont to sit with their families of a summer evening upon the back piazzas. Dr. Barrett played the violin, and Dr. Chamberlain was somewhat terpsichorally inclined, which gave rise to a couplet well known in those days:

"Moses and David were neighbors by chance; Moses did fiddle for David to dance."

In 1842 Dr. Moses Barrett (mentioned above) settled in Le Roy. He was a man of superior scholarship in his profession and out of it; fond of the study of the sciences, and deeply interested in matters relating to the education of the young. He remained here eight years, then went to Wisconsin, and was appointed superintendent of the State Reform School. He was afterward elected to the chair of chemistry and natural science in the college at Ripon. He died there soon after, aged 58.

In 1849 came Dr. G. Taber, and in 1850 Dr. Solomon Barrett. Dr. Barrett was born at Rowe, Mass., February 23, 1810, received his medical education at Berkshire (Mass.) Medical College, and was graduated from that institution in 1833. He practiced in Buffalo for some time before removing to Le Roy. His specialty was surgery, and he made most of the operations known to that science. The Taliacotian operation for making a new nose was performed by him; also nearly all those pertaining to the eye. He had at one time an eye infirmary at Le Roy. He became nearly blind in his latter years, and died at Le Roy, February 3, 1884. Dr. Barrett was an industrious student, and a very skillful operator. He was also a sincere Christian.

In 1856 Dr. Chauncey M. Smith began medical practice. He was a student of Dr. S. Barrett, and was for a time partner with Dr. Chamberlain. He was, in his younger days, a school teacher, and became town superintendent of schools under the old law. He was possessed of a good medical education, and being personally quite popular soon acquired a large practice. He died of typhoid fever in 1864.

In 1864 Dr. Asa W. Fuller made his appearance among Le Roy physicians. Mature in years, with long experience in practice, he at once gained a large clientage. He was born in the town of Lisbon, Conn., in July, 1817, and after having obtained a thorough preliminary education commenced the study of medicine. This he continued until he was graduated from the medical department of Yale College, New Haven, Conn. He was married in 1839, and soon after removed to the State of Rhode Island, where he practiced his profession for nine years, thence removing to the town of Middlebury, Wyoming County, N. Y., where he had a successful practice of 14 years, until 1864, when, against the wishes of the whole community, he removed with his family to Le Roy, and entered at once upon an extensive practice, to which he devoted his whole time and talent, with a determination to overcome all obstacles, and giving excellent satisfaction to his patrons. For the last 13 years of his life, and up to the day of his death, he well sustained in Le Roy the reputation of a faithful, honest, and skillful physician, a genial companion, and a true and tried friend. His death occurred on January 29, 1877.

Dr. O. P. Barber became a member of the Genesee County Medical Society in 1870. He studied medicine with Dr. S. Barrett (whose daughter he afterward married), practiced a short time in Le Roy, and removed to Michigan.

Dr. George Emerson was a student, and afterwards a partner, of Dr. Chamberlain, remained in Le Roy a few years, and went West—we think to Nebraska—in the year 1878. Dr. Emerson made many friends in Le Roy, and did a good business while there.

Dr. George McNaughton came to Le Roy in 1880, but remained a short time, and removed to Brooklyn, where, we believe, he still remains. He was a student of Dr. Menzie, of Caledonia, and was a very promising young man.

There have been several homeopathis and eclectics in Le Roy at different times, but we can find out but little concerning them. Dr. Gage, one of the former class, was there for some time between 1860 and 1870, then removed to the South, and, we believe, died there. It is possible that the names of some early practitioners have been omitted, but any one will recognize the difficulty of finding out about people who died 60 or 70 years ago.

Oakfield.

Dr. Andrew Thompson was in Oakfield as early as 1830, at which date he became a member of the County Medical Society. No other physician's name appears upon the roll, from this town, until 1841, when Dr. Horace Clark is recorded. He removed to Bergen in 1876, and died at that place. It is said that as early as 1814 Dr. A. Thompson was living within the present limits of the town, and a Dr. Garret Davis is also mentioned, but no definite accounts of either have been obtained. Dr. William Pardee was in Oakfield in 1868, and for a few years afterward until his death, in 1884, by consumption. He was for a time partner with Dr. A. P. Jackson. He graduated from the Buffalo Medical College.
WHEN, in the year 1841, the town of Pavilion was formed there were within its present limits in practice Dr. Warren Fay and Dr. Abel Tennant. Dr. Fay was at the village of Pavilion, where he had resided for many years; and Dr. Tennant was at South Le Roy, which became, by the organization of the new town, Pavilion Center.

Dr. Fay was born at Walpole, N. H., in 1797. He received a good common school education, was for some time a school teacher, and finally studied medicine under the tutelage of Dr. Daniel White, who seems to have been a prominent practitioner in those early days. He attended lectures at the Castleton (Vt.) Medical Academy, received a diploma from the Livingston County (N. Y.) Medical Society, June 24, 1823, signed by Caleb Chapin, president, and coming to Pavilion soon after began an active practice, which continued for a full half century. He was what is now called a "heroic practitioner," using the lancet very freely, and giving large doses of coloamel and jalap. He achieved both fame and fortune, and died February 18, 1875.

"A. Tennant, Botanist," as the sign upon his office read, was a native of Connecticut, but where he received his education we have been unable to ascertain. He believed that in the plants which nature provides there are all the remedies needful for the cure of disease. He began practice about 1812, and continued it until blindness and rheumatism compelled him to abandon it, some 40 years afterward. He published a work called Tennant's Botany, in 1837. This was printed at Batavia by D. D. Waite, for many years editor of the Republican Advocate. Dr. Tennant, while in his prime, had a large practice, and an excellent reputation for skill and success. He removed to Pennsylvania in 1856, and died soon after.

In 1842 Dr. S. C. Upson came to Pavilion. He was born in Bristol, Conn., March 29, 1792. He received his diploma at Hartford, Conn, in 1816, commenced practice at Fabius, N. Y., and remained there until his removal to Pavilion. He lived here about four years and removed to Nunda, Livingston County, where he died April 20, 1889. Dr. Upson was emphatically a gentleman of the old school, extremely affable, polite, and kind hearted. He is remembered with affection by many of our old residents. At one time he made and sold a preparation known as Upson's dandelion syrup, which had a great deal of popularity.

Somewhere about these times Dr. Ira Webb, a root doctor from Vermont, came to Pavilion. He remained a year or two and went to Le Roy. We have not been able to learn much about him, although his syrups were considered very useful by many people.

In 1849 Dr. William M. Sprague resumed the practice which he had previously given up to engage in other business. He was born in New Marlborough, Mass., in 1803, and came to Covington with his father in 1812. He attended school at Middlebury Academy, then a noted institution of learning, studied medicine with Drs. Daniel White and Warren Fay, attended medical lectures at Pittsfield, Mass., and received his diploma from the Genesee County Medical Society, John Cotes, president, March 9, 1829. He practiced about three years, and then formed a partnership with his three brothers in the mercantile, milling, and farming business, which was dissolved in the year above mentioned. During his absence from practice he was postmaster, justice of the peace, and Sessions justice, and was regarded as one of the best informed politicians of the vicinity as well as an excellent general scholar. He died August 28, 1868, and it is probable no man's death was more generally mourned by all his acquaintance than was his. His professional services, as well as his friendly counsel, were highly valued by all who knew him.

Some time during the year 1867 Dr. Charles Morgan, a young physician, came to Pavilion. He remained but a short time, and removed to Mount Morris, Livingston County. He is spoken of as a promising young man.

It is supposed that about the usual number of traveling quacks have visited Pavilion, and made money out of the credulous and weak-minded people who believe in such things, but none of them are worthy of record, and we have given all we could ascertain concerning the respectable medical men who lived and practiced here.

PEMBROKE.

DR. ABIJAH W. STODDARD was the pioneer medical man of Pembroke. He studied medicine with Dr. Sill, of Hartford, Washington County, N. Y., and soon after receiving his diploma came to Pembroke (then Batavia). This was in 1810 or 1811. He located where the village of Corfu has since been built, and commenced practice among the first settlers of the surrounding country. He continued in business here until about 1854 or 1855, when he removed to Milwaukee, Wis., where he died at the home of a friend, in 1860. In the course of his long practice in Pembroke and surrounding towns he accumulated a fair fortune—which was absorbed by his son's business in Rochester.
In 1820 Dr. Elihu Lee was practicing in Pembroke; in 1830 Dr. Aaron Long was registered as residing in Corfu; but previous to this Dr. David Long, with his brother John, had come in as early as 1808, and gave the name Long’s Corners to the settlement now called Corfu. Dr. Long resided for many years in a house occupying the site of Dr. Crane’s present residence, just north of the principal four corners of the village. He is spoken of as a man of energy and enterprise.

In 1831 Dr. Alanson Owen was in business at Richville, and during the same year somewhere in the town were Drs. J. S. Dodge, James S. Grout, and Barton Streeter.

In 1833 William E. Brown practiced at East Pembroke; in 1840 Dr. Samuel S. Knight, of Pembroke, joined the County Medical Society; and we find no further mention of physicians coming into the town until 1864, when Dr. Isaiah Rano came from Darien, and remained until his death, in May, 1880.

Sometime in the year 1864 Dr. John Durboraw came in, and lived here two or three years.

Dr. Earl B. Lounsbury was born in the town of Alexander in 1838, was graduated from the Buffalo Medical College, and began practice at East Pembroke in 1864. He remained about one and one-half years, and then removed to Byron Center.

In 1867 Dr. L. B. Parmelee was practicing at East Pembroke. He remained a few years, went to Rochester for a short time, and thence to Batavia, where he still resides.

It is believed that Dr. A. G. Ellinwood, now of Attica, was located for a short time at East Pembroke,—probably about 1860,—but this is uncertain.

In 1868 Dr. Joshua W. Read came to Corfu. He was born in Batavia in 1837. He was a graduate of the State Normal School at Albany, and taught school at Peekskill four years. He studied medicine at that place with Dr. Knight, graduated in 1866, practiced at Bloomington, Ill., two years, and then removed to Corfu. After remaining two years he went to Newark, N. J., where he still remains.

In 1868 Dr. H. W. Cobb was at Indian Falls, but soon removed to the West. Dr. George H. Norton practiced at East Pembroke from 1868 until his death, in 1874 or 1875. A Dr. Lund, now of Medina, N. Y., was at one time in Pembroke.

There have been at different times in Pembroke homeopathic physicians, but none of them seem to have remained long, and we hear only of Drs. Scott and MacPherson.
In 1869 Dr. Absalom Billington was in Corfu. He remained but a short time, and we cannot ascertain where he went.

Dr. Albert Crawford moved to Corfu in 1871. He was born in Darien in 1841, studied medicine with Dr. Milton E. Potter, and received his diploma from the Buffalo Medical College in 1862. He commenced practice at Cairo, Ill., and remained there until his removal to Corfu. He was here 10 years, and then sold out to Dr. William Parker and went to Buffalo, where he still resides.

Dr. Parker was born at Clarence, Erie County. He was graduated at Buffalo in 1880, came to Corfu soon after, remained but a short time, then spent one year in Clarence, and finally removed to Buffalo. He is at present attending physician to the Erie County almshouse.

The above mentioned are all the physicians we can learn of as formerly practicing in the town of Pembroke. It is quite possible some names may have been omitted, but we have striven industriously to obtain them all. The failure of some to join the County Medical Society has prevented a permanent record of their names, and we have been obliged to rely upon the recollections of old inhabitants for many things.

STAFFORD.

In 1821 Benjamin Davis hailed from the then yearling town of Stafford as its first Medicinae Doctor. Dr. Ammi R. R. Butler, however, removed to Alexander from Stafford some time prior to 1823, and it may be that he was in the latter place as early as was Dr. Davis. In 1829 Drs. Jonathan G. Abbott and Thomas Blanchard are recorded as residents of Stafford, and about the same time Dr. Elizur Butler and his brother Samuel practiced there.

In 1831 Dr. W. B. Slawson was in business at Morganville. How long he remained we are not informed, but he was a member of the County Medical Society in 1837. Dr. Thomas D. Morrison is registered in 1839 and in 1840 Dr. Lucius M. Haynes. Dr. Haynes married a sister of Stephen Crocker, Esq., who, after the death of Dr. Haynes, married Rev. Richard Radley. He practiced in Stafford until his death, May 19, 1854. In 1851 Dr. Mark W. Tomlinson came to Stafford, and in 1852 Dr. Theophilus S. Loomis. Dr. Loomis removed to East Bethany soon after, and died there.

In 1855 Dr. Henry Pamphilon opened an office in Stafford. He was born in Hackney, near London, Eng., January 14, 1828. He was educated in London, and came to America in 1851, locating in Lancaster, Erie County. In 1855 he removed to Stafford, remaining there until his death, which occurred March 13, 1884. Dr. Pamphilon was an excellent physician and a most agreeable companion. His knowledge was not confined to medicine, but was extensive on many subjects. He was quite an elocutionist, and read extracts from Dickens remarkably well. He could also dance a hornpipe in good style. He was highly respected by his brother physicians, and by the community at large.

Somewhere about the year 1855 Dr. T. S. King located at Stafford. He was born and educated at Plainfield, N. J., and received his diploma from the University of New York. He remained in Stafford until his death, which took place December 24, 1867, at the age of 42 years.

Dr. Ayer practiced a few years in Stafford. He is highly spoken of as a practitioner, and is also remembered as a man of decided opinions and strong convictions. During his residence at Stafford, in the year 1863, when people were greatly excited over war matters, Dr. Ayer was arrested and taken to the jail at Batavia for the expression of somewhat decided democratic opinions. His imprisonment was, however, of brief duration, but the Doctor never recovered from the sense of oppression and humiliation which that event occasioned. He soon after went to Buffalo, and enjoyed an active and profitable practice there for several years, and until his death. His widow resides in Buffalo, as does also a daughter, the wife of Dr. Rollin L. Banta, one of the most prominent of the younger physicians of that city.

Dr. F. L. Stone was born at Marcy, Oneida County, in 1834. He received an academic education at Whitestown Seminary, studied medicine with Dr. Babcock, of Oriskany, and was graduated at Bellevue College, New York city, in 1865. He remained for a time with Dr. Babcock, and in 1868 came to Stafford. He remained seven years, and removed to Caledonia, Livingston County, where he practiced five years, going thence to Le Roy, where he now resides. Dr. Stone was successful in his practice at Stafford, and made many friends there.

WILLIAM MORGAN.

EXCEPTING, perhaps, the events of the War of 1812 no occurrence in the history of Western New York ever so generally attracted the attention of the country as the disappearance of the Free Mason, Morgan, in the autumn of 1826, with the uprising against the Masonic fraternity which his mysterious fate produced. No other event, therefore, more fairly demands a chapter in the history of the county where the circumstances connected with the affair occurred.

William Morgan was born in Virginia, and was by trade a stone mason. He opened a store in Richmond, in 1819, but in 1821 removed to Canada and went into the brewing business. His brewery having been burnt he moved to Rochester and resumed his trade of mason. While here (living next door to a Dr. Dyer, and also near Thurlow Weed) it is supposed he wrote out his exposure of Masonry. He had a wife and two children. Leaving them he went to Batavia in order to get his book printed. Pretending to be an architect he assisted Thomas McCully in building the Eagle Hotel, and lived for a time in McCully’s house (to the east of Eager’s brewery), and also lived where Hewitt’s store now is. He also worked on the old stone building back of the postoffice. As near as can be ascertained Morgan was made a Royal Arch Mason at Le Roy. He was represented as being a poor man of indifferent character (which latter fact is suggested as the chief consideration which led him to publish the secrets of the fraternity of which he was a member); was also intemperate and neglected his family; and because of his habits he was expelled from the chapter. Soon after this (presumably in June or July) he began (with the assistance of David C. Miller, editor of the Republican Advocate) to publish a book on “Jachin and Boaz,” with alterations. The work of publishing was secretly done, Miller at the time occupying the upper part of two buildings on Main street, Batavia.

On July 25th Morgan was taken into custody by the sheriff, for debt, but was soon released. The Ontario Messenger, published at Canandaigua, of August 9, 1826, contained the following notice and caution:

“If a man calling himself Captain William Morgan should intrude himself upon the community, they should be on their guard, particularly the Masonic fraternity. Morgan was in the village in May last, and his conduct here and elsewhere calls forth this notice.

Morgan is considered a swindler and a dangerous man.”

This notice was also copied in the Batavia papers. September 10th Ebenezer C. Kingsley obtained from Justice Chipman, of Canandaigua, a warrant for the arrest of Morgan on a charge of having stolen a shirt and cravat, which Kingsley had in fact lent him the preceding May. On this warrant Hayward, a constable, proceeded to Le Roy (where he got it endorsed by a justice there), thence to Batavia, where he called at Morgan’s, told his errand, and no objections being offered Morgan repaired to Danold’s tavern, where he ate breakfast with the constable and his friends. While in custody Miller, his bailor, called at Danold’s and objected to Morgan being taken beyond the jail limits, because of liabilities he (Miller) might suffer for. Hayward insisted on carrying out his service, and did so. Arriving at Le Roy Hayward offered to take him before the justice, that he might give bail for appearance at the next term of court.

Morgan declined acceptance, saying he could convince Kingsley, the tavern-keeper at Canandaigua, he did not intend to steal. Morgan’s arrest at Batavia was without force. When taken before Justice Chipman he proved his innocence. He was immediately rearrested, on a civil suit for $2, the amount of a tavern bill against him held by one Ackley, which had been assigned to Nicholas G. Cheesebro, the master of the Masonic lodge at Canandaigua. Judgment was given against Morgan, to satisfy which he offered his coat. The offer was refused, and he was lodged in Ontario County jail. (No connection has ever been established between the first persons arresting Morgan and the others who abducted him, except Cheesebro, who was in both actions.)

This was on the evening of the 11th of September, 1826. Twenty-four hours later members of the Masonic fraternity called at the jail, and in the absence of the jailor advised his wife to release Morgan, telling her the judgment against him had been paid by one Loton Lawson.
The prisoner was liberated, but on reaching the street was suddenly seized, thrust into a close carriage, gagged, bound, and driven rapidly out of the village, westwardly, or to Rochester, and so on to the Ridge road, accompanied by Lawson and two other Masons. Lawson afterwards testified “that the Ridge road was followed to Lewiston, and so on down to Fort Niagara, near a grave-yard, where the passengers in the vehicle got out and the coachman dismissed; that none but Masons were allowed to communicate with Morgan; that preparations had previously been made for his reception”; and he was taken into the fort, blindfolded, bound, and thrown into the magazine, where he was confined until the 19th, when he disappeared. In October, 1827, over a year after his abduction, a dead body was found on Lake Ontario beach, and a committee from Batavia and Rochester, deciding after the closest scrutiny that it was that of Morgan, they brought it to Batavia, where it was exposed to view in James Brisbane’s yard, and large numbers visited the spot to view the loathsome spectacle. A funeral procession was formed, Mrs. Morgan and D. C. Miller being chief mourners, and the body conveyed to the grave-yard, where in later years the anti-Masons erected a handsome stone to his (?) memory. Later, however, the clothes found on this body were thoroughly identified as belonging to one Timothy Monroe, a man accidentally drowned near the mouth of Niagara. In this connection we state that Mrs. Morgan was supported by the anti-Masons until she joined her fortune afterwards with a Royal Arch Mason's, when she was dropped by the anties.

A tremendous excitement followed the disappearance of Morgan. Investigating committees were everywhere appointed. Governor Clinton offered a reward for the apprehension of those who abducted him. Sir Peregrine Maitland, governor-general of Upper Canada, offered a reward of $200. Lodges and chapters of Masons denounced the deed. The hostility of feeling between Masons and anti-Masons was of the bitterest description. The dividing line ran through families and churches even boys on the streets took sides. The Masonic fraternity throughout a large section of country was threatened with destruction, many lodges being so weakened by withdrawals, expulsions, and lack of applications as to be disbanded for years. The order in 1826 numbered 360 lodges and 22,000 members. Ten years later there were 75 lodges and 4,000 members.

While the several committees were pursuing inquiries the contemplated book, Morgan's Revelations of Masonry, appeared. It was in pamphlet form, might have cost 10 cents, but sold for $1, copyright secured. Morgan's partner subscribed under oath not to divulge his secret regarding the publication of the book; and from letters found it was soon known that avarice, not a love of country or friends, was his principal reason for the undertaking. But a few copies were sold at $1. The price was soon reduced to 50 cents, then to 25 cents, finally to about 10 cents.

As to the trial of the abductors, evidence was given that Cheesebro hired and paid for the carriage, and he with Lawson, Sawyer, and Sheldon were indicted for complicity. The sheriff of Niagara County, Eli Bruce, was fined and imprisoned for the part he took in the matter, and other prominent and respectable men were convicted.

The excitement was kept up. Attempts were made to prevent Masons from meeting as usual. It being the custom to celebrate St. John's day, the Batavia Lodge, in May, 1827, announced their intention to celebrate it in public. Miller endeavored to prevent it, but on June 25th 300 Masons assembled for the purpose. A large concourse of people to the number of several thousand were in Batavia. Some were armed with knives and guns. But the day passed off without any accident. The proceedings were addressed by George Hosmer, of Livingston County, and the Masons endured the scoffs and jeers of an enraged multitude. The anti-Masons attempted afterwards to exclude Masons from the jury.

We now return to David C. Miller, who attained almost equal notoriety with Morgan. After the intentions of Morgan and Miller relative to the book were announced one Daniel Johns, from Canada, came to Batavia. He had resided in Rochester, and there became acquainted with Miller's friends, by whom, it is said, he was received as a partner. Johns had a little money, and offered to make some advances, pecuniary, as was desirable at that time. He was therefore accepted without much scrutiny as to his motives. It was supposed he wished to procure possession of Morgan's manuscript. Certainly Miller wanted Johns's money; thus a deception was created in the start. Johns obtained a part of the manuscript and Miller some of Johns's money, about $30 or $40. This small sum was of more value to Miller than the manuscript was to Johns, and so trouble arose between them. A few days before Miller's arrest (September 12, 1826) a warrant on behalf of Johns was issued by Justice Bartow, of Le Roy, against Miller and one Davids, a partner, to collect moneys advanced by Johns. This warrant was placed in the hands of Jesse French, of Stafford, the constable (and father of the late J. Homer French, of French's Gazetteer of New York), who, learning that Miller had determined to resist arrest, employed several assistants, and on September 12th, followed by Roswell Wilcox and Jesse Hurlburt and a large party, repaired to Batavia to effect the arrest of Miller and Davids. The presence of so many strangers in Batavia excited the apprehension of the citizens, many of whom offered their services to resist the attempt to arrest Miller. French, with his assistants, repaired to Miller's office, where he (Davids) and Miller's son were, and although the office was fortified with arms none were used. Wilcox arrested Davids, and French at the same time arrested Miller. Both submitted, and were taken to Danold's tavern. Davids, being a prisoner within the jail limits, was soon discharged. Miller was taken to the lodge-room at Stafford, against the remonstrances of his friends, kept there for two or three hours, then proceeded to Le Roy, kept at Walbridge's tavern, where he was discharged, and returned to Batavia. Theodore Talbot was Miller's lawyer. "It is supposed by some that the main object of Miller's arrest was to obtain possession of Morgan's manuscript."

The following article appeared in the issue of September 15, 1826, of the Republican Advocate:
About 2 A.M., Monday morning, September 11, two buildings were set on fire. The same morning Captain William Morgan was seized, as was alleged, by virtue of process and conveyed off no one knows where, by a set of ruffians. On Tuesday a mob consisting of more than 100 assembled in this village, from various parts of the country, with the openly-avowed intention of destroying our printing establishment, and conveyed the editor of this paper out of town, by ruffian force, in pretence of legal process, to Le Roy, to the magistrate, but no process was exhibited or returned by the office. The constable then disappeared, and the prisoner was discharged.

"Signed: C. W. MILLER, son of D. C. MILLER."

The result of this arrest of Miller was an indictment found against some of the parties for alleged riot, assault, and battery, and false imprisonment. A trial was had before Judges Birdsall, Tisdale, James Taggart, and Simeon Cummings, judges of the Court of Common Pleas, two of whom, as well as a part of the jury, were Masons. French was sentenced to 12 months, Wilcox to six months, and Hurlburt to three months imprisonment.

The most notable effect of the agitation by the anti-Masons was the career of that party, which subdivided and distracted all other political parties, and drew thousands of adherents from them all; a subject that would require a volume to treat intelligently.

TEMPERANCE.

Old people of this and other counties remember distinctly that in their youth the use of spirituous liquors as a beverage was almost universal. Nor was it confined to the laymen. Very many of the settlers of Genesee County had such a habit, and it was thought no harm in those times, for it would be a breach of hospitality to not offer it to visitors. It was the necessary help at the "bees," and the failure of such "bees" and gatherings, from its absence, is well remembered. It was at home, in the field, everywhere, in olden days, and was the universal panacea for wet weather and dry weather, for real and imaginary ailments.

Distilleries sprang up early in many of the towns, and liquor was cheap and pure; the country stores kept it for sale the same as codfish and molasses; and its use was sanctioned by all classes—the laborer, the clergy, the bench and bar. Indeed, the words of a modern poet,

"The power enslaved in yonder cask Shall many burdens bear;
Shall nerve the toiler at his task,
The soul at prayer,"
TEMPERANCE.

seem very apropos of the customs of former days. With the well founded ideas of the time is it to be wondered that no moves were made for a reform in regard to its use? It is not known definitely when stringent measures were taken in Genesee County; the pulpit always taught temperance, but that was not the temperance—strict prohibition, touch not and handle not—of the present day.

It is known that about 1830 a reform gradually swept over the land in the form of signing a pledge; but this was only a general restriction not to use it to excess, and was not sufficiently effective. In this county, in 1836, a society was formed, and after a discussion of two days, with a negative vote of two (who voted so, fearing the advance was too rapid), the total abstinence pledge was adopted. At the present day it hardly seems credible that a temperance reform could have encountered any opposition. It did receive such opposition in 1836 in Genesee County. There were many earnest, zealous workers in the reform here, but after a half century, with no records, it is impossible to name them. Much good was done, and a check was placed upon the increasing evil, which is felt to the present day.

Like all important reforms it has had its revivals, its new methods of advancing the work, and these waves would sweep over the country animating the friends to good works. The first of these waves that so greatly inundated the country was the "Washingtonian" movement, that started in 1840 at Baltimore. A few confirmed drunkards saw their peril and joined together in a resolution to reform; others joined; and the whole country joined in the good work. Genesee County was remarkably active in the move, but like all superhuman efforts a reaction followed. Still much permanent good is directly traceable to that grand movement. Its restriction by statute was then urged, and in 1846 the first law went into effect. It was termed the "license or no-license" law, and sometimes the "five-gallon" law, but could be consistently called a "local option" law. This, for some reason, was not generally successful; not perhaps so much from any defect in the law, or that the evil cannot be restricted by statute; but having invoked the aid of the law the temperance workers relied too much upon its strong arm and relaxed their efforts in educating the public sentiment to sustaining them.

About 1855 the so-called "Maine law" was enacted, and the friends anticipated good results, but the Court of Appeals decided it to be unconstitutional. This was followed by an act appointing county commissioners to grant licenses, but this was not satisfactory.
The next move was the present local option statute that allows each town to determine, by its votes, if the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be tolerated, and the election of the commissioner gives the decision. The towns of Genesee County are no exception to others, and the excesses of either faction can be held in check by the operation of the law.

Within a few years the Prohibition party has come into existence, which claims total prohibition as its platform. Of its merits it is not our province to speak, and its votes will be found under another head. This fact should be borne in mind by its friends in Genesee County: that all laws are not satisfactory in their results unless the people are educated to a sentiment of their wholesomeness, and a strong majority morally pledged to their fulfillment.

EARLY SCHOOLS.

It must not be supposed that while the pioneers of this section were so busy in felling the forest, and laying the foundation of future comfort and wealth, they neglected the foundation of those institutions in which they had been reared, and without which no community can prosper. As soon as a sufficient number of children could be gathered the settlers for miles around, by a preconcerted "bee," rolled the logs together that formed the primitive school-house. The desks were slanting shelves of slabs or boards, supported by pins driven into the logs and a brace to the logs below. In front of these was the seat made of a split log, hewn smooth, with legs of proper length for the larger scholars; in front of these were similar benches for the smaller pupils. If there was a saw-mill within a reasonable distance these rude desks and benches would be made of planks or slabs from the mill. Then the plainest common branches were taught—reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, and geography. The rude adaptation of the means of instruction in those early days was as primitive, and in the same manner deficient, as were all the means with which the settlers were provided. The books and teaching must be upon the "axe and auger" plan. Not only was there a scarcity of books, but the text books of the time were inefficient; they would be as much a wonder to the pupil and parents of the present time as would the old-fashioned flax-break; and the students of the common school of to-day, if such text books were placed before them, would consider them of par value with the rough seats and desks of those primitive days. But these early pioneers provided for their children all that could be then, and, in fact it was, proportionately, more than parents do under the present uniform and excellent school system. The puritan idea was "to spare the rod was to spoil the child," and in those primitive schools were teachers who could ably demonstrate that branch. The pupil of the present would not tolerate the idea of going from two to four miles to school, and that, too, along a rough path through a wilderness, his only guide being the marked trees. Is it, then, not a wonder that the Holland Purchase—the territory of Genesee County—could, in the early part of the present century, send out into the councils of the State and Nation men of the highest statesmanship? To the pioneer teacher, as well as parents, great credit is due. The teacher must "board round," and the long walks to the cabins of his patrons, the cheerful hospitality shown, the simple but wholesome food, and social interchange of thought during the long fire-lit visits of the evening were oases in the desert of the teacher's life that the present flowery paths of the principals in the same section do not possess. The names of some of the early pioneer teachers are preserved, and they will generally be noticed in their respective towns. The school house of hewn logs after a few years, and of larger proportions and sufficient windows, would follow the 12x14 cabin; better teachers and more modern text books were introduced; and uniformity in methods of teaching was adopted.

"Previous to the year 1828 much difficulty and embarrassment had occurred throughout the Holland Purchase from a provision in the school act of the State, 'that sites of school-houses should be secured by deeds in fee, or by leases from the possessor of the fee, of the land.' In numerous instances there were no deeded lands in the district, or if there were they were not conveniently located. In the absence of such title or lease the trustees of the district could not legally levy and collect taxes for building or repairing school-houses. About this period Mr. Evans, then land agent of the Holland Land Company, adopted the following plan to remedy the evil, and prevent the hindrances that were in the way of a full realization of the benefits of the common school system upon the Holland Purchase. It was entered upon the books of the office, and the benefits of it extended whenever asked:

"'In every legally organized School District on the Holland Purchase, where the most convenient site for a school-house shall fall on land not deeded from the Holland Company, a deed for such site, not exceeding half an acre of land, shall be granted, from the company to such district, gratis. Provided that whenever such site shall fall on lands held under contract, from the Company, by any person or persons, such district shall procure a relinquishment of the right to such piece of land, by virtue of said contract, to be endorsed thereon by the person or persons holding the same.'"
In 1835 school libraries were established, and every district received its proportionate quota for such library. In 1845 institutes for teachers were considered one of the best means of benefit, and the teachers of Genesee County eagerly availed themselves of its advantages.

Simultaneously with the advent of the neat, white farm house of the pioneer the school-house appears, bearing the same advancement that is warranted by the improvement of the country, and the greatly increased value of the surroundings. The growth of the schools can be best learned from a careful perusal of statistics relating thereto, and which need not be introduced here. Our province was to show the early school; the present excellent system is realized and familiar to all. In the histories of the towns each will have its interesting details.

William E. Prentice, of Batavia, was the school commissioner for the county in 1885–87, and William J. Barr, of Elba, the present commissioner, to serve until 1891.

The public money apportioned to the towns for 1889 was as follows: Alabama, $1,415.62; Alexander, $1,352.17; Batavia, $5,368.72; Bergen, $1,580.30; Byron, $1,294.01; Bethany, $1,326.02; Darien, $1,523.94; Elba, $1,202.94; Le Roy, $2,627.83; Oakfield, $1,025.03; Pavilion, $1,187.94; Pembroke, $2,228.26; and Stafford, $1,441.79—a total of $23,574.57. There are 150 school districts in the county, but 15 of them are joint districts with the school-houses located in adjoining counties.

THE CIVIL WAR.

GENESEE COUNTY REGIMENTS.

The bombardment of Sumter aroused the same patriotic feelings in Genesee County that were manifested throughout the North, and for the time all partisan feelings were forgotten; men of all parties evinced a desire to sustain the government. At once an enthusiastic meeting was held at Batavia and 20 volunteers were enrolled; the same evening a meeting was held at Le Roy, and soon afterward others in various parts of the county followed; the same patriotism prevailed throughout.

On the 18th of April a call for 500 men was made from the county, and a meeting called for Saturday afternoon and evening of April 20th, at Concert Hall, Batavia; 48 young men were enrolled. The following committee was appointed to solicit funds for the support of the families of those who enlisted, and any other expense: Trumbull Cary, John Fisher, Junius A. Smith, Seth Wakeman, and James M. Willett. For a like purpose a committee of three was appointed in each of the other towns, as follows:

Alabama.—Chauncey Williams, George H. Potter, Edward Hersey.

Alexander.—Heman Bludgett, Earl Kidder, E. G. Moulton.

Bethany.—Lemuel Lincoln, A. G. Terry, Carlos Huggins.

Bergen.—Horatio Reed, Samuel Richmond, Josiah Pierson.

Byron.—J. T. Boughton, Loren Green, Addison Terry.

Darien.—J. W. Hyde, Col. A. Jefferson, T. C. Peters.

Pavilion.—Oswald Bond, Warren Fay, George Tomlinson.

Pembroke.—G. D. Wright, D. N. Wells, R. F. Thompson.

Stafford.—Cyrus Prentice, Robert Fisher, Perry Randall.

Recruiting went on rapidly. On the 29th of April the first company was formed under the command of A. T. Root, and left the county; it became part of the 12th Regt. N. Y. V. On the 14th of May the company of J. R. Mitchell, and on the 15th that of Capt. William L. Cowan, followed, bearing the adieux and benedictions of all.

The departure of the first volunteers was an occasion of peculiar interest, as it was the first time in the history of the county that men had felt the peril of National existence from internal dissension, and was the first call of the present generation for volunteers. The feeling for the first who went out was more poignant than on similar occasions afterwards, for the acuteness was to some extent worn away by frequent exercise, and no idle curiosity was felt. The brave volunteers of Genesee County, who so nobly left the comforts of home to go forth at their country's call, to face death and suffering with no friendly hand to allay, deserve a more minute history than the limits of this work will permit.

In 1861, soon after the outbreak of the Rebellion, the patriotic ladies of Batavia and other parts of Genesee County organized associations for supplying soldiers in the field with comforts and luxuries that the government did not provide—havelocks, flannels, and articles of clothing, as well as supplies for the sick and wounded, which were sent on, and many a languishing patriot has blessed the ladies of Genesee County. Among those who early and earnestly engaged in this humane work was Mrs.
Gad B. Worthington, Mrs. John Fisher, Mrs. Alva Smith, Mrs. E. R. Pratt, Mrs. Levi Jackson, Mrs. Richard Cotes, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Dr. N. Clark, Mrs. Putnam, Mrs. Thomas Yates, Miss M. Mallory, Mrs. John Wood, Mrs. George Holden, Miss Parsons, Mrs. Seth Wakeman, Mrs. L. B. Cotes, Miss Carrie Pringle, Mrs. S. C. Holden, Mrs. Junius A. Smith, Mrs. Dean Richmond, Mrs. Macy, and Mrs. H. U. Howard, and many others whose names now cannot be learned.

22D N. Y. IND. BATTERY.

This regiment was organized in this county, its rendezvous being at Lockport; was mustered into the U. S. service October 18, 1862; was soon consolidated as Co. M of the 9th N. Y. Heavy Artillery; and participated in the following battles: Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Monocacy, Charleston, Cedar Creek, Petersburg again, and Sailor’s Creek. The officers and men when mustered into service were: Captain, John D. Numan; senior 1st lieutenant, Melancthon D. Brown; junior 1st lieutenant, D. D. W. Pringle; senior 2d lieutenant, Robert C. Worthington; junior 2d lieutenant, Edwin F. Clark.

CAPT. FENN'S COMPANY, 28TH REGT.

This gallant company was mustered into service May 22, 1861, and participated in the following battles: Point of Rocks, Newtown, first Winchester, and Cedar Mountain. In the last engagement the loss was heavy. They were also engaged at Susquehanna Court House and Chancellorsville. The officers and men who enlisted were:

Privates.—Calvin Annis, George Hallen, William F. Albro, Edmond Bragdon, Bryon Brinkerhoff, James F. Bennett, Lafayette Barker, Riley Blount, George Barnard, Oscar Barnes, Philip Bittinger, George H. Batten, Henry Baldwin, John S. Barber, William H. Colburn, Roswell Coddington, William Howland, Porter Howard, Truman M. Hawley, George

CAPT. A. J. ROOT'S COMPANY, 12TH REGT.

105TH REGIMENT NEW YORK VETERANS.

VERY many brave men went out with this regiment, and Company E was largely recruited from Genesee County. Other companies had Genesee County men, which will be given in the order of the companies. According to the adjutant-general’s report the regiment participated in the following battles: Cedar Mountain, Rappahannock Station, Thor-oughfare Gap, second Bull Run, Chantilly, South Mountain, Antietam, and Fredericksburg. They saw severe service, and were consolidated with the 94th in 1863.

Officers.—Colonel, James M. Fuller; major, John W. Shedd; quartermaster, Charles Strong; surgeon, Dr. D. C. Chamberlain; chaplain, B. P. Russell; quartermaster-sergeant, Jerome J. Shedd.

Company B.—William Rose, George W. Forster, Philip S. Frost.

CAPT. MOORE'S COMPANY, 100TH REGIMENT.

This gallant company was mostly recruited from Genesee County, and stands among the foremost in good work. Its members from this county were: Captain, Walter B. Moore; lieutenants, M. H. Topping, Martin S. Bogart; sergeants, Leonard D. Howell, Edward S. Peck, Peabody Pratt, and Myron P. Pierson; corporals, William Wheeler, W. M. Thompson, and Donald McPherson; musicians, J. O. Price, Samuel Malters, and Willard Joslyn.

129TH REGT. N. Y. VETERANS.

This important regiment was largely recruited from Genesee County, and was worthy of all mention. It was depleted by many decisive battles, and its ranks were refilled from the same patriotic element for which Genesee County was, and still is, noted. In December, 1862, the regiment was changed from infantry to heavy artillery, designated as the 8th N. Y. Heavy Artillery. It belonged to the 2d corps, and participated in all the battles, marches, and duties of the campaign of 1864–65. In the latter part of 1865, being severely depleted by battles and the discharge of men whose time expired, it was transferred to the 4th H. A. to the 4th H. A.

The casualties of this regiment, during the campaign closing with the surrender of Lee, was officially reported at 1,171 officers and men. A greater portion of these valiant men was recruited from Genesee County, and we give them so far as we have been able to obtain their names from many sources.

James M. Willett, of this county, was major.

Company G.—E. G. Sherwin, captain; J. R. Cooper and Orrin C. Parker, lieutenants; John H. Nichols, John F. Hutton, John J. Thomas, James W. Young, and George Ford, sergeants; J. D. Safford, Lewis

Many men were enlisted in other regiments, and it is impossible, perhaps, to mention every one. We find the following in the 49th N. Y. V.: Peter Thomas, Ferdinand Thomas, French Fisher, Joseph Mark, Sergeant Hare, Charles Hayden, Sergeant Slingerland.

CAPT. COWAN'S COMPANY, 14TH N. Y. VETERANS.

This company was recruited in Genesee County early in 1861. It went to Washington, where it remained till early autumn. Early next spring the company went to Fairfax Court House and Alexandria, thence to Fortress Monroe. These brave boys did duty at Yorktown, at Cold Harbor, at Gaines Mills; their first open-field fight was at Hanover Court House; they were also engaged at Beaver Meadow, Malvern Hill, etc. The 14th greatly distinguished itself while in service, and Company D was the banner company. The following are the officers and men who went out: William L. Cowan, captain; Robert H. Ford, 1st lieutenant; George E. Gee, 2d lieutenant; Thomas R. Hardwick, Almon C. Barnard, Jesse R. Decker, I. H. Crosman, sergeants; David W. Manning, Harry Parsons, H. H. Van Dake, Thomas L. Ostrom, corporals; James B. Potter and Gregory Shaver, musicians.

THE 25TH IND. BATTERY.

This valiant company was recruited in the counties of Orleans, Genesee, and Niagara, and we have taken pains to give the Genesee County men as correctly as possible. They were mustered in at Lockport, N. Y., in September, 1862, and in December went to New York and became part of the forces of Gen. Banks. They sailed to Fortress Monroe, thence to Ship Island, but were wrecked on the coast of Florida; were picked up by a gunboat and landed at Key West, and in January, 1863, sailed to New Orleans. They were in the siege of Port Hudson, and in the Red River campaign. In the spring of 1865 they went on the expedition to Mobile, and were mustered out at Rochester, N. Y., in July, 1865. The officers and men from Genesee County were: Lieut. I. D. Southworth, mustered out as captain, then of Byron; Albert Cook, 1st lieutenant, of Alabama; Lieut. James F. Emery and Henry M. Graves, Batavia; Peter Lester, Addison Gates, J. H. Smock, B. F. Ackerson, and Patrick Sage, of Alabama; Aaron Hartwell, J. Madigan, Jacob Miller, William Shelt, Frank McCann, William Wilgin, Frank D. Murdock, Peter Clinch, Paul Nothan, James Darkins, John J. Snyder, Peter Linn, Peter Tharnish, Fred Hartwick, Nathan Leonard, John Oberton, Joseph Brill, and Peter Busser, of Byron; Edgar A. Fisher, William R. Fisher, Charles A. Kendall, Edwin J. Niles, Valentine Riker, Wyman P. Fisk, Byron A. Fisk, and William Jones, of Stafford; William J. Pike, Arthur Little, and Cunningham Primrose, of Elba; William P. Bassett, of Bergen; Freeman Bailey, of Oakfield; and George Conway, Rodney Alexander, Almon R. Blodgett and Levi C. Cleveland, of Pembroke.

SOCIETIES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

GENESEE COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

It may not be generally known that this society had its origin in very early years, for June 22, 1819, a meeting was called and met at the house of Hiiman Holden. Joseph Ellicott was elected president, and Hon. Samuel M. Hopkins was elected president pro tem., and Parmenio Adams, treasurer pro tem. It was agreed to raise $500 for the meeting and exhibition in October, $150 of the amount to be for expenses and $350 for premiums. A committee was also appointed to examine farms, they to be allowed $2 per day each for their time. Col. Green and Col. Touner were appointed marshals The annual fair was ordered held on the second Monday in October. Another record we find in June, 1832, when Jacob Le Roy was chosen president.

The county has shown an uncommon interest in agricultural affairs, establishing a strong, perpetual society very early, and by its continued zeal still sustains large and profitable meetings annually.
In 1839—51 years ago—the present organization was established, and for the first 20 years annual fairs were held at suitable places in and around Batavia. About 30 years ago the formidable proportions of the society called for greater facilities, and the purchase of suitable grounds and erection of adequate buildings was at once effected. A good half-mile track for the development of stock has long been a prominent feature to the grounds. At this writing (spring of 1889) there is a project on foot to sell the present grounds, purchase elsewhere a more commodious site, and erect new and larger buildings. The society is strong and prosperous, and for the past half century has not failed in its meetings and fairs. The minutes of meetings prior to 1870 cannot be found, but we give the names of such officers as the books now in use furnish:

1 March 8, 1890, by a vote of 269 to 235, the society decided to purchase what is known as the Redfield site, the price agreed upon being $6,000. This is the old driving park property of 23½ acres and eight and one-half acres additional on the east side of the track, with an eight-rod roadway out to West Main street, and includes the race-track, stables, wells, fences, judges' stand, etc. The eight and one-half acre addition runs east from the driving park 16 rods, and in it there is an oak grove of two and one-half acres. March 19th about two additional acres were purchased of Mr. Redfield for $200. The society now has nearly 35 acres of land.
1887.—Nelson Bogue, president; J. M. McKenzie, secretary; B. George Kemp, treasurer.

1888.—E. J. Ingalsbe, president; Frank B. Redfield, secretary; William Torrence, treasurer.

1889.—R. R. Losee, president; James Z. Terry, vice-president; Dwight Dimock, second vice-president; L. F. Rolfe, secretary; F. B. Parker, treasurer.

The directors, one from each town, are chosen each year at the January meeting, who, with the officers, have the general management of the fairs. A healthy premium list, prompt payment of awards, and the general interest taken in the affairs of the society have made the Genesee County Agricultural Society a model worthy of imitation, and its long years of prosperity are only an earnest of its stability and usefulness.

The fiftieth annual fair of the society was held on the grounds on Ellicott street in September, 1889. At the regular annual meeting of the officers in January, 1890, it was voted to sell these grounds to the Geneva and Buffalo Railroad Co., who are to build a railroad. At this meeting the following officers were elected: James Z. Terry, president; Dwight Dimock, vice-president; John M. McKenzie, second vice-president; L. F. Rolfe, secretary; Fred Parker, treasurer.

GENESEE COUNTY AUXILIARY BIBLE SOCIETY.

This society was originally organized in July, 1818, but no record has been found of its meetings prior to 1833. On the 6th of September, 1833, a meeting of the friends of the society and Bible cause was held in Le Roy, and it was resolved to reorganize the Genesee Bible Society under a new constitution. This was done. One of the articles of the constitution adopted was that “the sole object of this institution shall be to encourage a wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures without note or comment.” The officers chosen at that meeting by the society were Colonel Martin O. Coe, president; Deacon Hinds Chamberlain and Samuel Grannis, vice-presidents; Seth M. Gates, secretary; and Colonel S. M. Gates, treasurer.

During the 70 years of its existence the society has made several canvases of the county for the distribution of the Scriptures, and ample provision has been made for supplying by special agents the inmates of the county-house, jail, and all prisoners leaving the jail with Bibles; also for supplying all hotels in the county and portions of the trains of cars passing through it. The society has kept up its annual contributions to the American Bible Society, to which it is a valuable auxiliary.

The presidents since 1833 have been: Martin O. Coe, who was chosen AUXILIARY AID SOCIETY.

To the State Charities Aid Association.

In November, 1883, a number of benevolent ladies and gentlemen of Genesee County organized this society by the adoption of a constitution, the first article of which read as follows:

"The name of this association shall be 'The Local Visiting Committee of the Genesee County Poor-House, State of New York,' and its object shall be to visit regularly and systematically all the departments of the Genesee County poor-house, with a view to the mental, moral, and physical improvement of its pauper inmates; and to bring about such reforms as may be practicable."

About 40 members combined in this association, and F. C. Lathrop, of Le Roy, was made the president; J. B. Worthington, of Batavia, vice-president; Mrs. Gardner Fuller, secretary; and S. Massey, treasurer. An executive committee consisting of the officers and Rev. Dr. Hitchcock, Rev. Mr. Totherob, and Rev. Mr. Zimmer was appointed. The same officers continue, except that Mrs. M. E. Sheffield is the present incumbent of the positions of secretary and treasurer. Every member of the society is a committee for the purposes set forth in the first article of their constitution. The society has had committees of three or four each that have made periodical visits to the county house. The society has suggested and assisted in the introduction of many improvements that have greatly ameliorated the condition of the unfortunate inmates.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

This association was organized at a meeting held in the Baptist Church, Batavia, in October, 1857. Its object was to advance the great interest of Sunday-schools by affording a medium of communication among all the schools of the county, and giving facilities for improvements in methods of work by an interchange of ideas and views among the workers, and exercises in these different methods suggested. In furtherance of the object of this society meetings have been held regularly in various parts of the county; addresses have been delivered; discussions and exercises have been successfully engaged in; and the interest in and utility of the cause has been greatly promoted.

The lack of records of the proceedings of the society causes a deficiency in the mention of the names of those who have done efficient work, and of the many improvements and much good service done. The pastors of the churches and many laymen throughout the county have given it their hearty coöperation, and have labored with commendable zeal to aid in the success which has crowned the efforts of the association. The present officers are A. J. Rumsey, of Bethany, president; Rev. C. W. Sweet, of Elba, secretary; and a vice-president from each town in the county.

GENESEE COUNTY PIONEER ASSOCIATION.

This county has ever shown more zeal in its early settlement than its neighbors, and has now a large association that bears the name of this heading. On the 25th of August, 1869, a large number of pioneers and citizens met at Union Hall, Batavia, to take into consideration the organization of such a society. Stewart Chamberlain was appointed chairman of the meeting, and Marcus L. Babcock, secretary. The following persons were made a committee to draft a constitution and rules to govern the society: Hon. Moses Taggart, Batavia; Sylvester Willis, Oakfield; Alanson Fisher, Darien; Samuel Scofield, Eden; Stewart Chamberlain, Le Roy; Marcus L. Babcock, Batavia; Augustus P. Hascal, Le Roy. This committee reported at a meeting held October 5th, and a suitable constitution was adopted. A committee was appointed—one from each town—to report a set of officers for the association, who reported the following, and who were elected: Heman J. Redfield, president; Seth Wakeman, vice-president; Phineas Ford, secretary; Augustus P. Hascal, assistant secretary; James R. Mitchell, treasurer. A vice-president from each town was also elected.

At the annual meeting June 13, 1871, eight were reported as having died during the year, and large numbers joined the association. The officers elected were Moses Taggart, president; David Seaver, secretary.

1872.—Alden S. Stevens, president; David Seaver, secretary; 11 reported as having died.

1873.—Benjamin Pringle, president; David Seaver, secretary; 12 reported as having died.

1875.—J. R. Mitchell, president; J. M. Waite, secretary.
1876.—J. R. Mitchell, president; J. N. Beckley, secretary.
1877.—Albert Rowe, president; Safford E. North, secretary.
1878.—Albert Rowe, president; S. E. North, secretary.
1879.—Albert Rowe, president; S. E. North, secretary.
1880.—Israel M. Peck, president; S. E. North, secretary.
1881.—James R. Mitchell, president; Frank S. Wood, secretary.
1882.—Lucius Atwater, president; Frank S. Wood, secretary.
1883.—Lucius Atwater, president; Frank S. Wood, secretary.
1884.—Albert Rowe, president; Frank S. Wood, secretary.
1885.—Lucius Atwater, president; Frank S. Wood, secretary.
1886.—Lucius Atwater, president; Frank S. Wood, secretary.
1887.—Lucius Atwater, president; Frank S. Wood, secretary.
1888.—Hon. E. C. Walker, president; H. F. Peck, vice-president; J. H. Gates, secretary and treasurer; with a vice-president in each town, which are named each year.

The society has accumulated a vast fund of pioneer history, and its annual meetings in June are very interesting. Hon. Norman Seymour, the historian, reported, in an address before the association in 1878, that 53 of the pioneers who settled between 1801 and 1828 in the county were at that date enjoying good health. The officers for 1889 were Rev. L. Atwater, Batavia, president; O. S. Kidder, Alexander, vice-president; J. H. Yates, Batavia, secretary and treasurer.

STATE INSTITUTION FOR THE BLIND.

Genesee County was selected for this institution, and its selection shows the good judgment of those having it in charge. It occupies a beautiful site about half a mile north of the court house in Batavia. The law for its establishment was enacted April 27, 1865. The act provided for the appointment of five commissioners to select a site for the institution, three to superintend its building, and a board of trustees to superintend its affairs after its completion. The commissioners to select a site were Hon. E. W. Leavenworth, Syracuse; B. F. Manierre, New York city; James Ferguson, Ovid; O. K. Woods, Chazy; and M. M. Southworth, Lockport. In February, 1866, the board selected Batavia as the site, and that village presented to the State 50 acres of land at a cost of $10,000. In May, 1866, grading commenced; the contract to build was let to Henry T. Rogers, of Rochester; and the corner-stone was laid with appropriate ceremonies on September 6, 1866. A large amount of historical and interesting matter was deposited in the cornerstone: copies of the county papers, programme of the day's proceedings, copy of the act founding it, a continental bank note, a provincial note, a note of the Bank of Attica and history of the bank, postal currency, history of Batavia, subscribers to the grounds, copy of minutes of first court in Batavia, in 1803, photographs of village trustees, and list of building committee, trustees, and State and federal officers. In July, 1868, the institution was formally delivered to the trustees.

The building is of brick, three stories high above the basement, which is of limestone quarried from the site; on this is a broad belt of Lockport freestone; the building fronts the south, and consists of four structures—a front and rear center buildings, and two wings connected by corridors. The length of the entire front is 266 feet, and depth, including portico, 185. The basement contains the laundry, bathing rooms, water-closets, heating apparatus, etc., and the other stories are conveniently arranged for offices, school-rooms, sleeping-rooms, etc., for 150 pupils or more. It is heated by steam, and its sanitary arrangements cannot be excelled. The amount paid for building, stables, cisterns, cooking ranges, engines, etc., was $244,587.24. In July, 1868, Dr.
A. D. Lord took charge of the institution; school was opened September 2, the same year, with 40 pupils during the month. Seventy-four pupils were enrolled during the first year. Mrs. E. W. Lord was appointed superintendent in June, 1875. An efficient corps of teachers is employed, and the institution takes the highest rank. The annual report for 1888 shows the number of pupils for the year 140—75 boys, 65 girls; the whole number who have received instruction since its founda-

Its annual election of officers occurs in June of each year, and the incumbents for 1888—to June, 1889—were Lee R. Sanborn, president; Levant McIntyre, secretary; and Gerrit S. Griswold, treasurer.

It is due to the memory of Dr. Lord (the foremost in the organization of the institution, and so long in charge) to give a brief notice of his life.

Asa D. Lord was born in Madrid, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., in 1816. He taught school at the age of 17, and then pursued a course of study at Potsdam Academy. In 1837 he went to Willoughby, Ohio, and opened up a private school. In 1839 he was chosen principal of Western Reserve Teachers Seminary, at Kirtland, Ohio, where he also studied medicine. In 1846 he started the publication of the Ohio School Journal, and continued at journalistic work for 10 years. In 1847 he was superintendent of schools in Columbus, Ohio, and in 1856 was appointed superintendent of the Ohio Institution for the Blind. In 1863 he was licensed to preach, and in 1868, after 12 years as instructor for the blind in Ohio, was invited to take charge of the new institution then erecting at Batavia, where for nearly seven years he passed a busy, fruitful life. He died in 1875. The wife of Dr. Lord succeeded him in the management (she had been a teacher in the literary department), and resigned her position in 1877. She was succeeded by James McLeod, who served one year, then A. D. Wilbor, D. D., a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was appointed, who served acceptably for five years, when the present efficient superintendent, Arthur G. Clement, M. A., took charge, and spares no pains to fully meet the expectations of the State at large.

Arthur Galette Clement, B. A., M. A., superintendent of the Institution for the Blind, was born in Bethany, December 31, 1854, a son of Orson J. and Anna J. (Wait) Clement. His grandfather (Isaac) and wife came from Vermont at an early day, and resided in Bethany until their decease. Ira Wait (his mother's father) was also an early settler of the same town, living there all his life. The parents of A. G. Clement both died in 1876. The father was a teacher and farmer.

The primary education of Prof. Clement was begun in the district schools, continued in Batavia, and supplemented by the advantages derived from attendance at Alexander and Wyoming Seminary. He subsequently entered the University of Rochester, graduating therefrom in 1882, with the degree of B. A., since which has been added that of M. A. Beginning as teacher in district schools he has always devoted himself to educational matters, and was principal of the Bergen public schools. In 1883 he was elected superintendent of the Institution for the Blind, and has educated himself to a high standard of the requirements of the position, and has held the office longer than any former superintendent (March, 1890). At a convention of the American Association for the Blind he made an able address, which was highly commended, and will yet achieve a still higher position among educators. In September, 1883, he was married to Miss Emma C., daughter of Henry Ward, an old resident of Bergen, and they have two children, Louisa W. and Edith M.

RAILROADS.

By the wisdom of its founders the center of Genesee County was located in the great trail between the East and the West, and the lines of railways—not leaving a town without such facilities—are numerous. The agitation for railroads began in 1831. The New York Central Railroad was first opened from Rochester to Bergen, and the cars for a time were hauled by horses between those two points. The road was built and opened to Batavia in 1837, and to Buffalo in 1843. This road extends in a southwesterly direction from Bergen, through Byron, Staff-ford, Batavia, Pembroke, and the northwest corner of Darien. The Canandaigua and Niagara Falls branch of the New York Central Railroad enters the county at Le Roy, passing through Stafford, Batavia, and Pembroke. A branch of this road extends south from Batavia to Attica.

The New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad, main line, passes through Bethany, Alexander, and Darien to Attica and Buffalo. The Rochester branch of the same corporation, on its line to Buffalo, passes through Le Roy, Stafford, Batavia, and Alexander to Attica.

The "State Line," or Rochester and Pittsburg Railroad, passes through Le Roy and Pavilion in a southeasterly course.

The West Shore Railroad enters the county at Bergen and passes through Bergen, Byron, Elba, Oakfield, and Alabama, thence to Buffalo.

The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad passes through Pavilion, Bethany, Alexander, and Darien, thence to Buffalo.

The new line called the Geneva and Buffalo Railroad, controlled by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., is located through the towns of Le Roy, Stafford, Batavia, Pembroke, and Darien, and the company expects to build and complete the same before 1891.

No county as a whole in New York State has better railroad facilities than Genesee. Its rolling, rich land in every town has a market within its own limits for every product, and the facilities for transportation render the price of products the highest possible to benefit the producers.

FRUIT INTERESTS.

GENESEE COUNTY, located in the territory known as the lake region of Western New York, with its diversity of soil and favorable climatic conditions, has long been recognized as peculiarly adapted to fruit growing. Its products have been eagerly sought in the markets of the country, and the fact that large plantations have been devoted to this industry renders the fruit crop an important item in the material and pecuniary interests of the county. The early history of the industry was mainly the growing of the apple, pear, and peach, and while the labors of the first propagators would now be considered quite insignificant, yet to their efforts and enterprise is the county indebted for much of its past and present progress and success.

About the year 1820 E. Cook, of Byron, started small nurseries, mostly of apples, from which many thrifty bearing orchards are now standing. Then followed that of Col. Pettibone, of Elba, in 1824, who maintained for many years a well kept and, for that period, extensive nursery. Later, Lyman Hollis planted a few acres of fruit and ornamental trees. Following close to these were the diminutive plantings of D. H. Bogue, which furnished the rudimental instruction and training of his sons, the "Bogue Brothers," and which in later years enabled them the more successfully to conduct their extensive business.

Later, somewhere in the forties, A. H. Norris, of Stafford, commenced propagating peaches, for his own setting, and also selling through the county, paying $1 per bushel for the few pits he used, and obtaining buds from Rochester. This proved so profitable that he started other fruits,—apples, cherries, pears, and quinces,—importing quince stock from France for propagating the dwarf pear, and early in the "fifties" sending large quantities to California,—40,000 at one time,—also quantities of stock to Buffalo, where he found market for thousands of cherries. He started a quince orchard, and the product found a ready market at $7 per barrel by the car load. He also started orchards of apple, pear, peach, and plum trees, of which he has, at present, about 100 acres apples, 20 acres dwarf Duchess pears, 5 acres of peaches, and 1,000 yellow-egg plum trees. Following him were Alvirus Loomis, who started a small nursery in Byron, afterwards removing to Batavia, under the firm name of Loomis & Hall, where they continued till about 1864, when both sold out and moved West.

In the fall of 1865 Nelson Bogue made his first planting of a few rods of apple seedlings, on rented ground, near the village of Attica. Here he remained, his business, meanwhile, increasing to the extent that he was not able to obtain available land to warrant extensive business, till in 1872, with his brother, T. Bogue, he bought the farm of W. C. Moreau, three miles north of Batavia, which formed the nucleus of his present extensive nurseries.

But in the early history of fruit raising in the county it was not till centers of population, the cities of the country, became large consumers of fruit, and the establishment of railroads, as a means of transportation, made these markets available, that the production of the larger fruits was of any commercial or pecuniary value. Before this period no value was placed on the apple beyond the home consumption, expecting, perhaps, a few sweet ones for stock, and peaches were allowed to rot in quantities on the ground. Now the thousands of barrels of apples and pears, which are shipped from the county in fruitful years, and the value of the receipts to the farmer and fruit grower, are such that a failure of the crop is a financial calamity. Probably no section of the country is better adapted to the production of long-keeping apples, like the Rox Russet, than the southern towns of Bethany and Pavilion, among whose orchards the "Smeads" and "Pages" have been famous, whose success has been for years attested by the large profits which have been realized from them. In this county, too, the Northern Spy is grown in large quantities, and nowhere more perfectly, and all the finest varieties of winter fruit are here successfully grown and shipped to all parts of the United States and Europe.

The dwarf pear has been quite extensively planted (mostly of the Duchess variety), and probably nowhere grown more successfully, many orchards proving very remunerative, among which are those of "Bishop," of Le Roy, Bond and others, of Pavilion, Eli, Taylor, and Ford, of Elba, William Page, of Bethany, who, for the crop of 1888, from less than five acres, received nearly $2,000; also N. H. Green, of Byron, who, from an orchard of a few acres, received for the last three or four crops a net return of nearly $200 per acre. Among the first dwarf pear orchards planted was that of L. Rathbone, of Oakfield, which produced large quantities of fine fruit, but which finally became unprofitable, and has been removed.

In the year 1862 Elias Cook, of Bryon, commenced the planting of about the first extensive apple orchard in the county, which finally covered about 50 acres, and which contained nearly 2,400 trees in a body, embracing principally the leading varieties of winter fruit grown in Western New York.

Small fruits of all kinds succeed well in nearly all parts of the county, and where properly managed prove fairly profitable, and will undoubtedly continue to do so as the consumption is yearly increasing, besides the demand at the canning factory, now located at Batavia, which uses large quantities.
ALABAMA, the northwest town in Genesee County, was erected from Shelby, Orleans County, April 17, 1826, and originally called "Gerrysville," in honor of Elbridge Gerry, ex-vice-president. The name was changed to Alabama (signifying "here we rest"), April 21, 1828, and in 1832 a portion of the town of Wales, Erie County, was annexed. The Tonawanda Creek flows through the southwest and west portions of the town, from which a feeder of the Erie Canal is taken. This creek also runs through the lands of "the Reservation of the Tonawanda band (or tribe) of the Seneca Indians," occupying a strip of land two miles wide, and comprising about one-fourth of the area of this town. A portion of the well-known Tonawanda swamp also skirts the northwest portion of the town, which by modern drainage has been made some of the most productive land in that section. Oak Orchard Creek is in the northeast portion. The same vein of limestone that runs in Oakfield also forms a portion of the lower part of this town.

"Alabama Sour Springs," also called "Oak Orchard Acid Springs," celebrated for their medicinal purposes, are located on road 7, in the northern part of the town, in the "swamp," on a little elevation two and a half to four feet above the surrounding surface, within a circle of 50 rods, and no two alike; eight in all have been discovered and analyzed, three of which are of an acid nature, one sulphur, one magnesia, one iron, and one of a gaseous nature, affording gas enough to light 50 ordinary gas burners. In one instance three of them issue from one mound within a few feet of each other. An hotel has been erected on road 8, one-half mile from the springs, and the water conducted by pipes to that building.

The earliest settlement in the town of which we have any record is that of James Walsworth, in 1806, who also kept the first tavern, whose children, twins, were the first born in the town. Other early settlers are enumerated, as follows, as near in the order of their advent as can be ascertained:

In 1814 John and James Richardson, Jr., and Hannah Carr and Samuel Sheldon; in 1815 William Daniels; in 1817 Jones Kinne and Benjamin Gumaer, and Henry Howard, who taught a school in a log house. E. F. Norton located in 1819; Robert Harper, James Peter, and Joseph Holmes about 1821; James Gardner in 1822; Elder Samuel Whitcomb in 1824, who erected the first saw-mill; Samuel Basom in 1825; Selah Vosburgh in 1826; and Thomas R. Wolcott in 1827. Jesse Lund, Gideon M. Taylor, David Webster and brother Leonard, and Nahum Loring, who opened an early store, came in 1828; Sterling Hotchkiss came in 1829; Daniel Thayer in 1830, and also Ryal Ingalsbe and Elijah Brooks Ingalsbe. Gideon Howland and Parley V. Ingalsbe came in 1832; Elijah and Ebenezer Ingalsbe in 1834; and Samuel Burr, James Burr, and Isaac Dual the same year. N. Baker, Jr., was an early merchant, in 1834. Jacob and David Martin located in 1835; Anson Norton in 1836; and James Filkins, George Wight, and Abbott Wight in 1837. A. Johnson came in 1840, was a postmaster, kept hotel in one of the old-time taverns at the Center, and was a prominent man of the town. He had four daughters, one of whom married the Hon. Albert Rowe, of Alexander, and one married Hon. Robert W. Nichols, of Alabama. Later settlers and business men were the Piersons; also William Price, who built a steam saw-mill in 1861. S. C. Bateman, who was a druggist and physician, and Dr. Pettibone came about 1840, and Rogers Macumber in 1841.

The first annual town meeting was held April 17, 1826, and the following officers chosen: Benjamin Gumaer, supervisor; Chester Wolcott, town clerk; David Goodrich, Charles P. Brown, and Elijah Craig, assessors. At this meeting $25 was voted for roads and $50 for schools. Seven road districts were established, and John S. Wolcott, Joseph Holmes, and Ephraim Divinny elected commissioners of highways, by whom overseers of roads in the districts were appointed to work them. The total number of persons assessed at this meeting were 73.

The supervisors for the town have been as follows: Benjamin Gumaer, 1826–28; Charles P. Brown, 1829–30; George F. Dinsmore, 1831–32; Guy B. Shepard, 1833–35; Thomas R. Wolcott, 1836–37; Abraham Bolton, 1838–39; Oren Dinsmore, 1840–41; Charles P. Brown, 1842; John Crombie, 1843–44; William McComber, 1845–46; Charles P. Brown, 1847; Jacob Winslow, 1848; Chester Cabot, 1849–50; Jacob Winslow,

About the years 1848 to 1856 Alabama Center was the scene of a crime committed by a woman, Polly Franklin, who married Henry Hoag about 1844. Their children, Rosa and Viola, died suddenly, and soon the father died, then another child, Frances, followed him. After the death of Mr. Hoag his widow married Otto Frisch, but soon was deserted by him. About this time suspicion was aroused, and S. E. Filkins (counselor) caused an investigation to be made, which revealed the fact that some of her family had died from the effects of poison, large quantities of arsenic having been administered to them. She was arrested and tried three times, and being finally found guilty was sentenced to be hung, but eventually was imprisoned for life.

"In 1866 a very large white oak tree was cut down upon the farm of Mr. True, which was evidence of the wonderful strength and fertility of the soil of that section. It measured four feet through at the butt, was straight for 60 feet to the first branch, where it was three feet in diameter. It showed, when cut, 12 circles, or years' growth, to the inch, thus making it about 504 years old. The most remarkable feature on splitting up one of the cuts about 20 feet from the butt was a cavity in the heart, containing about one pint of sound beech nuts. How long they had been deposited there must be left to conjecture. The trunk was split up, and 1,200 fence stakes, 500 other pieces, and eight cords of wood were chopped from the tree."

In the town are the villages of Alabama Center, Wheatville, Smithville, and Basom, a postoffice on the West Shore Railroad.

Alabama Center, situated north of the center of the town, is a pleasant and enterprising village, on the main road leading from Batavia to Lewiston, one of the earliest laid out roads on the Holland Purchase. Soon after the town organization, in 1826, Hiram Dual opened up a general store, and, though small, it was a great convenience to the settlers in that locality. Soon after James Filkins built the store on the site of Zurhorst Hall. The early blacksmithing was attended to by Samuel Winchell and Shubael Franklin. James Filkins was a shoemaker, and also a tanner and currier for a large section of country. David Garry kept a tavern about one and one-half miles east of the Center, where the first town meeting was held. The village contains two churches (Methodist Episcopal and Baptist), one store, one hotel, and postoffice (Alabama), and there is a daily line of stages from Batavia to the Center, and also a line to Medina. In the vicinity of the Center is a fruit evaporator, operated each year, and a creamery. There are two steam saw-mills, one three-quarters of a mile west, run by William Price, built in 1861, and burned in 1872 and rebuilt by him the same season, with a capacity of 150,000 feet of lumber annually. There are also a cheese factory, a heading-mill, two blacksmith shops, one wagon shop, about 50 houses, and 400 inhabitants. The Model Creamery was built in 1888, by S. S. Parker. It takes the milk of 400 cows, and makes both butter and cheese.

The Baptist Church was organized in 1832. Elder Augustus Warren was the first minister in charge, and continued as such nearly all of his long and well-spent life, or until 1876. The edifice was erected in 1850, at a cost of $2,000, and rebuilt, enlarged, and greatly improved in 1880, the seating capacity being for 200 members. The valuation of the church property, including parsonage, is about $5,500. In 1877 Rev. L. L.
Stowell was in charge, followed in 1879 by Rev. Merrill Forbes, who served in 1887. At present the Rev. Increase Child is the minister, and the acting deacons are Ryal Ingalsbe, Charles Bloomingdale, George Hotchkiss, and Albert P. Tuttle.

Connected with the Baptist Church organization is the Ladies' Home and Foreign Missionary Society. Flor St. John is president; Sarah Bloomingdale, secretary; and Carrie Dewey, treasurer.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at Alabama Center was rebuilt in 1882. It is a frame building capable of seating about 200 persons. They have a membership of 75, and their property has a valuation of about $4,600. Sunday-school services are held every Sunday.

The Baptist Church of Oakfield and Alabama, located at South Alabama, was organized about 1839, when a frame building for worship was erected, seating about 250 persons. The Rev. J. C. Newman is in charge, with a membership of 50 persons. The church property is valued at

Excelsior Lodge, No. 638, I. O. G. T., was organized in March, 1887.
The officers are Allen Norton, Evelyn Eaton, Daniel Ballou, Matie Eaton, William Jones, Minnie Jones, Mrs. S. C. Bateman, Abiah Jones, Anna

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Alabama Center was organized in 1886. Its officers are Mrs. Albert Tuttle, president; Mrs. J. P. Willis, vice-president; Mrs. L. Eaton, secretary; Mrs. William Cottringham, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. C. R. Phillips, treasurer. They meet each week.

Wheatville, situated two and one-half miles east of Alabama Center, is located on the Batavia and Lewiston road, in a splendid farming section. There are about 40 houses and 200 inhabitants. Its settlement is co-existent with that of the town. Elder Whitcomb built the first saw-mill in this vicinity, which was previous to 1820. Mr. Parrish and Levi Lee were early merchants, and Aaron Lanckton carried on business as a tanner and currier in 1838. John Wolcott kept a tavern here as early as 1822. A Mr. Young was the early blacksmith, Mr. Upton a shoemaker, and a Dr. Shepard looked after the physical wants of the people and Elder Whitcomb the spiritual. The village contains a store, postoffice, two churches (Frewill Baptist and Roman Catholic), and two blacksmiths.

The Freewill Baptist Church was organized in 1824 by Elder Samuel Whitcomb, who was also its first minister, and for a long time he was the only minister in the town. The valuation of the church property is about $4,000. Rev. S. R. Evans is the present pastor.

St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church.—There is a small church of this denomination in Wheatville, presided over by Father Connery, who is located at East Pembroke. When Father Barrett was stationed at East Pembroke, about four years ago, he began services in Wheatville, which finally resulted in a building being erected and a continuation of the visits of the priest who may be in charge in several places in the vicinity. The building will seat 150 persons, and cost $2,000.

Smithville (South Alabama p.o.) contains a Baptist Church, a store, and a postoffice, and is a station on the West Shore Railroad. The station is called Alabama. A hotel was built by Henry Ceder in 1884, who is the present proprietor. He has lately newly refurnished the hotel, and is prepared to accommodate an extensive travel.

The I. O. of O. F. of Alabama, No. 496, was organized several years ago. Its present officers are: L. B. Fisk, M. G.; William Cottringham, V. G.; Frank Vail, R. S.; Charles Drake, P. S.; M. Mead, treasurer. They meet weekly.

Bosom postoffice was opened October 25, 1889, by Julius Ingalsbee, postmaster. It is a station on the West Shore Railroad, has a hotel, two stores, Rowley & Eddy’s lumber yard, and one blacksmith shop.

The Tonawanda Reservation is located in Erie and Genesee counties, and originally contained over 45,000 acres, but has been reduced until now it embraces a tract of 7,547 acres, of which about 3,000 acres are cultivated to some extent, and of this amount one-half is leased to white men. The Indians have occupied and owned this land for more than 100 years; and we quote here an extract from an article furnished to the Batavia Times in 1874 by David Seaver, who had access to an old work published in London in 1799, written by the Duke Rochefoucauld Liancourt, describing a journey taken by him from Philadelphia to Niagara Falls in 1795, as follows:

"From Canawango (near Avon, and latterly called Canawaugus) to Buffalo and Niagara Falls the journey was made via Tonawango Indian Village, under the guidance of one Poudrit (Poudry), a Canadian Frenchman, who, deserting from the English Army at the close of the Revolution, married a squaw, settled at Tonawango, became a trader, and lived in genuine Indian style."

Extract from the diary of John Maule, a traveler, in 1800:

"At Tonawawee reside from 15 to 20 families of Seneca Indians, who are well supplied with fish from the creek. Here also has been settled from the year 1794 Poudrit (Poudry), a French Canadian; he very cheerfully gave such refreshments to ourselves and horses as his slender means would afford. He converses in very good English, and is well acquainted with the Seneca language."

Thus is verified the inhabiting of this section by the Indians long before the advent of our early pioneers.

The Indians number at this time about 560 persons, including 32 chiefs. The population increases slowly. The tribe has two sources of revenue: one from the "National farm," the land set apart for the manual labor school, which is leased to individual Indians; and the other is rent received from white people for pasture land. From these two sources the nation derives about $150 per year. The individual Indian also leases land to white men, which is cultivated, but not occupied, by them. The nation also receives an annuity of about $6,500 from the general government.

Politically these Indians have two parties, Pagan and Christian, the former being largely in the majority and govern the tribe. The law provides for the election of a president (for the tribe), who must be a chief, and a clerk, marshal, and peacemakers. William Parker, a chief, died in 1864. He was in the War of 1812. His wife was a niece of Red Jacket. General Ely S. Parker, one of General Grant’s staff, was born on the Reservation. There are two mission schools upon the Reservation, one a Baptist and one a Presbyterian. There are also district schools taught by competent teachers.

Hon. T. W. Jackson is the Indian agent for the Six Nations. James Paxton is the assistant Indian agent, and William Paxton, superintendent of Indian schools.

In 1825 the Baptists organized a mission church on the Reservation, and built a log chapel. The Rev. Mr. Bingham had charge. At present their denomination has a brick church, which cost $4,000, seating 300 people, and a membership of 32. The Rev. John Griffin is pastor.

The Presbyterians, under Asher Wright, in 1870 started a mission. Their church cost $2,000, will seat 200 persons, and has 40 members, under the charge of Rev. John McMaster. The Rev. S. S. Ballou, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1888 organized a mission under the auspices of the missionary board. Their house of worship, built of wood, will seat 100 persons, cost $400, and they have 18 members, now under the care of Rev. T. C. Bell, who officiates at Alabama Center.

Leonard Webster was born in Berlin, Conn., and died in Alabama in 1837. He married Alma Rockwell and had children as follows: Sarah, who married Zardis Skidmore, of Michigan; Almira; Bennett, who died 1847; Joseph, who died 1888; David, who died 1851; Minnie, who married Luther True, of Batavia; and Martha, who married Frank Lund, of Alabama. Mr. Webster came here in 1828, and located where his granddaughter, Mrs. George E. Stevens, now lives. Of his family Joseph was born in 1815, and in 1844 married Laura Ann, daughter of Ephraim and Laura (Williams) Hicks. Their children were Ellen A., of Alabama; Daniel, who died 1879; Emma, who died 1880; Hattie, who married Almon Bristol, and died in Illinois in 1882; Laura, who died in Batavia in 1884; and Mary, who died 1880.

Ellen A. Webster married George E. Stevens, November 8, 1868, and they were parents of four children, viz.: Orpha L., who died 1887, aged 18 years; Jennie Bertell, born October 25, 1871; Stella R., born October 19, 1873; and Laura A., who died in infancy (1881). Mrs. Stevens and family occupy the Webster homestead on road 20, where she was born.

David Webster, born 1819, came to Alabama in 1828, and was reared on a farm. He married, in 1846, Mary, daughter of Allen B. and Sarah (Coleman) Holmes, and their children were Leonard, who died young; David M. C., who resides at Rocky Hill, Conn.; and Frances Ella, who was born 1851. May 27, 1875, she married Frank A. Stevens, and they have one son, Claude W., born February 10, 1877. David Webster died in 1851. His widow married Solomon H. Dunham in 1859, and their children were Anna and Amelia (twins), who died in infancy, and Jennie Maria, who resides at Rocky Hill, Conn. Mrs. Dunham died in March, 1889. F. A. Stevens and family reside at Kensington, Conn. David M. C. Webster married Lumec Ault, and their children are Reginald A., George D., and Alma May, and they reside at Rocky Hill, Conn.

Samuel Winchell, born in Monroe County, N. Y., married Cornelia, daughter of Ashur Merrill, and located in Orleans County. He was a blacksmith, and came to Alabama about 1854. Their children were Mary Ann, who married Schuyler Starkweather; Melissa, who married Lorenzo Horning, and lives in the West; and Lyman W., of Alabama. The father died in 1861, and the mother in 1888.

Lyman W. Winchell was born in 1831, learned the blacksmith trade, and married, November, 1855, Harriet Elizabeth, daughter of Albert and Emma (Davis) Clark, of Oakfield. They located in Alabama. Their sons are Albert S., born January 28, 1857, who married, in 1880, Sarah, daughter of Eleazar R. Underhill, and their children are Nora Cornelie, born 1882, and Frank, born 1885; and Merrill E., born September 4, 1858, who married, in 1880, Eva, daughter of Orin and Jane A. (Fish) White, and lives in Buffalo. Mr. Winchell enlisted in the late war in August, 1862, in the 19th Light Artillery, and was at the battles of the Wilderness, North Anna, Cold Harbor, Weldon Road, and others, serving until the close of the war. He now lives on Medina street in Alabama.

Joseph Waterstreett, a citizen of Mecklenburg, Germany, married Leonora Niendoorf, from the same town. He died there in 1863, aged 61 years. His children were Henry, Christopher, Sophia, Joseph, and Mary. Henry came from Germany to the United States in 1864, settled in Oakfield, and married Minnie, daughter of John and Mary (Burr) Scroger, of Oakfield. Their children are Mary, John, Fred, and George. Mary married Charles Dryer, of Oakfield.

Thomas R. Wolcott was born in Leyden, Lewis County, N. Y., February 2, 1801. About the year 1827 he bought a farm in Alabama from the Holland Land Company. At the time he was engaged in teaching school in Livingston County, which profession he continued until 1829 or '30, when he settled on his farm. He married Aurelia Underwood, and had one child, Sarah, wife of Daniel Inglesbee, of Pontiac, Mich. His wife lived two years. In 1835 he married Orpha Wolverton, daughter of Asher, of Montgomery County, N. Y., and they had 10 children, four of whom are living. He died April 24, 1887. He was supervisor for several years, and justice of the peace for 10 years. His widow resides on the old homestead, which has never been out of the family.

George W. Webb was born in Rochester, N. Y., April 28, 1856. In 1884 he was appointed station agent for the West Shore Railroad at Alabama, which position he has held ever since. He married Mary Zwetsch, of Alexander.
Augustus D. Zurhorst, a practicing physician, son of Frederick William, was born in London, Eng., in 1803. He married Mary Ann Estell, and came to America in 1836, continuing the practice of medicine. He died 1873, and his wife 1855. His children were Catherine T., who married Lorenzo Ely, of Castile, N. Y.; Augusta P., who married John Pennock and died 1885; Octavia, of Castile; John E., who died 1853, aged 13 years; Herman S. W., who was a soldier and died 1864, in West Virginia; Rosina V., who died 1865, aged 17 years; Henry C., who died young; and Augustus F. G., the subject of this sketch, who was born September 27, 1847. He was educated at Genesee and Wyoming Seminary, enlisted in the army in 1863 in Co. G, 21st N. Y. Cavalry, became quartermaster's sergeant, and served until July, 1866. On his return he studied medicine with his father and with Dr. N. G. Clark, of Batavia, and graduated at Cleveland Medical College, class of 1869. He then practiced medicine with Dr. Clark for two years, after which he located at Alabama Center in 1871. He was postmaster in 1885, justice of the peace in 1888, and elected supervisor in 1889. Dr. Zurhorst has a large and growing practice, and resides on Railroad street. He married, in 1878, Emma A., daughter of Frederick A. and Elizabeth (Flanders) Cooley. Their daughters are Iola Jean, born March 9, 1880, and Kathleen Corinne, born October 10, 1884.

ALEXANDER.

Alexander was one of the very earliest settled towns in the county, the valuable and productive lands along the Tonawanda Creek causing the early pioneers to seek homes where the rich soil awaited their labors; and having that in view it is estimated that over 100 families took up the lands in that township (No. 11) between the years 1802 and 1815, the greatest influx being prior to the War of 1812. We are informed that the first log house was built near the site of the present cheese factory. In endeavoring to enumerate their names and the year of settlement we are unable to be accurate in every instance, owing to our sources of information being somewhat uncertain as well as contradictory; but by careful inquiry and verification among the descendants of most of them we are enabled to lay before our readers a more complete list than has ever heretofore been compiled. A confusion of dates may exist in some cases, arising from the fact that some who signified their intentions of locating did not take possession until sometime after. We will endeavor to present them in their order of date of settlement.

The first record of deed for purchase in the town is that of Alexander Rhea (from whom the town was finally named) in 1802. He was a surveyor of the Holland Co. and founder of Alexander village, erecting a saw-mill in 1804. He was brigadier-general of militia and State Senator for several years. His first deed was for 17 acres of land in the bend of the creek near the present village, and for 11 acres on what was then called the Allegany road (the first cut through, southerly); later, in 1809, he located a larger tract, since known as the Pearson farm. While Mr. Rhea took the first contract for land William Blackman is regarded as the first settler.

In 1803, 1804, and 1805 there came Elijah Root, William Johnson, George Darrow, John Olney, William Blackman, who, it is said, raised the first crop of corn, and whose child was the first born in the town; William Whitney, whose death was the first, caused by falling from a tree; Lillie Fisher, settling on the farm so-called, and his son Alanson T., who died at the age of 98 years; and Caleb Blodgett, whose large farm stood on higher ground than any place between Batavia and Buffalo. Near his house stood a tall elm tree, the top of which was visible from Bethany and many points in Wyoming County. There also came Lewis Disbrow, Joseph Fellows, Elias and John Lee, Samuel Russel, Elijah Rowe, Solomon Blodgett, Elisha Carver, and Benham Preston, the most of whom took of the land or located in 1804.

In 1806 the following persons signified their intentions of locating, some of whom did, a few, perhaps, failing to make actual settlement: Jonas Blodgett, John Churchill, David Clark, Isaac Chaddock, David Carter, John Chamberlin, Timothy Fay, Aaron Gale, H. Williams, Elnathan Wilcox, Amos Jones (the first school teacher), Capt. Ezekiel T. Lewis, Alexander Little, B. Lyman, J. McCollister, and Henry Rumsey.

In 1807 S. Bradway, Ezekiel Churchill, G. W. Wing, Philo Porter (farmer and pensioner of the War of 1812), Joseph Gladden, and Rudolphus Hawkins, who died in 1849, came in. Mr. Hawkins was the father of Jesse, John, Harvey, Henry, and Van Rensselaer, and they were at one time the largest, if not the most influential, family in town. Timothy Hawkins, who came from Tolland, Conn., was one of the first permanent settlers near the village, on the farm where Ira T. Hawkins now lives. known as the Hawkins farm. He came when only two houses were built between Batavia and Alexander. He died at the age of 84 years. About this time one William Adams erected a saw-mill and grist-mill on the site of the present flouring-mill in the village. He was also lieutenant of militia, and died in 1810.

Isaac Parrish was one of the pioneers of Genesee County. He was born in the town of Randolph, Vt. His father, William Parrish, moved from Vermont to this county in 1806, and settled in the town of Alexander, on a farm just west of the old elm tree. During the War of 1812 his father directed him to go to Batavia and purchase some necessaries for the family. While at Batavia a portion of the army was marching through to Buffalo; the services of the team and driver were wanted to convey some of their camp equipage to Niagara River; himself and team were pressed into service, very much to his discomfort, and was compelled to proceed with the army to Buffalo, where he was paid for the services rendered, and directed to return home, 30 miles away, through the forest, where anxious friends were waiting his return, as they were very much in want of the articles he was directed to get at Batavia. Soon after the war, and in the employ of his uncle (Alba Blodgett), he drove a seven-horse team for seven years, between Albany and Buffalo, drawing freight for the Western World, before the Erie Canal was in operation. He was employed several months during the construction of the locks at Lockport. He assisted in drawing the machinery and irons from Albany to Buffalo for the second steamboat that ran on Lake Erie. In 1834 he purchased the farm where his son, George B. Parrish, lived. It was at that time a wilderness; only about 15 acres of the farm were then under cultivation. He was an enterprising and successful farmer; a resident of the town of Alexander 66 years; and died in April, 1872.

Harvey Hawkins and Hon. Abel Ensign came in 1808, and kept the first tavern and store, and Thomas Rice, Lyman Riddle (a soldier of 1812), John Squires, Edmund Tracy, and Shubael Wing in 1809. Moses M. Page, from Connecticut, and Levi Thompson came in 1810, when there were only three settlers on the road between Batavia and Alexander. Mr. Page died aged 74 years. The same year Col. Seba Brainard became a neighbor to the few who preceded him. He was held in great esteem by all, and was a zealous Methodist. His son Harris succeeded to his property, and died on the homestead. Harris left two sons, Seba and Charles. John and Samuel Latham, about this time, put up the first framed dwelling. William Waite, Gehial Stanard, and Spencer Waldo, were settlers during the year. During 1811 Return B. Cady and John and B. Cady located.

Capt. Elisha Smith was born in Washington County, N. Y., October 19, 1785. In 1807 he united in marriage with Elizabeth Birdsall, of Otsego, Otsego County, N. Y., and in 1812 emigrated to Genesee County and located at Alexander. He performed noble service in the War of 1812, and participated in the memorable battle of "Black Rock." His estimable companion died May 13, 1855, aged 72 years. He never mixed largely in political matters, but his opinions were judiciously formed and fearlessly asserted. He was a faithful and consistent member of the Methodist Church, and that organization lost a valuable member in his demise. A friend, speaking of his death, says:

"Being one of the early pioneers he experienced many of the hardships, privations, and labors of the early settlers, but succeeded well in subduing the forest and bringing the soil to its present productiveness, and supplying his family with the competencies of life. His friends were always welcomed with cordiality at his house, and in his death they lost a much-esteemed and valuable citizen. He was very child-like in his affection for and manner towards his friends, and more than all that can be said of him is that he was a good man."

Up to this time settlements upon the Purchase were rapid. Usually the coming of one family would be followed by others from their old homes, but rumors of war and preparations for it about this time (1812) impeded somewhat the increase of pioneers, and while we have no particular names as coming during the year, we note names of some, among whom were Dr. Jonathan Hall, a farmer of genuine worth, and a Presbyterian. He died aged 56. There was also John Riddle (father of Lyman and Thomas), an honored citizen and the first justice of the peace, and supervisor for several years. He died in 1849. Thomas first settled in Darien. He followed mercantile pursuits, was town clerk, postmaster, Sessions justice, and justice of the peace for 28 years. He died in 1889. Lyman Riddle was a soldier of 1812. There were Henry Innis, from Nova Scotia, Rodney Wadsworth, Samuel Favor, who died at the age of 95 years, and during the later period of his life lived in the village, and Timothy Mooers an enterprising mechanic, who was foremost in all movements to build up the village. He built the first grist-mill (now standing), and combined with it a wool-carding and cloth dressing machine, attracting customers to the place. There were also Jerome Dickinson, who died in 1885, and whose daughter taught school for 30 years; and Leverett Seward, a good citizen, a soldier in the war, and wounded, drew a pension, and who was twice elected to the Assembly. He died in 1817, and left two sons, Winfield S. and Charles F.

The Kidder family made their advent in the new settlement sometime during this year or 1813. One authority gives the year 1806; but we cannot verify it. John Kidder came from Massachusetts, and located on the farm now occupied by Earl Kidder. He cleared up his place with the help of a family of sturdy boys, Alvin, Earl, Hosea, and Sidney. Alvin afterwards moved to Boston and engaged in the leather trade. Earl remained upon the farm, dying in 1871. He was a justice, supervisor, and loan commissioner. Ruth Kidder is on record as having located a farm about 1813. The Kidder family were quite an element in society in those days.

Gen. Josiah Newton settled at an early day, in 1815, was a large farmer, owned a beautiful place, and died well off. Captain Marcellus Fellows, Josiah Goodrich, Asahel Warner, Stephen Day, Esq., and Wolcott Marsh also located in town, and during the year the Moulton family, consisting of Capt. Royal, Benjamin, and E. C., a full sketch of all of whom will be found further on. Newcombe Demary, Nathaniel Loomis, and Joshua Rix, whose farm was next to the Kidders', were settlers in 1814. It has been stated that Benjamin and Eunice Moulton were the first persons married, but we cannot verify it.

The year 1815 was memorable for a large influx of pioneers in the new settlement. We record the names of Emory and Solomon Blodgett, and Fred Balch, who was a farmer and cooper. He married Harriet Benedict at the old Fargo tavern. Samuel Benedict, a liberal benefactor and citizen, was instrumental in founding the seminary, giving $1,000 towards it, and also was an early promoter of the Exchange Bank. He finally moved South. The Chaddocks, Luther (who later built a fine cobblestone house on his farm), Thomas, and Dennis B., located in the southeast part of the town. There were also C. Williams, Baxter H. Wilmarth, Robert Lounsbury, Emory F. Lincoln, Noah North, who came in 1808, and his sons Noah and James A., Eben North, who came in 1816, and William Parrish, who was a man of integrity and industry. He died in 1872, leaving a son, George. He was a commissioner of highways for 18 years.

In 1816 we have Daney Churchill and Cherrick Van De Bogart, of the "Van De Bogart settlement," in the northwest part of the town. Nicholas Van De Bogart, a son, afterwards moved to the village and kept the tavern. He has several sons living. In addition we have Timothy Hoskins, James R. Jackman, Gorama Kelsey, Lyman Brown, James Lewis, N. Manson, Ira Newton, who was always at peace with his fellowmen, and J. G. Tiffany, a handy mechanic, a farmer, and a wool-carder, who moved to Darien.

The following came in 1817: Silas Southwell, Jonas and James Stimars, S. C. Spring, Ezra W. Osborn, and David Halsted, in the north part of the town. Philip Cook, Ebenezer Scoville, and Guy Shaw came in 1819. In 1820 came S. B. Brainard, Daniel F. Bowen, C. J. Hawkins, Sanford Riddle, and S. B. Smith; Horace B. Houghton, Eliphalet Peck, the first settler on the Peck farm, and John and Benjamin Simonds, in 1824 in the north part of the town. There were also Philo Porter (a soldier of 1812), Moses Dickinson, and O. T. Fargo, of the famous Fargo tavern, which he kept for 41 years. It was a favorite place of resort for balls and parties. *A Mr. Austin formerly kept this tavern up to Mr. Fargo's taking possession in 1825. A Charles Austin was an early school teacher, in a log house about this time, but it cannot be learned if it is the same one.

As we are now coming to an intermediate period, where not a few of the settlers of that time are still living, we do not deem it best to enumerate them all, but will give space to Rufus G. Avery, who came in 1835, whose son Rufus G. still resides in town. James Day came in the same year, whose daughter, Mrs. Hannah H. Lawton, is still a resident. John Dirstine, in 1830, married Alice Riddle, and occupies the Riddle farm. Richard L. Waite was a blacksmith and farmer, and a son, a Methodist minister, survives him.

The town was organized June 12, 1812, and we will give as we are able some names of those identified with it, and the village, who were instrumental in advancing its growth. John and Samuel Latham are supposed to be the first who engaged in mercantile business, and some contend that Harvey and Henry Hawkins were in advance of them. Certainly undue credit cannot be given the latter for their enterprise. Horace B. Houghton was an old resident, a mechanic, and regarded always as being upright. He was justice for 28 years. James R. Jackman started in life poor, but by hard work became well off. He was justice for several years, and was made judge of the County Court by Governor Seward. George W. Wing, son of Shubael, was a carriage-maker. The firm of Wing & Willard supplied the country around with wagons of superior make. They also made freight cars, and erected many dwellings in the village.
Timothy Mooers, who built the present mill, also carried on wool-carding. He made woolen rolls, which were then taken by the women and spun into yarn, and by looms wove into cloth. Mr. Mooers then fulled, dyed, and pressed the same, ready to be made into wearing apparel. This industry he kept up until 1835. He was also in the drug and grocery business, and postmaster for many years. His son Alonzo T. was connected with Judge Rix in the grain and milling business, and kept a drug store in 1869. In 1829 Charles Patterson had a carding and woolen factory. Solomon Cook was a post rider. Ira Earll was postmaster in 1831. W. C. Spaulding was postmaster in 1837, and V. R. Hawkins in 1841. Rix and Blodgett were merchants in 1832, and Hawkins and Blodgett in 1839. E. & E. B. Foote operated a woolen factory in 1841. Blossom & Newton were merchants in 1842, and Heman Blodgett & Co. in 1844. Edward T. Squires was a musician, and also a farmer.

Charles Chaffee was said to be the first physician. Alden Richards was an early tanner. Abner Nichols was a boot and shoe dealer in 1846. Wells, Adams, and Matteson were old-time cabinetmakers. Orlando Fellows, 50 years ago, worked at his trade as blacksmith. Cyrenus Wilbor, an early settler (before 1807), was a tanner and currier. The second couple married by Father Paddock, in 1819, was Mr. Wilbor and wife. He also kept tavern at one time; during his occupancy it was set fire to and burned, by, it is supposed, the owner of the building. Mr. Wilbor was the father of Rev. A. D. Wilbor, once superintendent of the Blind Asylum, and grandfather of Rev. W. C. Wilbor, now pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Le Rôy.

In 1869 the Messrs. Moulton were extensive millers. George Jones was engaged in sash and blind manufacturing. W. L. Dickinson was a merchant, and Horace Hunn had a saw-mill.

The tavern in early times being quite an element of civilization, we wish we were able to devote space to the history of the old stand in Alexander, but can only mention a few of its proprietors after Henry Hawkins opened one in 1807. N. Perry was proprietor for several years, or until about 1837, then a Mr. Lathrop, about 1838, when Nicholas Van De Bogart moved from his farm in 1839, opened up the place on an improved plan, and for 10 years proved he was able to attend to the wants of the traveling public. Alvah Montgomery and Cyrenus Wilbor each kept tavern for a short time. In 1865 C. W. Bowen was proprietor, and soon Rufus G. Avery bought the stand and for a long time entertained many guests. At present a Mr. Fancher is in charge.

The unusual fall of water in the Tonawanda at this place was early taken advantage of, and as soon as a mill was built, in 1808, it caused a large business to be done, the products of the soil from a large extent of country finding a market at the village. The Hawkinses, the Blodgetts, Judge Rix, the Moultons, and others, all by their energy and sagacity, aided the farmer to make a sale of his produce, giving an impetus to trade and gradually enabling the pioneers to lead a more comfortable existence.

With this new life came a desire on the part of parents to provide for the education of their children, something beyond what was afforded the first settlers. Preliminary to the move we note the formation of the "Alexandrian Library" as early as 1811, by Alexander Rhea, Henry Hawkins, Colonel Brainard, Samuel Latham, Jr., Harvey Hawkins, Noah North, and Ezra W. Osborn, who were elected trustees. In 1828 a literary society was formed, and in 1837 the citizens raised $6,000 to build a seminary, which cost $7,000, the deficiency being made up by Henry Hawkins. The name was "Genesee and Wyoming Seminary," and E. T. Crooker and E. T. Benedict were the first principals. It was built of stone, and flourished beyond all expectation, there being at one time 300 students in attendance. By a foreclosure of mortgage Henry Hawkins came into possession of the building, and in 1845 obtained a charter from the Regents of the University, gave to it the lands and buildings, and endowed it with $4,000, a large library, and geological specimens. In less than three months after it was in operation he died, of small-pox. Harvey Hawkins died of the same disease soon after.

The building occupied as a union school has now about 100 scholars, and Professor O. Warren is the principal. It is situated on Buffalo street.

The general training day.—In 1807 the military authorities of the State organized a regiment on the Holland Purchase, and one of the companies being located in this town was honored with some of the principal officers. In the fall of 1808 the first regimental or general training was held here, and reviewed by Brigadier-General Alexander Rhea. Colonel William Rumsey was officer of the day. The regiment was formed on the ground east of the village, and on the north side of the road, the right resting near the site of the present stone church, on a line parallel with the road. "Everybody went to general training—men, women, children, and dogs. Some went on foot, some on horseback, and some in ox-wagons. The young fellows wore new ‘fine’ shirts, about as fine and white as stuff now used for bags, but which cost six shillings per yard, and these were the first fine shirts worn in this town."

The Exchange Bank of Genesee.—The business interests of Alexander and vicinity were so extensive that its enterprising citizens of 1842 determined to have more convenient banking facilities than were accorded them in Batavia; so that, at so early a date, the small village of Alexander became a rival of its larger sister village and county seat. The Hawkins family were instrumental in its organization, and later D. W. Tomlinson became interested in it, and buying up all the stock removed it to Batavia in 1850. Fred Follett and E. S. Warner were cashiers at different times.

The present grist and flouring-mill is owned by C. S. Thompson. For 11 years prior to his ownership Messrs. Moulton and Null conducted the business, buying the same in 1866. E. G. Moulton, the present worthy resident of the village, has the credit of being in business longer than any one person who has ever lived in Alexander. His mercantile life covers a period of 52 years, and his transactions covered a large scope of country, and were as varied as they were extensive. W. G. Pollard is a merchant in the village. D. G. Thomas is manager of the cheese factory, which was built in 1877, by a stock company. They made 272,000 pounds of cheese the first year; their capacity is now 1,200 pounds daily, or the milk from 500 cows.

The village of Alexander was incorporated in 1834. Charles R. Egleston is now the president.

At the depot is an evaporator for drying apples and fruits in their season, which is owned by Charles Benedict, of Attica. Convenient to the railroads is a very extensive storehouse owned by a Mr. Sofsky, of Baltimore, which he uses for storing apples, its capacity being 20,000 barrels.

The Alexander Cemetery, located near the depots, was surveyed in 1813, by Nathan Holmes, and his was the first interment therein. It is beautifully laid out into lots, and the trustees are constantly making improvements in it.

Martin Gray is proprietor of the only saw-mill in town. William Harrington, the dentist, has been a resident for 21 years. Dr. Joel S. Paige came about 1849. He died in 1855, and his widow still resides here. Dr. Edward Smith has lived in town two years, and Dr. E. C. David, a graduate of Ann Arbor (Mich.) University, came in May, 1889.

Alexander has sent out quite a number of men of note, among them being William Tilden Blodgett, who for some time lived in New York city, and was an influential citizen and a patron of fine arts. He died in 1875. Henry Martin was at one time president of the Manufacturers’ Bank of Buffalo. He married a sister of Henry Hawkins.

The first religious meeting was held in 1805, Elder Burton presiding. The first religious society was of the Presbyterian order, in 1807, organized by Harvey Hawkins and Cyrenus Wilbor. A reorganization took place in 1818, when there were 10 members connected with it. The Rev. Solomon Hebbard was its first pastor, and the first house of worship was built of stone in 1828. The present pastor is Rev. McElroy. The church, built in 1845, will seat about 200 persons, and the property is valued at $5,000.

The Methodists and Presbyterians used in common a house of worship erected of wood in 1828. Elder Segar aided in organizing a church as early as 1827, with a very few members. Their present church is located on Church street, and the property is valued at $8,500. The building has a seating capacity of 300 persons. There are 35 church members, and nine teachers and 60 scholars in the Sunday-school.

The Universalist Church in Alexander was begun in 1833, by a few members, who organized themselves into a society. Their present house of worship was erected (of wood) June 3, 1833. There are about 30 families connected with the society, and their property is valued at $2,500. Rev. Herbert W. Carr attends to their spiritual wants.

There is also located in the village a church occupied by the denomination of Free Methodists, but the following is small in numbers.

There is a lodge of the I. O. G. T., No. 796, with the following officers: E. P. Lincoln, C. T.; Minnie Dart, V. S.; F. J. Churchill, secretary; John Dart, treasurer; Mrs. M. J. Millington, financial secretary; and Mrs. Jennie Webb, chaplain.

The Alexander cornet band was organized in 1888. It has now 13 pieces, with Frank Richards as leader, and they meet weekly.

The officers of the Macedonian Lodge, of Alexander, are: George W. Martin, C. T.; Miss Minnie Dart, V. T.; E. M. Allen, R. S.; Delbert Phelps, F. S.; Luther Gardner, T.; Mrs. Phelps, C.; R. O. Burt, M.; Mrs. Loren Pierce, I. G.; Miss Nettie Zwetsch, sentinel; Mrs. C. F. Lewis, S. J. T.; Emory Lincoln, P. C. T.

It was under date of February 24, 1802, that Joseph Ellicott applied for the new county of Genesee. It was taken from Ontario, and erected by act of March 30, 1802. Then Mr. Ellicott removed his land office from Ransom's to the new building he had erected in "the forks of the trail," leading from the Genesee to Lewiston and Buffalo. The first land office was really located near where D. E. E. Mix lives. It was only a temporary affair. The early settlers stopped in that section of the place and unpacked their traps. The town of Batavia at this date included the entire Holland Purchase. From this town (or territory) other towns, then counties, were formed, so rapid was the influx of settlers until 1812. In that year Alexander, Bergen, Bethany, and Pembroke were taken off, and Elba and Stafford in 1820, leaving the present town beautifully located in the center of the county. Its surface is level, or gently undulating; a limestone ridge, forming a terrace from 20 to 50 feet high, extends east and west through the north part of the town. Tonawanda Creek flows slowly northward to Batavia village, and bending westward passes through the town near the center to the west border. The other principal stream is Bowen's Creek, which flows northwesterly across the southwest corner of the town into the Tonawanda. The soil is a deep sandy and gravelly loam, very fertile, and has a clay subsoil. The town is rectangular in shape, is nine miles east and west, and six miles north and south, and contains 34,437 acres of land.

The first settlers in the township were Isaac Sutherland, who erected a log house on his farm two miles west of the village, and Col. William Rumsey and Gen. Worthy L. Churchill, who settled in the east part. Others were John Lamberton, Samuel F. Geer, and Benjamin Morgan. The first town meeting was held at Vandeventer's tavern (now Newstead, Erie County), March 1, 1803. The following officers were elected: Supervisor, Peter Vandeventer; town clerk, David Cully; assessors, Enos Kellogg, Asa Ransom, Alexander Rhea; commissioners of highways, Alexander Rhea, Isaac Sutherland, Suffrenus Maybee; overseers of the poor, David Cully, Benjamin Porter; collector, Abel Rowe; constables, John Mudge, Levi Felton, Rufus Hart, Abel Rowe, Seymour Kellogg, Hugh Howell; overseers of highways, Martin Middaugh, Timothy Hopkins, Orlando Hopkins, Benjamin Morgan, Rufus Hart, Lovell Churchill, Jabez Warren, William Blackman, Samuel Clark, Gideon Dunham, Jonathan Willard, Thomas Layton, Hugh Howell, Benjamin Porter, and William Walsworth.

The settlement for each year up to 1809 was as follows: in 1801 there were 40; 1802, 56; 1803, 230; 1804, 300; 1805, 415; 1806, 524; 1807, 607; 1808, 612; and 1809, 1,160. In 1825 there was a population of 3,352 in the town and village. In 1840 there was 4,000; in 1875 over 7,000; and it is presumed there is now a population of 12,000 in the town and village, with a sure and steady increase.

James L. Barton, son of Sheriff Barton, in 1807, in commenting on the early settlement of the town, writes:

"Between Stafford and Batavia were a number of farms taken up by settlers. My father was sheriff that year (1807), and executed McLean. Governor Tompkins was circuit judge. The great number attending the trial made it difficult to get lodgings, and the judge and sheriff slept in the same bed. Near the arsenal in Batavia the road divides, one branch to Buffalo, the other to Lewiston via Lockport. The latter was called Queenston road. On it, for four or five miles, were only four log houses. The first house from Dunham's tavern, after crossing the openings and the Indian village, was Walworth's (tavern), 13 miles."

Gideon Dunham, Sr., a Revolutionary soldier, came in 1804, and kept a tavern until his death in 1841. He came from Massachusetts, and was mixed up in Shay's rebellion. He had a noted peach orchard, and it was a celebrated resort for pleasure parties who went to "Gid's to eat peaches and hear him swear." His son, Shubael Dunham, succeeded him in tavern-keeping. He was also a member of the State legislature in 1823, and again in 1826, and also a presidential elector. He was a very prominent man in his day, and died in 1848.

We are enabled to give the location of a few of the pioneer settlers. Rufus McCracken, in January, 1802, bought lot 6, section 10, 168 acres, for $263.37. David McCracken, at the same time, bought lot 8, section 10, 152 acres, for $418. Abel Rowe, in April, 1803, bought lot 8. Samuel F. Geer, in October, 1802, bought lots 5 and 6, sections 7 and 8. Isaac Sutherland, in November, 1803, bought lots 1 and 2, sections 7 and 8. Benjamin Morgan, in November, 1802, bought lot 2, section 6. All the above were in the west part of the town. In the east part Col. William Rumsey bought, in July, 1803, lot 8, section 4.

Turner gives some interesting narratives obtained from personal interviews with the early pioneers, which are worth quoting. That of Mrs. Anna Foster, wife of Eden Foster, is as follows:

"In the year of 1805 we settled upon a farm near Batavia. There were then inhabitants enough to make an agreeable neighborhood. We used to have ox-sleds; occasionally it would be out to Gideon Dunham's, where we used to avail ourselves of the services of the left-handed fiddler, Russell Noble.

"Some of our earliest parties were got up by first designating the log house of some settler, and each one contributing to the entertainment; one would carry some flour, another some sugar, another eggs, another butter, and so on; the aggregate making up a rustic feast. These parties would alternate from house to house. Frolics in the evening; would uniformly attend husking bees, raisings, quiltings, and pumpkin pairings. All were social, friendly, obliging; there was little aristocracy in those primitive days. John Forsyth settled near Dunham's grove in 1802, remaining there until 1807. Joseph Hawks came to Batavia in 1802, and moved to Erie County in 1805. It took him three days with a yoke of oxen and a wagon to go about 18 miles."

In the western part of the town William H. Bush, whose wife was a sister of James Post, who settled in 1803, was the pioneer miller, carder, dresser, distiller, papermaker and farmer, and a narrative of his taken from Turner is well worth reading:

"I moved my family from Bloomfield in May, 1806. The settlers on the Buffalo road between my location and Batavia village were Isaac Sutherland, Levi Davis, Timothy Washburn, Rufus McCracken, Daniel McCracken, Thomas Godfrey, Linus Gunn, Henry Starks, Alanson Gunn, David Bowen, John Lamberton, living on the road west. There was then less than 100 acres cleared on the Buffalo road in the distance of six miles west of Batavia. I built a log house, covered it with elm bark,—could not spare time to build a chimney,—laid a better floor in my house, plastered the cracks, and hired an acre of land cleared,—just enough to prevent the trees falling upon my house. When the mill was built I had it paid for, but to accomplish it I had sold some pork and grain I had produced by working land upon shares in Bloomfield—in fact, everything but my scanty household furniture. My saw-mill proved a good investment; boards were much in demand at $7.50 per thousand; the new settlers stocked the mill with logs to be sawed on shares. In 1808 I built a machine shop, a carding and cloth-dressing establishment. These were the first upon the Holland Purchase. On the 10th of June, that year, I carded a sack of wool, first ever carded by a machine on the Purchase. It belonged to George Lathrop, of Bethany. I also dressed a full piece of cloth for Theophilus Crocker. There are on my books the names of customers from as far south as Warsaw and Sheldon; from the east as far as Stafford; from the west to the Niagara River and Lake Erie, including Chautauqua County; from pretty much all of the settled portion of the Purchase. I carded in the season of 1818 3,029 lbs. of wool; the largest quantity for any one man was 70 lbs., the smallest 4 lbs. The lots averaged 18 lbs. Allowing three lbs. to a sheep, the average number of sheep then kept by the new settlers would be six; though it is presumed that the number was larger, as in those days much wool was carded by hand.

"The machinists of the present day may be glad to learn how I procured my machinery. I bought my hand-shears of the Shakers at New Lebanon; my press-plate at a furnace in Onondaga; my screw and box at Canaan, Conn.; my dye-kettle, press, papers, etc., at Albany. My transportation bill for these things was over $200. I built a grist-mill in 1809; in 1817 a paper-mill and distillery. I manufactured the first ream of paper west of the Genesee River. During all the period of my milling operations I was clearing up the farm where I now reside. Coming into the woods, as I have related, dependent almost wholly upon the labor of my hands, in the first 20 years success had so far attended my efforts that I had accumulated some $15,000 or $16,000."

The above mills were destroyed by fire in 1832. The present mill was built soon after by Clifford & Bailey. It is now owned by John Garwood, and has a capacity of 50 barrels of flour per day. The saw-mill built by Mr. Bush in 1806 is now owned by Martin Herbolt.

At Bushville several years ago there was a very extensive canning factory, which made a lively business in its day. But its success was not of long duration. Some of the plant was moved to Batavia.

In 1850 Charles Cornwall commenced making brick on road 50, and still continues the manufacture to the extent of about 100,000 yearly.

In 1875 some 20 members of Friends, at Bushville, built a church. The first person in charge of the church and society was Mary G. Weaver, now the president of the W. C. T. U. of the State of New York. W. L. Dean now attends to the spiritual wants of the society. There are 40 members connected with it. The church is built of wood, at a cost of about $500, and will comfortably seat 100 persons. They also have a Sabbath school of 25 scholars and three teachers.

A Dr. Northrup began practice at Bushville about 1840. He died in 1861.

At Dawes Corners, in the, north part of the town, on the Elba town line,
Dr. J. K. Billings settled early. He was a noted physician in his day and practiced over a large scope of country. On the Buffalo road, six miles from Batavia, was located a tavern, at about 1826, kept by Solomon Frisbie. In the southeast corner of the town one Bartholf kept a tavern stand as late as 1854.

One authority tells us that "Batavia" in the Seneca dialect is Ge-ne-un-da-sais-ka, the place of mosquitoes, or "Mosquito Town." Another Indian derivation is Deo-on-go-wa (the great hearing place).

From best information available we learn that early in 1801 (in January or February) Mr. Ellicott fixed his mind on this location, determining to locate the land office and build up a town. February 17, 1801, he writes to Richard M. Stoddard, at Canandaigua, as follows:

"I expect to make my establishment at or near the Bend of Tonnewauta, and there (or then) let the Genesee Road fork, one to be directed to Buffalo, the other to Queenston, and place my office in the fork looking Eastward. Should you be inclined to improve a 40-acre lot there you can have it."

The fork is where the arsenal stood, opposite the present residence of F. B. Redfield. A post route had previously been established, leading from Canandaigua, by Avon, to the Bend (Batavia), and thence through the "Big Plains," on the Tonnewauta Indian Reservation, to Lewiston. Mr. Ellicott, in writing to Paul Busti, May 30, 1801, says:

"Finding it extremely inconvenient living from the Post Road, I am about making an establishment thereon. I could have wished, however, for a place more central in my district, for the Queenston and Buffalo Road to have forked, but the Tonnewauta Reservation prevented. This establishment will be situate in the 12th Township and 2d Range. The Tonnewauta Creek, a stream of Water 80 feet in breadth, will pass through the Town, at the Western extremity of which the two most public Roads in this Country will fork: one leading to Queenston, in Upper Canada, and the other to New Amsterdam (now Buffalo) at the East end of Lake Erie, Presque Isle, and New Connecticut. The Building Lots will contain 40 acres of land, 20 perches in front, and 320 in depth, being a sufficiency of land, well cultivated, to raise bread, and support a family.

"This place being the first establishment, its local situation cannot otherwise be than always a well situated Village, and probably the next County Town, and a Post Town, as soon as I can have a building erected for an office. I beg leave to compliment this place with the name Bustiville, or Bustia. Several lots are already spoken for, and one house erected."

July 14, 1801, Mr. Ellicott further writes:

"It is with pleasure that I enclose a plan of Bustia, or Bustiville."

Calling the place by that name was opposed by Mr. Busti, as conveying the idea of something ferocious, and Mr. Ellicott yielded to Mr. Busti's wishes. July 18th Mr. Ellicott, writing to John Thompson, directing him to go to Canandaigua, says:
"You can return by Big Tree, and pay Minor for the Pork, and from thence you can explore the road Big Tree to the new town at the Bend. That place is not to be called Bustiville, as I had formally an intention, that gentleman not possessing a wish to have his name perpetuated in that way."

After Mr. Ellicott had abandoned the above name he designed calling it Tonnewauta, as appears by his letter of July 31, 1801:

"In my last letter I neglected mentioning that I had given over the idea of covering the 'House' at Tonnewauta Town with bark. Indeed, I have ever considered those kind of coverings as money thrown away, when made use of for Dwelling Houses; as all work, done merely temporary, is labor, time, and money lost; therefore my object is to have everything executed for permancy. Mr. Eggleston has engaged to be at Tonnewauta in two weeks, and make shingles and cover the House in a good and substantial manner. I could have it done sooner, but am of the opinion this is the shortest period. If the roads are not too bad to bring some laths from the saw-mill it would be better to shingle on than split stuff. However, if the laths cannot be procured by the period the shingles are made, I suppose rived laths will do.

"P. S.—The pitch of the roof to be middling flat. I enclose a plan of Tonnewauta, which you will find is at last modified agreeably to my ideas when last there; that is, to have the Public Square in the forks of the Big Tree and Connewaugus roads."

The precise point of these forks is near where Dellinger avenue intersects Main street, or where the Hon. D. E. Evans built his house (since occupied as a school by Mrs. Bryan), a view being obtained of all the roads in every direction. It will thus be seen that this place was once called "Tonnewauta," for a short time at least, and the "House" above noted was important as being the focus of operations of the Holland Land Company.

August 6, 1801, Mr. Busti wrote to Mr. Ellicott as follows:

"By the sketch of the town whose name deriving from mine, I wish you to suppress, and to change to that of its founder, or, if you prefer it, into that of 'Batavia.'" 1

Mr. Busti also says:

"I approve of the cheapness of your prices for the lots, but as it may induce speculation I leave it to you to consider whether it would not be advisable to oblige the purchaser to build a convenient House, in a fixed period, on each Lot. The site of your office is chosen with judgment, and I hope will stop all travelers to the West, to make bargains with you. I suppose that in the neighborhood of the office you will take 500 acres, the half of the 1,000 allowed to you according to contract."

September 8, 1801, Mr. Ellicott, writing from Ransom's, says:

"In respect to the Lots in the Town of Batavia I had anticipated your idea. I dispose of none but to absolute settlers, and only one lot to one man. My intention in laying out the town was for the purpose of forming a compact settlement, and should I dispose of four or five Lots to one man my object would be defeated; and if the place should ever become of much importance the purchaser of a Town Lot will be enabled to speculate upon part of his front, which I conceived would be a sufficient inducement to encourage the settlement of the place. In respect to the 500 acres, the half of the 1,000 allowed by contract, I have not as yet fixed its boundaries."

The next allusion to the name of Batavia is in a letter from Mr. Ellicot to Mr. Busti, dated West Genesee, October 3, 1801, and is as follows:

"In my last of Sept. 12th (from Canandaigua) I promised to write you immediately on my return to my office (Ransom's), at which place I expected to arrive in a few days, but on my arrival at Batavia I found it necessary to remain there to stimulate the hands employed in the erection of a Mill-Dam, at that place; my Brother, who has that business in charge, being at times, in consequence of indisposition with a slight fever, unable to attend to it. In consequence thereof I was detained so long that I did not reach my quarters here until the 30th ultimo."

The first letter written from this place which would seem to settle its name is from Ellicott to Busti dated "Batavia, 7th Nov., 1801," and reads:

"I have delayed writing until this period, with a hope that I should have been enabled to inform you that the Saw-Mill we are erecting at this place, to accommodate the settlement with boards, was in motion, but in this I am disappointed. This season has been extremely unfavorable for business, in this part of the country, as well on account of the continual rains, as that of almost the whole of the people in the infant settlement having been afflicted with the Billious and other Fevers, which circumstance has greatly retarded all our operations, as well as the settlement, and add to the catalogue of our misfortunes.

"The snow commenced falling the night before last, and is now 10 inches deep. I am happy, however, to be enabled to inform you that, amidst all the difficulties we have had to contend with, the Saw-Mill is in such a state of forwardness, that, without something very extraordinary occurs, we shall be able, shortly, to supply the settlement with boards, an article much wanted.

"In regard to the name of this place, it heretofore was called the Bend, from the circumstance of the Bend of the Creek, and is generally known by that name, but I have baptized it by the name of Batavia."

The saw mill above alluded to was an object of great solicitude. Its construction was of slow progress, but it was completed in December, as per letter of Ellicott's, dated "Ransom's, Dec. 4, 1801":

"The Saw-Mill I have been erecting at Batavia, which has cost a deal of labor, not being a natural seat, but a place where a convenience of this kind is absolutely necessary, will, the millwright informs me, be in motion by the 10th inst., at which period we expect to begin to make ourselves and the settlers comfortable floors, etc."

This saw-mill, operated until about 1822, was situated directly above the grist-mill that stood upon the ground where the present water works building now stands. The pine timber cut up at the mill was brought from the "Pinery" (now Elba, or Pine Hill), six miles distant, and, the demand for lumber being great, Mr. Ellicott employed Isaac Sutherland to cut a road to the "Pinery," and the job was commenced in January, 1802.

The building designed for the land office appears to have been completed in December, 1801. It was a two-story log building of good size, and situated in front of where D. E. Evans's house stood; and in rear of it was erected a kitchen for the accommodation of Mr. Ellicott and his household. On its completion John Thompson and others in the employ of the company occupied it, but Mr. Ellicott did not remove his office from Ransom's until the spring of 1802.

A road through the village being of vital importance, Mr. Ellicott engaged John Lamberton (with the assistance of one Mayo) to cut a road 100 feet wide and two miles long, from the west bounds of the village, where Mr. Redfield now lives, east, which road is now Main street. The contract price was $12 per acre, the timber to be cut up for logging, subsequently to be removed by the owners of the lots living upon the road.

A grist-mill was talked of as early as February, 1802, but was not completed until early in 1804, which event was hailed with delight, for it was sadly needed among even the few residents at that time, who had been obliged to go long distances for flour and meal.

As early as 1801 this place was decided upon for a village and the permanent location of the land office, and several people were attracted here to look around for a residence, among them being Abel Rowe, who arrived in March, 1801. He located on the lot opposite the present land office, raising the first building ever erected in the place. The first frame building was erected on what is now the corner of Main and Church streets, just west of where the old Presbyterian meeting-house stood, and was built by Isaac Sutherland in 1802 as a residence for himself and family. About the same time he and Mr. Geer put up another frame building, designed for their use as a joiner's shop, east of the dwelling. James Brisbane purchased for $700, in the summer of 1803, the first building from Mr. Sutherland, which was occupied as a dwelling by James W. Stevens. It afterwards became Mr. Brisbane's residence.

During the summer of 1802 William Munger erected the west half of what was known as Keyes House (or tavern), occupied by him, then by Mr. Rowe, and afterwards by Keyes, who enlarged, improved, and kept it as a tavern for many years. It was referred to as "Rowe's Hotel," as appears in a postscript of a letter of Mr. Ellicott's to John M. Minor, of Genesee, in which he says:

"A line forwarded either to the Transit Store House, or Mr. Rowe's Hotel, at the bend of Tonnawauta, will come to hand."
Soon after this Stephen Russell put up a log house on the spot where the old "Genesee House" stood, and where the Genesee Hotel, a brick building, stood, corner of Main and State streets, being the second building erected in the village. In March, 1801, Isaac Sutherland erected a log house on the Lewiston road northeast of the village. In the summer of 1802 Mr. Ellicott erected what was the east wing of the D. E. Evans residence, to which place he moved the land office, and the same year tore down the old two story land office.

Hotels and taverns.—Abel Rowe was the first tavern-keeper. He located nearly opposite the land office in 1801, but afterwards changed so Mr. Ellicott could locate his tract of 500 acres reserved by him. Rowe founded the "Keyes" stand, afterwards called "Frontier House." Under the administration of Rowe, and afterwards Keyes, the tavern was widely known in early times. It was the home of the early settler, whose business was with the land office. About its yard used to be seen the huge-covered wagons that transported goods from Albany to Buffalo, and during the War of 1812 was headquarters for officers of the army. This building stood on ground now owned by George Brisbane. A part of it was moved to Church street, and is now used as a dwelling. Keyes occupied it as late as 1829, and during the Morgan excitement announced himself as an anti-Mason. He was also proprietor of a line of stages. He died in 1833. At the court-house (now Ellicott Hall), in 1811, was a place of entertainment, the south portion of the building being used for that purpose. Aaron Van Cleve was sheriff and landlord. John Heacock (or Hickox) kept it in 1815. That portion of the building was so used up to 1820. One Ganson was the proprietor of an hotel in 1823.

Many of the present residents will recollect the "Genesee House," built by C. M. Russell, on the corner of Main and State streets. This was the location of the "Old Snake Den tavern" (one-half log and frame), which was burnt in 1833. C. M. Russell kept this place from 1802 until his death, in 1809, when Horace Gibbs (father of D. D. Gibbs) took possession. Mr. Gibbs married Russell's widow. He was a builder by occupation, and was also a farmer and proprietor of a daily line of stages from Canandaigua to Buffalo, owning 75 horses. Other landlords there were, among whom were Burnham, a partner of Russell, Gifford & Putnam, Belden, Monroe, and Gilbert, between 1825 and 1833. There was also John W. Stewart, brother of the late James W. Stewart, who kept it in 1826, and where William Morgan boarded. The old Eagle tavern was built in 1822, by Gibbs and a company. Erastus Smith, from Buffalo, was its first landlord. Bissell Humphrey, who had worked for Gibbs, was one of its most noted landlords. In 1827 he bought the site for $558.75, and put up a new tavern. This was of brick and painted yellow, and was burned in 1834. Another tavern or hotel soon took its place, and was called the "Eagle" until 1868, when Collins & Andrews changed the name to St. James. Some of its proprietors up to that period were Erastus Smith, E. Hall, Tisdale, Wilson (1857), Bradt, Van De Bogart (1863), McLean (1864), and Farnsworth (1866). O. C. Parker was there in 1886, when it was burned. A new and handsome brick structure, the Richmond, has been erected on its site, and is under the management of W. J. Mann, of Buffalo.

In 1815 Hinman Holden purchased of James Cochrane a small tavern, which he removed, and upon its site built an old-fashioned three-story framed "inn." This was about where 112 to 118 Main street is. Mr. Holden kept the tavern until 1822, when he leased it. Among its proprietors were James McKain (about 1825), Russell, Ezekiel Hall (1836), A. Smith (1840), J. Chatfield (who kept it as a temperance house in 1842), B. G. Tisdale, and others. David Danolds kept it in 1826, and it was here that Morgan and Miller were taken during the excitement. S. D. Green, an anti-Mason, succeeded Danolds. The American Hotel, a brick edifice, replaced it, which was burnt in 1850.

In 1813 a Mr. Leonard built the house now owned by Solomon Masse, and used it as a tavern. He died, and Cotton Denio married his widow and assumed the duties of landlord. Mr. Denio married for his first wife Debby, granddaughter of Benjamin Porter. At the east end of the village, where the Rochester road forks, a place of entertainment was kept by one Hurd, who was succeeded by a Mr. Johnson. Lamont Holden kept the West End Hotel at an early day. It is now under the management of Stephen W. Brown.

The Wilson House was opened in 1869 by one Mossman. O. C. Parker succeeded him in 1871, and D. Hooper in 1885, and it is now called the Tibbitts House. The Western Hotel, built a good many years ago by Mr. Gast, was burned in 1889. On the present site of the Parker House was a tavern called the "Farmers' House," afterwards the "Allen House," and finally the "Western Hotel." It was kept by a Mr. Tisdale in 1847, by I. Backus in 1848, and by a Mr. Norton in 1859. John Washburn rebuilt it in 1868, calling it the "Washburn House." It was run by one

Humphrey for a number of years, and L. S. Crocker had it as late as 1886, when it was changed to the "Purdy House," and O. C. Parker, in 1889, renamed it the "Parker House." The "Pioneer House" was next east of the "Eagle tavern," kept by Ezekiel Hall in 1825. E. Parmelee succeeded him in 1826, and Gifford & Putnam in 1831, when it was burned.

thony Bechtel

The business of tavern-keeping in early days was a remunerative one, and the arrival and departure of stages was attended with no little curiosity and excitement. Batavia, being on the "Great Bend," was an important trading point; and being on the "State road" from Canawaugus to Buffalo all travel necessarily tended in this direction. A grant by the legislature was made, in the very early settlement of the place, to Lewis Street for carrying mail from Canandaigua to Buffalo, and to one Beach for carrying mail from Batavia to Lewiston. The stage started from Can-daigua on Monday mornings at 6 o'clock, and, passing through Batavia and Buffalo, reached Niagara on Thursday. The fare was six cents per mile. In 1817 a tri-weekly mail passed through Batavia. The advent of the railroads, in about 1837, caused a great depreciation in tavern and stage values, and the incentive no longer existed for keeping up the old-time hospitality. The stage proprietors continued to run their lines for about six years after the opening of the railroads.

The postoffice.—In early days mail for this village was directed to Genesee court-house, and as early as 1802 it was received and dispatched but once in two weeks, sometimes on foot, or on horseback, Canandaigua being the distributing point. James Brisbane was the first postmaster, his commission being dated July 21, 1802. He holding the office until 1806, when Ebenezer Cary was appointed in his place. Mr. Cary held the office until 1815, when his brother was appointed in his place, retaining the office for 14 years. Trumbull Cary was clerk for Mr. Brisbane, and also for Mr. Cary, and virtually discharged the duties of postmaster from 1805 to 1829, or for 24 years. In 1823 Mr. Cary placed the office in full charge of William Seaver, allowing him the emoluments of the same, which condition was also carried out by Simeon Cummings, who became postmaster in 1829, retaining that position until 1836, when Mr. Seaver was appointed in his place. The latter filled the position until 1842, when, on the accession of Harrison to the Presidency, Dr.
Levant B. Cotes was given the commission by President Tyler. Frederrick Follett succeeded Mr. Cotes in 1843, who was succeeded by Dr.
Charles E. Ford in 1849.
Early merchants.—James Bisbane, the first merchant and postmaster on the Holland Purchase, was born in Philadelphia, October 12, 1776, of Irish parentage. At the the early age of 22 years he embarked from that city with stores for the supply of the large body of men then engaged in the survey of the Purchase, under Joseph Ellicott. Their first destination was Stafford, or the Transit storehouse, so-called, where he remained a few months, or until January 2, 1800, when he, in company with Ellicott, returned to Philadelphia. In the spring of 1802 he opened the first stock of goods ever offered for sale in this village. The goods were shipped via Albany, the Mohawk, Lewiston, and Buffalo. His commission as postmaster was dated July 21, 1802, by Gideon Granger, P. M. G., and called for an office “in Batavia at the Genesee Court-House.” This was the second postoffice west of the Genesee River, Lewiston being the first one. He hired the building erected by Sutherland and Geer, finished it, and opened up his stock. The building was located on the northeast corner of Main and Church streets. He soon afterwards purchased the building for $300. He had for his clerk one Tiffany, who was proficient in the different languages spoken by the Indians, and thus brought trade from them. Rochester was an unknown place at that early day, and Mr. Brisbane’s trade covered a large scope of country from the Genesee to the Niagara rivers and the lakes. Benjamin Dorman, of New Haven, was another clerk of his, and remained in his employ until 1821, when he went to Alabama. In 1806 Mr. Brisbane resigned the office of postmaster, sold his goods, and rented his store to Trumbull Cary. Ebenezer Cary was appointed postmaster in his place. Mr. Brisbane went to New York, engaging in the book business for two years, when he returned to Batavia, and resumed business in 1808, upon the spot where he opened his first establishment. He continued his mercantile pursuits there until 1821, when the site was sold for church purposes, when he abandoned them for more lucrative employment. His intimate relations with the Holland Land Co. enabled him to take advantage of the purchase of lands at low prices, and thus became the owner of large tracts of real estate, which in years were greatly enhanced in value by the settlement of the country.

During the agitation of the building of railroads, and particularly in 1833, he associated himself with others and built the Tonawanda Railroad, of which he was the largest shareholder and a director. It was to Mr. Brisbane’s house that Gen. Scott (wounded in the battle of Lundy’s Lane in 1812) was taken, and where he recovered before going to Geneva.
In 1807 Mr. Brisbane married Mary Lucy Stevens, sister of Hon. James W. Stevens, judge of Genesee County. He died May 29, 1851, and at the time of his death had resided longer on the Holland Purchase than any other man. He left two sons, Albert, born 1809, and George, born March 15, 1812. George Brisbane is the only direct descendant who lives on the original tract, or lot, located by the original settler. The number of the original lot is 16. It was located by James Brisbane in 1809, and has more historic events and interest centered upon it than any other place in Genesee County.

In 1803 Burt & Stoddard put up a small building, using it for a store, it being the second in the new settlement. It was located between Brisbane's and Rowe's (or Keyes's) tavern. When Mr. Brisbane resumed business, in 1808, Trumbull Cary removed his goods and postoffice to the Burt & Stoddard store, until his own store and dwelling were erected in 1809.

Brisbane and Cary continued the only merchants until 1810, when E. Hart built a store, and Clark Heacox managed the business for him. The growth of the village was very rapid from 1808 until the War of 1812. Dr. Dwight, in 1804, passed through the place, and states that "it contained from 20 to 30 houses, most of them built of logs, the rest small, chiefly one story. The court-house has three stories, the second of which is the county jail. When we were there that season so many persons were ill of diseases common to this region that those who remained well were scarcely able to nurse the sick."

The War of 1812 retarded the growth of the village as well as the whole Purchase, so that accessions to the population, and the erection of buildings for business or residential purposes, was not rapid, and this state of things existed up to 1819, at which time, and up to 1830, we are enabled to record a few of the new comers, or merchants, that contributed to the business life of the place. There were in the mercantile trade from 1819 to 1830 James Brisbane, Trumbull Cary & Davis, Jonathan Lay, W. H. Wells, J. P. & A. Smith, W. S. Moore & Co., I. Norman Town, N. Loring, C. L. Swart, W. Davis, Rich & Allen, Finch & Moore, Foot & Ganson, Loring & Palmer, W. R. Thompson, Hanford & Filer, R. Henshaw, Cary & Grant, Platt & Stebbins, Blossom & Swift, H. & E. C. Kimberly, Webster & Reynolds, S. Grant & Co., Hewett & Billings, H. Tisdale, R. Dibble, J. & L. B. Cotes, and Cotes & Seaver. Other trades were represented as follows: Capt. Hull and one Bedford were silversmiths; S. McCain and C. C. Church were watchmakers; and James Cochrane and Cochrane & Fisher were bell founders. Simeon Cummings was a saddler and harnessmaker, and also postmaster, trustee, and county clerk. In his business he was succeeded by W. Manley. Ephraim Towner kept a shoe and leather store, and was general of militia. O. Williams was a saddler, and located where the present Catholic Church now is. W. L. Graves kept a leather store, and Stone & Rice were tanners. Benjamin H. Stevens and N. Follett were hatters, and James Cawte, H. B. Pierpont, S. Mead, and Samuel Taylor were tailors. Bush & Pomeroy were millers and sold plows. Oran Follett kept a book store and started the Times. H. Stevenson was agent of the "old line of stages" to Albany. Thomas Bliss and John De Wolf were cabinetmakers, Amos P. Parker was a merchant and bookseller, and Miss Ann Forbes was a milliner and mantuemaker. Philo Sanford made carding machines. A Mr. Folsom kept a meat market in 1819, and a Mr. Hawkins in 1830, for whom Robert Fowler, who came in 1831, worked. Isaac Joslyn was a blacksmith, and Thomas McCully was a builder. Bookstores were kept by Abner Pratt, S. C. Steele, and J. P. & A. Smith, and as lotteries were licensed about the year 1827 drawings were advertised to be made at these stores.

In this connection we give a list of merchants in 1849, compiled from an article furnished by Col. William Seaver in The Spirit of the Times:

Physicians.—We give here the names of other than regular physicians, who have been residents of Batavia:

Reuben Town, came 1803, died 1807; William L. Horton, came 1803, removed; Abel Turtlelot, came 1809, removed; George Anderson, came 1826, died in Ohio, 1834; Abraham Van Tayl and James Winne, came 1835; Sanford Emory, came 1858, died 1880; Richard A. Wells, came 1866, removed to Missouri; Maxwell G. Walkinshaw, came 1872, died 1887; Theron K. Nolton, son of Dr. Josiah, came 1854, died in Oakfield, 1863.

The following were of different schools of practice:

Eleazer Bingham, came 1826, removed; Charles A. Northrup, came 1850, died 1861; S. H. McCall, (had a water cure), came 1854, removed; L. D. Stone (botanic), came 1847, removed; Jacob Delamater (botanic), came 1848, removed; John C. McKenzie (eclectic), came 1851; Henry W. Wadsworth (eclectic), came 1854; J. G. Fross (eclectic); Conrad Backer (eclectic); Henry R. Foote, came 1848, removed; Henry Sheffield, came 1852, removed; J. M. Blakeslee, came 1852, removed; George F. Foote, came 1852, removed; Harvey Hutchins, died 1871.

Educational.—The public as well as private education of the young was well attended to, and in addition to the chapter of the "History of Union School District No. 2" we are enabled to give the names of some of those who opened and taught schools of a private character, with the years engaged in such occupation.

Thomas Layton, who settled in Batavia in 1801, was a teacher of the young prior to 1810. Mrs. Rachel Stevens, wife of Benjamin H. Stevens, a hatter, came in 1822 and taught a private school for 27 years, a part of the time on Liberty street. Her daughter, aged over 80 years, is still living. From that time until 1825 information is meagre regarding times. In that year we learn that the Rev. James Cochran and a Miss Gardner taught private schools. In 1826 Messrs. Nixon and Stearns opened what was termed the "Batavia Academy," and the same year a Mrs. Aikin, Mrs. Winchester, a number of maiden ladies, Miss L. Starr, Plumb, Colton, and Deshon were advertisers; and the query is, where did all the children come from, with the then small population, to furnish a livelihood for so many instructors?

There were in 1827 M. W. Fletcher and a Mr. Hovey. Horace U. Soper taught in 1828; Miss Blanchard (successor to Miss Colton) in 1829; Miss H. H. North and R. Hogue, Jr., in 1831; Miss Burnham in 1832–33; Mrs. Ford and H. H. Smead in 1833; and E. C. Porter and Lester Cross in 1835. A High school was taught in 1836 and 1837 by E. A. Hopkins and C. W. Wilson. S. E. Hollister had a school in 1840, and Mrs. J. F. Ernst a boarding school, at what is now 422 East Main street, in 1841–44. C. N. Chandler taught in 1841; Mrs. Rathbun in 1842; D. E. Walker in 1843-44; and Yound and Oliphant in 1844. A Batavia female seminary was taught by Misses Beardsley and Smith in 1844, and Mrs. William G. Bryan, whom nearly all the present residents will remember, had her noted school in 1848, where David E. Evans used to reside, and conducted it with skill and energy until a very few years ago. Miss E. G. Thrall taught in the same place from 1875 to 1889, and now teaches at East Pembroke. There was a collegiate institute in 1864, taught by E. Wildman, and a Miss McCully taught a school in 1864. This brings us down to the present time. Miss Ellen K. Hooker established, in 1883, "Park Place School," conducting the same for four years, or until about 1887, when the present highly talented and Christian lady, Miss Mary J. Stephens, took the school and has had charge of it since. There are accommodations for 12 boarding pupils and 50 day scholars. The musical department is under the charge of Herve D. Wilkins, A. M., of Rochester. The rooms are large, airy, and pleasant, heated by furnace, and lighted by gas. The grounds are shady, large, and spacious, with a lawn-tennis court.

Batavia village.—The village of Batavia is 300 feet higher than Buffalo, 400 feet higher than Rochester, and 685 feet above Lake Ontario. The highest point of land on the N. Y. C. & H. R. Railroad west of Albany is two miles west of Batavia, called the Summit, it being 923 feet above the ocean. The village is surrounded by a very wealthy agricultural region, and its railroad facilities are being constantly recognized by manufacturers who are seeking locations for pursuing their business. It has, also (more than one ordinarily sees), a tasty and desirable class of residences, built on the finest streets to be seen, and no other village in Western New York can compete with it for beauty and cleanliness.

In 1825, soon after the village was incorporated, there were only about 1,400 inhabitants. At that time land was comparatively cheap. The lot and one adjoining where the Holden store now is was sold for $150 in 1830. The site now occupied by St. James's Episcopal Church was bought in 1820 for $450. In 1811 James Cochrane paid $100 for 18 acres, the land lying on Bank street and fronting on Main street, one-half the distance to State street. In 1802 D. McCracken paid $170 for 34 acres now bounded by Jackson, Main, and Liberty streets. Bank street was called, in old times, "Dingle Alley," it being but a lane, wherein cows were driven to pasture, and the old fashioned cow-bell being attached to them in order to find them.

The early settlers of Genesee County were not wanting in patriotism.
Their diversions and holidays were few, and they made much of the return of the only National holiday. The custom then was to listen to the reading of the "Declaration of Independence" and, as many as could, retire to the tavern for dinner, at which toasts were drank. We give herewith the programme in 1826:

NATIONAL JUBILEE.

"The following are the regular toasts which were drank at the celebration in this village on Tuesday last (July 4, 1826):

"1st.—The Fiftieth Anniversary of American Independence! 'And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof, and it shall be a Jubilee unto you.'

"2d.—Our Common Country! 'May the blessings we enjoy under its happy form of government descend unimpaired to the latest posterity.' 3 cheers, 1 gun.

"3d.—The State of New York! 'Without an equal in resources and enterprise; may union at home render her respectable abroad.' 3 cheers, 1 gun.

"4th.—George Washington! (Drunk standing with solemn music playing.)

"5th.—The Heroes and Patriots of the two wars of Independence! 'Honor to the living and tears of gratitude to the memory of the dead.'

"6th.—The Militia! 'Bunker Hill and New Orleans, the commencement of the first and the close of the second war of Independence have proved them a sure defense in the hour of trial.' 9 cheers, 1 gun.

"7th.—The Army and Navy of the United States! 'The guardians of our National defense and the protectors of our National nights.' 9 cheers, 1 gun.

"8th.—The youth of our country! 'Let them remember that virtue and intelligence is the life of liberty.' 3 cheers, 1 gun.

"13th.—The Independent States of South America! 'They followed our example and have triumphed; with liberty for their object may they reach the goal of their highest ambition.' 5 cheers, 1 gun.'"

As early as 1827 the traveling showman was around; but we are not informed as to the extent and capacity of the house he drew. The weekly paper of June, 1827, calls attention to a troupe as follows:

"Theatre.—Messrs. Gilbert & Trowbridge are now in this village with their theatrical corps. They have already performed three nights to respectable houses. We would recommend the propriety of stationing someone in the back seats to preserve order. We have witnessed it ourselves, and have heard it complained of by others, that the boys on the back seats were too noisy. The bill of fare for this evening is rich and worthy of the attention of those who are fond of the theatrical profession. The pieces consist of 'The Soldier's Daughter' and 'Poor Soldier.'"

Imprisonment for debt was in order, as is shown by a notice taken from a paper dated June 25, 1826:

"A gentleman confined in Batavia jail, on strong suspicion of debt, offers his services to lawyers, Printers, Merchants, Tavern-keepers, Mechanics, in drafting or copying declarations, making up rolls, wrighting deeds, Mortgages, Bonds, &c. Posting books of every description. Apply at this office for further particulars."

In 1822 a Mr. Farnsworth was convicted of forging United States land warrants, and sentenced to be hanged on the 20th of September. A large crowd assembled to witness the execution, when, to their great disgust, the President granted a reprieve for six months. The murmurings of the disappointed multitude were loud and deep, and before the expiration of the six months' respite he was pardoned, as it appeared that he had committed no crime against the government. The first execution was one McLean, in 1807, who had committed murder in 1807, and was hanged the same year in Batavia. November 5, 1830, James Gray was executed for the murder of Samuel Davis, a tavern-keeper, of Le Roy. It is estimated there were over 5,000 persons present to witness the hanging. The execution took place south of where the railroad is, near the creek.

Batavia library.—In April, 1796, an act was passed by the legislature for the purpose of encouraging the formation of public libraries. Under that act the citizens of the new Genesee country vied with each other in organizing libraries. The first one established on the Holland Purchase was in November, 1804, when a meeting was convened at the house of Abel Rowe (tavern-keeper). Joseph Ellicott was chairman. The trustees were Richard Smith, William Rumsey, John Branan, Reuben Town, and Nathaniel Coleman.

Village incorporation.—Soon after the fire of 1821 a meeting of the citizens was held and a committee appointed to petition the legislature for an act of incorporation, which was granted April 23, 1823. The first meeting (to carry out this act) was held at Ganson's tavern, June 3, 1823. C. Carpenter and D. Tisdale (justices) presided; and the following persons were chosen as trustees: D. H. Chandler, D. E. Evans, N. Follett, S. Cummings, S. Finch, Trumbull Cary, treasurer; and Parley Paine, collector. Subsequently D. H. Chandler was chosen president of the village. The present village officers are George Burt, president; John Quirk, collector; George Roth, treasurer; and John Glade, assessor. Measures were also adopted in regard to fires, but no company was formed until the 20th of April, 1824, composed of the following persons: William Seaver, Jr., captain; Hinman Holden, D. H. Chandler, Frederick Follett, William Purcell, Parley Paine, Oran Follett, William Platt, Daniel Gates, Ralph Stiles, Hezekiah D. Platt, William Dickinson, C. C. Church, Nathan Follett, W. M. Seymour, I. Norman Town, William R. Thompson, Benjamin Allen, Stephen Grant, Nahum Loring, John S. Moore, Jonathan Lay, Horace Gibbs, David M. Gardiner, and Rufus Burnham. The first engine-house was under the old jail in the court-house. The Holland Land Co. gave the village the lot on Jackson street (now a blacksmith shop), which was to be a fire engine-house. Later they took it back and gave in return the quarters under the jail, the building being raised upon a high foundation, to admit of an engine being run under.

Batavia has had its share of destructive fires. The first one, on the night of December 22, 1821, originated in Mr. Baker's silversmith shop, north side of Main street, destroying buildings owned or occupied by the following persons: Moore & Finch, L. Baker, J. P. Smith, C. C. Church, and D. C. Miller's printing office. The amount of property destroyed was estimated at $10,000.

In April, 1833, fire was discovered in a building nearly opposite the Eagle tavern. It burned nearly the whole row of buildings on Main street, from Jackson to the Arcade block. In 1834 the Eagle tavern was burned, together with all the buildings from the corner of Big Tree (Ellicott) street around upon Genesee (Main) street, involving a loss of $30,000. In 1850 a fire destroyed the north side of Main street, from Bank street west from where the American Hotel stood. In January, 1884, a large portion of the harvester works was burned, involving a loss of over $40,000.

The Genesee County mills were built by Mr. Ellicott in 1803, enlarged to 60 x 150 feet in 1825, and were owned by Ellicott, Evans, Macomber, Jennison, Pierson & Randall, Olmstead, and others. They were destroyed by fire August 22, 1884, after which the land and property was purchased by the village authorities for the purpose of building water works, which purpose was carried out, resulting in the erection of a substantial brick structure, in which is machinery supplying all the power needed for water for fire and village purposes.

Cemeteries.—The Indians had a burial-place on a chestnut knoll on the Dr. Josiah Nolton place, or farm, on Jackson street road, south of the village, as numerous bones and glass beads were found there when the soil was removed to furnish material for a road. The earliest known place for burial within the village was the ground on the bank of the creek, situated nearly back of the brick school-house on West Main street. It was deeded by Benjamin Ellicott, August 10, 1820. Not many interments, however, were made there, owing to the liability of the high water from the creek washing out the soil. The only evidence of burials remaining is the graves of the wives of Oliver Wilcox, one of whom died in 1807, the other in 1824, and the graves of Richard Buell, who died in 1819, and W. T. Stark, who died in 1822, and Wheaton Mason, who died in 1825. Many bodies from this ground were transferred to the new cemetery on Harvester avenue, formerly Cemetery street, between the railroads, on lot 43, purchased October 29, 1823, and laid out by Ebenezer Mix into 88 plats. As is often customary with such enterprises a general apathy and indifference was manifested in caring for the plat, and from 1824 to 1840 it was in a very neglected condition. The latter year a fence was built around the grounds, so that the graves and shrubbery were protected from the invasion of animals. From 1840 to 1867 but little attention was given to the grounds, and the appearance was forbidding. In 1867 a subscription was raised and a large fund directed towards repair of fences and improving the walks and drives, and up to 1875 small subscriptions (under the superintendence of the late William S. Mallory) were devoted to the care of the grounds.

In May, 1880, a number of lot-owners organized under the State laws and the "Batavia Cemetery Association" assumed practical shape, and a systematic effort resulted in plans to purchase land, sell lots, levy and collect assessments on lot-owners for the maintenance and care of the grounds, and the community now has a resting-place for their dead that they may well be proud of. The officers of the association are Gad B. Worthington, president; J. F. Lay, vice-president; L. C. McIntyre, treasurer; J. B. Crosby, secretary; and Jacob Miller, sexton.

Elmwood Cemetery is located on Harvester avenue, south of the Batavia Cemetery. It contains about 12 acres of ground. In the spring of 1872 Edward P. Morse opened up the grounds (having become the owner one year previous), and commenced grading and setting out trees and shrubbery. In the spring of 1889 an organization was formed through the efforts of Mr. Morse, and called the Elmwood Cemetery Association of Batavia. William C. Simpson was president; John B. Crosby, secretary; and Joseph C. Barnes, treasurer. In April, 1890, it was decided to incorporate. The present trustees are T. F. Woodward, J. C. Barnes, George

"Joseph Ellicott, son of Joseph and Judith Ellicott, was born November 1, 1760, in Bucks County, Pa. When 14 years of age his father removed to Maryland. He was partly educated in Bucks County, but at his father's death he was obliged to teach school. He began surveying with his brother Andrew in 1785, locating the western boundary of Pennsylvania. In 1797 he was employed by the Holland Land Company, and came to Genesee to attend a treaty of the Indians. He came alone in September, on horseback, via Wilkesbarre, Tioga Point, Bath, and Dansville, returning to Philadelphia in the following February. In May, 1798, he came again, accompanied by his brother Benjamin, and Ebenezer Cary, arriving in Buffalo in June.

"In March, 1799, Joseph and Benjamin Ellicott went to Philadelphia for the purpose of conferring with Paul Busti, the agent of the company, for a continuance of the surveys. Returning in the spring Joseph Ellicott went to Buffalo, remaining there until the completion of the survey in the fall, and then came to Stafford. In January, 1800, he returned to Philadelphia to report on his surveys. November 1, 1800, when 40 years of age, he was appointed general agent of the company, with liberal salary, a grant of 6,000 acres of land, and five per cent. commission on all sales of lands. He left Philadelphia in November, arriving in Buffalo in January, 1801. He moved from there to Ransom's tavern (now Clarence, Erie County), and opened an office for the sale of lands. In letters written from that place he says he called it 'Ransomville,' 'Pine Grove,' 'Sweetwater Farm,' and 'West Genesee.' At the same time Buffalo was known as New Amsterdam, and also as Buffalo Creek. In 1801, fixing his mind to locate a permanent land office at Batavia, suitable buildings were erected for his occupancy, so that he removed there in the spring of 1802.

"In 1803 David E. Evans, his nephew, came from Maryland to act as clerk in the land office. In November, 1804, Mr. Ellicott was appointed an elector of President and Vice-President. His whole time was taken up in attending to the duties of his office, the place being no sinecure as the records show, and up to the War of 1812 no one was more active. At the close of the war his house was the asylum for sick and wounded soldiers, and all army officers received a hearty welcome. In 1818 he completed the main building of his residence, and by his hospitality was enabled to contribute largely to the social features of the place, and to entertain distinguished travelers on their journey to the Falls. He was a strong advocate of the Erie Canal from its first inception in 1808 to its completion in 1825; was one of the canal commissioners in 1816; and foresaw the great wealth it would bring to the Holland Land Company, proving, as it did, of great assistance to the settlers in paying for their lands.

"Mr. Ellicott's connection with the company enabled him to make fortunate investments in lands, and as he was privileged to take his commissions in lands at low valuations, his possessions eventually became valuable. His great wealth, and his desire to advance the interests of his nieces and nephews, caused their removal from time to time from their different homes in Maryland to new and more desirable homes in Western New York.

"About 1815, and up to 1821, complaints were being made from settlers who were unable to pay for their lands, and through them efforts were made to have Mr. Ellicott resign his agency. But he refused, and was continued until his retirement in October, 1821. He was succeeded by Jacob S. Otto, of Philadelphia, the sub-agents in office being retained. After his retirement Mr. Ellicott went to Philadelphia and Baltimore, and endeavored to interest capitalists in the purchase of unsold lands. In this he was unsuccessful, and returned to Batavia in 1822. His health began to fail him soon after, and he made trips into Pennsylvania and Ohio in order to recruit, but without avail. In November, 1825, he went to New York with two of his nephews, Ebenezer Mix and Joseph Nixon. He was under medical treatment in the city until August, 1826, and on the 19th of that month died in his 66th year. His remains were brought from New York and laid to rest in the cemetery in Batavia, where a monument has been erected to his memory by his sister, Rachel Evans.

"Mr. Ellicott was never married. He was a man of great industry, careful and systematic in all business, and required of all under him a faithful discharge of their duties."

"John B. Ellicott, son of Andrew and Sarah (Brown) Ellicott, was born in 1795, and in early life was in the employ of his uncle, Joseph Ellicott, in Batavia, as clerk in the land office. During the War of 1812 he was a volunteer to defend Fort Erie. In 1817 he was in business in Batavia with his cousin, George Brown, under the firm name of Brown & Ellicott. He married Helen Griffith, niece of his sister's husband. She was born in 1799. Soon after their marriage they resided in Medina. During his residence there he aided in erecting a flouring-mill on Oak Orchard Creek, in company with David E. Evans, to whom he sold his interest in 1828. He afterwards resided on an extensive tract of land in Pembroke, deeded to him by his uncle. His handsome residence on the main road, six miles from Batavia, was admired by all travelers. In the spring of 1851 he moved to Batavia, and died there August 27, 1872, aged 77 years. His wife, Helen, died a few years afterwards. They had seven children, among whom was Mary Jane, born February 9, 1823, who married, first, Nathaniel Pitkin. Their son was Harvey Ellicott Pitkin. She afterwards married Nate T. Smith.

James W. Stevens, the first clerk of Genesee County, was a native of New Jersey and a graduate of Princeton College. He became connected with the Holland Land Co. at the earliest period of its land sales, and remained in the office until the affairs of the company were closed up. He served as county clerk from 1804 to 1810. He was a man of fine literary taste, of quiet habits, of strict business integrity, careful and systematic in his work, and lived a blameless life, respected by all his associates.

Ebenezer Cary was employed by Mr. Ellicott, when he was surveying lands in Pennsylvania, as early as 1795, and came with him to the Holland Purchase, acting as surveyor and clerk, or agent, and was generally useful. He was an early merchant at Batavia, and the founder of the establishment so long continued by his brother, Trumbull Cary.

Trumbull Cary, the founder of the Bank of Genesee, was born August 11, 1787, and was a native of Mansfield, Conn. He came to Batavia in 1805, was clerk for five years with James Brisbane and Ebenezer Cary, and in 1810 bought out that firm, and was in the mercantile business for 30 years. For a time he was of the firm of Cary & Grant, and a part of this time was postmaster. He was an adjutant in the War of 1812; was elected to the Assembly and also served as State Senator; and was a firm friend of Gov. Seward. June 2, 1817, he married Margaret Eleanor, sister of James Brisbane, and they had a son, Walter, who became a prominent physician in Buffalo. Mr. Cary was a very successful man in all his undertakings, and aided materially in establishing the village on the career of growth and prosperity it has ever since maintained. He died June 20, 1869, aged 82 years. His grandson, Trumbull (son of Walter), is now the cashier of the bank founded in 1829.

Ebenezer Mix was born at New Haven, Conn., December 31, 1789.
After learning the masons' trade under his brother, Abiather Mix, he came to Batavia, Genesee County, in the spring of 1809, at which place he worked at his trade during the summer, and taught school in the winter. In March, 1810, he entered the office of Daniel B. Brown as law student, still holding himself ready to do any job of plastering needed in the then small town. In the spring of 1811 Joseph Ellicott, then agent of the Holland Land Co., hired Mr. Mix to plaster a room, with an arched ceiling, by the yard; after the job was done Mr. Mix made out his bill, giving the number of yards and price, and sent it in for payment. Mr. Ellicott, upon examining the bill, sent out to know who made the calculation. Upon being informed that the mason himself did it he sent for Mr. Mix and said: "Young man, I did not suppose that there was another man on the Purchase that could make that calculation correct. The Holland Land Company needs your services." And in March, 1811, Ebenezer Mix went into the employ of the Holland Land Company, where he remained for 27 years as contracting clerk, 21 years of which time he filled the office of surrogate of Genesee County, during which time he codified the laws of New York, as to the descent and distribution of estates, by request of the attorney-general. In the War of 1812, in a crisis of danger with the frontier settlers upon the Holland Purchase, he transferred himself from the land office to the camp and post of danger. He was the volunteer aide of Gen. P. B. Porter at the memorable and successful sortie at Fort Erie, September 17, 1814. He was at one time regarded as the best mathematician in this State, and was the publisher of a work entitled Practical Mathematics. He also rendered valuable assistance to Orsamus Turner in the compilation of his book. He was married, March 30, 1815, to Jemima Debow. October 8, 1863, he moved to Cleveland, Ohio, remaining there until his death, January 12, 1869. One of his sons lives in Cleveland, and another, D. E. E. Mix, resides in Batavia, engaged in surveying and engineering.

Aaron Van Cleeve was born in 1768, in New Jersey, and was a coachmaker by trade. He married, in 1791, a daughter of Benjamin Stevens, and a sister to Judge Stevens. He went to Buffalo in 1795, and joined Ellicott later in cutting the west transit line, in 1799. Returning to New Jersey, he resided there 10 years. In 1809 he moved to Batavia, and in September of the same year was appointed sheriff and jailer. In 1810 he was appointed assistant marshal to take the census of all the country west of the Genesee River. He was also a clerk in the land office, and high sheriff in 1811. In 1814 he was appointed by President Madison to take the census of eight westerly counties in New York, and held other important offices.

Orsamus Turner, author of Turner's History of Phelps and Gorham's Purchase and Holland Purchase, was born in Ontario County. His father, Roswell Turner, came from Connecticut and settled near Honeoye Lake. He moved to Sheldon, Wyoming County, being an early settler of that town. Orsamus was an apprentice in the printing office of the Ontario Repository at Canandaigua, and in 1822 became proprietor of a paper in Lockport. He was an editor for 25 years. Chipman P. Turner, a brother of Orsamus, was born in Black Rock, and assisted in the compilation of Turner's Holland Purchase. He is now a resident of the town of Elba.

So closely identified are the village, the town, and the whole of Genesee County with each other that it is impossible to separate it, and a perusal of the early event as given in the town and county chapters will aid the reader in connecting the events of the early period. The sketches following this chapter, of some of the prominent individuals that took part in the early settlement, as well as sketches of the residents of the present day, will also be interesting, and connect on important link between the past and present.

Thomas McCully was born in Philadelphia, and came to Genesee County from Schenectady in 1816. He died in 1865, aged 82 years. He was by profession a mechanic, brick mason, and contractor, and built a good many structures in Batavia, among them being the present Episcopal Church. He was a prominent man in the Methodist Episcopal Church, aiding in founding it, and was a trustee until his death. He married Sarah Hollister, daughter of Silas, and they had six children.

James Cochrane settled in 1802 on lot 24, containing four acres, buying the same for $100. He was a bell founder. His foundry was on Bank street, where Mr. Southworth now lives. He made the bells for all the churches. In 1826 he took into partnership with him a Mr. Fisher. Mr. Cochrane built, in 1824, the house where Miss Sarah Stevens now lives. He died in 1846.

Richard Smith, whom Judge North mentions in the Bench and Bar as surrogate, was also clerk of the board of supervisors for 40 years. He lived in a frame house where Baker & Walkinshaw are located. He was a prominent Mason and master of Olive Branch Lodge. In seeking a continuance of his clerkship of the board of supervisors one year the chairman remarked that 'it was not necessary for him to ask it, as he should go for him for clerk as long as he was supervisor, and Mr. Smith was alive, and after that would go for Jane, his daughter” (the father’s assistant).

Dr. David McCracken, located in 1801, took up lot 25, of 34 acres, paying $170. This lot is bounded by Main, Jackson, and Center streets. Shortly after his purchase he erected a log house, on what is now Williamson’s furniture store, East Main street. He had four brothers, who soon came into the settlement.

Benjamin Blodgett, the early printer and proprietor of the Times, and also of the firm of Handford & Blodgett, located on the corner of Main and State streets. He removed to Richville, and for many years kept a most famous tavern at that place. He died in Illinois in 1857.

David E. Evans, a nephew of Joseph Ellicott, came in 1803, succeeding Mr. Otto in the duties of the land agency in 1826. His early life was spent in clerking for his uncle in the land office, so he was familiar with all the responsibilities of the agency. He was elected to the State Senate in 1818, and was there four years. In 1826 he was a member of Congress, but resigned, when he was appointed to the agency of the Holland Land Company, which position he held until the company’s affairs were wound up, in 1837. Mr. Evans was an open-hearted, generous man, giving liberally to religious purposes, and for the public welfare. He died in 1850.

In 1814 Libbeus Fish bought lot 44, on East Main street. He came from Vermont in 1806, and died in 1859. He was a man of means, liberal in his investments and in his charities. He was a maltster, and proprietor of the first enterprise of the kind in the county. His son, Eli H. Fish, was born here in 1807, and died in 1879, aged 72 years. He was a grocer and maltster for 50 years. He was captain of the 164th Regiment, and was vice-president of the National Bank of Genesee.

The Cotes homestead, on East Main street, is one of the oldest houses in the place. It was the residence of Dr. Ephraim Brown until 1826, and of Dr. Levant B. Cotes for 30 years after. They were partners for a time.

Roswell Graham, an old-timer, came in 1801, and settled in the east part of the Graham place, on the Le Roy road, residing there until his death, at the age of 95 years. A daughter, Mrs. Nacy P. Coddington, resides in Buffalo, and is in her 83d year.
Isaac Joslyn came in 1828. He was a locksmith and blacksmith for 53 years. His brother, Almiran Joslyn, is still living on East Main street, and is over 90 years of age.

Another old settler still living is John Green Russell (over 90 years of age), on Bank street, son of an early tavern-keeper. Still another old settler, formerly of Elba, is Phineas Howe, 95 years of age, living on East Main street.

Benjamin H. Stevens, brother of Judge J. W. Stevens, and a brother-in-law of James Brisbane, came to Batavia in 1822. He was in New Jersey in 1777. He was the superintendent of a hat factory, and died in 1857. His only daughter, Sarah K., was born September 6, 1810, came to Batavia with her parents, and has resided here since. She has lived since 1824 in the old house on East Main street, built by James Cochran in 1822. Her mother taught private school for 27 years. She died in 1880, at the age of 97 years. To Miss Sarah K. Stevens we are indebted for many dates and facts connected with the period in which she was a prominent factor.

The old house, 514 East Main street, was built in 1815 by David Locke.

The Rev. Lucius Smith, rector of the Episcopal Church from 1823 to 1833, was a prominent man and minister for those days. He was very decided as well as liberal in his opinion, and took a more than usually active interest in the perpetuation of the Masonic Lodge, of which he was an energetic working member, and an advocate of its doctrines. During the Morgan episode Mr. Smith's attitude was severely criticised by some of his friends, but he stood up unflinchingly in adherence of the course he marked out. Marcus L. Babcock, his half brother, was said to be one of the earliest born children of the village. His son, Junius A. Smith, was a clerk in the land office, and also a representative of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., which succeeded the Holland Land Co. He died in 1864.

Kimball Ferren, of Le Roy, was superintendent and proprietor of "the old line coaches" running to Buffalo, Lockport, etc. He was also at one time overseer of the poor, and a member of the Masonic order.

Benjamin C. and Ones Page came in 1838 from New Hampshire, and started a bakery where Baker & Walkinshaw now are. They carried on the business for 30 years. Their business was very extensive, at one time having 12 teams on the road. A son of Benjamin C. is E. B. Page, now, and has been since 1864, engaged in the music business.
TOWN OF BATAVIA.

Col. William Seaver, one of the most prominent citizens of Genesee County, was born in Berkshire County, Mass., October 10, 1789, and died at Batavia, August 25, 1871, in the 82d year of his age. In early life he taught school, and subsequently embraced the medical profession. This, however, he abandoned for mercantile ventures, and in 1817 emigrated from Albany to Genesee County. For nearly half a century following his removal he was at the head of a large drug, book, and printing establishment. Col. Seaver grew up with the country. He was essentially a "man of affairs," and possessed to an unlimited degree the confidence of the public. His ideas were broad and liberal, his knowledge of men and things was extensive, and during his day and generation his influence was hardly second to any one in Genesee County. For many years he was editor and proprietor of the Batavia Spirit of the Times, and aside from being a forcible writer brought dignity to the editorial profession. In public life he was a natural leader, and occupied many local positions. In 1822 he took charge of the Batavia postoffice, first as deputy, but soon thereafter as postmaster. His administration of that office covered a period of 29 years, and was deservedly popular. In 1823, upon the incorporation of the village, he was appointed first captain of the first fire company, and subsequently first chief engineer of the department. Later he was president of the village. He was a man of the highest social standing, and for 40 consecutive years, ending only with his death, was senior warden of St. James's Episcopal Church. With the advance of years he withdrew from active business, grew old gracefully, lived beyond the allotted four-score, and at the conclusion of an honorable and useful life in every sense of the word was held in the highest esteem by his fellow townsmen. Col. Seaver had five sons, all of whom were brought up to practical work and became well known business men, viz.: 1: William A. Seaver removed to Buffalo in 1848, and purchasing the Daily Courier, of that city, continued as its editor for the next 10 years. Then disposing of the concern he located himself in New York city. He was a wonderfully versatile writer and prominent in literary circles. For over 20 years he was president of a fire insurance company, and died in New York city, January 7, 1883, aged 68 years. 2: Daniel M. Seaver, for many years U. S. mail agent between Albany and Buffalo, removed to Wisconsin, and was deputy treasurer of that State for some time, but returned to New York and died April 26, 1862, aged 46 years. 3: Lucas Seaver removed to Wisconsin in 1848 and established the Milwaukee Commercial Advertiser (soon changed to Daily News). In 1850 he was elected city treasurer of Milwaukee, and held that office for four years. On accession to office he sold the newspaper, and later on returned to his native State. He died May 6, 1866, aged 47 years. 4: James F. Seaver began a promising career under adventitious auspices, but died very suddenly of a bilious attack at Batavia on February 27, 1853, aged 32 years. 5: David Seaver, the youngest and only survivor of the five brothers, was the business partner of his father, and subsequently for a long time continued the "Seaver establishment" alone. He was a thoroughly active man and progressive citizen. Nearly 20 years ago he sold out and removed to New York city, where he now (1890) resides.

Hon. Heman Judd Redfield's life was a long and useful one, devoted to the maintenance of Democratic principles, upholding the country in the days of its peril, and he was in his early manhood, and up to the last days of his life, a power in the politics of the State and a man whose influence in party affairs was always exerted on the side of integrity and the good of the public service. For half a century and more in Western New York most of his life was spent; he was known and esteemed as one of the most admirable characters in the State, and has gone to rest with a fullness of respect that is accorded to few.

Mr. Redfield was born in Connecticut, December 27, 1788. His father moving to Western New York, he assisted him on his farm until 1808, when he entered the Canandaigua Academy. He remained there two years, and then read law with the Hon. John C. Spencer. At the beginning of the War of 1812 he volunteered as a private soldier and served two campaigns. He was in the battle of Queenstown Heights, and was with General Harrison at Fort George, when he received a brevet from the commanding general for gallant services. He commenced the practice of law at Le Roy in 1815, was appointed a justice of the peace and master in chancery, and soon after district attorney. He was State Senator during 1823, '24, and '25, during which time he was one of the "seventeen" Democratic senators who successfully resisted an attempt to change the law relating to the election of presidential electors. Prominent among his associates at this time were Silas Wright and Charles E. Dudley, both of whom were elected Senators, and Silas Wright, governor. In 1825 Mr. Redfield was appointed one of the New York commissioners to settle a boundary question with New Jersey. He was postmaster at Le Roy for more than 20 years. He soon became distinguished as a lawyer. When arrangements were being made for the trial of those accused of abducting
William Morgan he was offered the position of special counsel to assist the attorney-general. He declined the offer and recommended the Hon. John C. Spencer, who accepted and acted as such on the trials. In 1835 he also declined the office of circuit judge tendered him by Governor Marcy. He was also appointed canal commissioner, which he declined. When the Holland Land Company, in 1836, sold out their remaining lands in the five counties he, together with Jacob Le Roy, purchased the same; subsequently the new purchasers appointed him their agent, acting as such for 13 years, for which purpose he removed from Le Roy to Batavia. President Pierce tendered him the appointment of naval officer in New York, which he accepted, but was very soon transferred to the office of collector of the port of New York, which he held until June 30, 1857, when he resigned, although President Buchanan offered to continue him. It was highly creditable to him that, when he rendered his accounts as collector of the port of New York, involving the large sum of $143,493.95, they were promptly settled exactly as he rendered them. Soon after he returned to his home at Batavia, and settled upon his farm as a cultivator of the soil, which was ever a favorite employment with him.

In all the perils to which our country has been exposed he has ever been on the side of his government. He sustained Mr. Polk through the Mexican war, and exerted himself on the side of the government during the late war. He was a member of the Peace Congress at Albany, which sent delegates to the one at Washington. He presided at meetings, lent his influence to secure the quotas of men called for at different times during the war, contributed largely in raising funds to aid in that purpose, and lent his best energies to sustain our side of the conflict, never doubting the final result. In his intercourse with men he was frank and manly, never misleading; his interests harmonized with those of his neighbors. Although he practiced economy he was not greedy for wealth, either on his own account or for the distinction it often confers; hence the poor were never turned away starving nor the orphans unprotected. He was opposed to all class legislation, and to using the government, State or National, as a means of making one class rich and keeping another poor. It was one of his theories that the less mankind were governed the better for them. He believed the true object of government was to protect men in their person, character, and property, and then leave them to work out their own happiness in their own way.

On Sunday evening, July 22, 1877, he sat with the members of his family on the veranda of his house, enjoying the cool breezes after the heat of the day, appearing in excellent health and spirits. About eight o'clock he complained of a dizziness in his head, entered the house, gradually grew worse, and became unconscious, and about a quarter to 10 o'clock he peacefully, painlessly, breathed his last. Thus closed the earthly career of a good, kind-hearted, and benevolent man, and a true and devout Christian. During his long life he was an active and devout member of St. James's Episcopal Church at Batavia, serving as vestryman and warden. Many citizens attested their respect and esteem for their old neighbor and friend by their attendance at the funeral service Wednesday evening. The procession was one of the longest ever seen in the village.
Immediately following the hearse came the venerable roadster, so long the favorite riding horse of Mr. Redfield, saddled and bridled, and led by the groom.

Mr. Redfield was married twice. His first wife was Abby Noyes Gould, whom he married at Canandaigua, Ontario County, January 27, 1817.
She died at Batavia on the 11th of February, 1841, in the 44th year of her age. The following children only survive them both: Elizabeth Gould, wife of Robert W. Lowber, of Bald Mountain, Washington County; Mary Judd, wife of Major Henry I. Glowacki, residing at Batavia; Jane, wife of Lawrence Turnure, of New York city; Cornelia, the widow of Rear-Admiral Ralph Chandler, U. S. N., lately in command of the Asiatic station, at present residing at Yokohama, Japan; and Anna M., the widow of George Evans, of Albany, N. Y. In 1846 he married for his second wife Constance C. Bolles, of Newark, N. Y., of English and French ancestry, who survives him, and by whom he had four children, as follows:
Frank B. Redfield, Abby L. Sunderland, Una Clark (Mrs. Daniel W.
Tomlinson), all of whom reside at Batavia, and Martha Evans, wife of Lieut. Samuel Rodman, U. S. A., now stationed at Newport, R. I.

Frank B. Redfield, born at Batavia, in 1847, received an academic education, and has followed farming and stock raising. He is now serving his fourth year on the executive committee of the State Agricultural Society. He was president of the Genesee County Agricultural Society, and married, in 1874, Miss Caroline E. Dolbeer, whose people are of New York ancestry. Mr. Redfield lives in the house built by Jacob Otto in 1824.

Peleg Redfield, father of Heman J., was born May 14, 1762, at Killingworth, Conn. He entered the service of the Connecticut troops for the Revolutionary cause in 1778, serving two campaigns, then enlisted in the Continental army for three years, and served his full time. He endured his full share of the privations and sufferings of those who continued steadfast in the Revolutionary cause during its most trying period. The retreat of Washington and his army from Long Island, and from Yorktown to Valley Forge, and the severe winter of 1780, were often with him a subject of remark. He was present on the memorable occasion of the execution of Major Andre, and always spoke of his fate with sympathy and regret. He was a true Whig of those days, and a true Republican and Democrat in after life. He worshiped his chief, General Washington. After the Revolutionary service, and his discharge from the army, he remained at Suffield, Conn., and soon after married Polly Judd, daughter of Heman Judd, of Farmington, Conn. He exchanged his small property in Suffield for 200 acres of wild land with Phelps & Gorham, in the then far off "Genesee County," and as early as the winter of 1799-1800 he emigrated to his wild home, now the beautiful and fertile region which surrounds Clifton Springs. With a stout heart, and the help of the willing hands of an excellent pioneer wife and mother, he was fairly under way as one of the founders of a settlement and of a numerous family. He died May 26, 1852, in his 91st year. His wife died in 1844, aged 80 years. Both were buried at Manchester, N. Y.

Daniel W. Tomlinson, who died October 5, 1870, aged 57 years, was a native of Middlebury, Vt., where he obtained his education. At the early age of 18 he went to Mobile, Ala., as clerk in a large mercantile house engaged in the cotton trade, where he soon became a partner, acquiring a comfortable fortune. He came to Alexander in 1845, purchased the large farm of Peter A. Remsen, and took up his residence there. He became a stockholder in the Exchange Bank of Genesee, was made vice-president, and finally took entire charge of the management. Soon after he bought up the whole stock, and removed the bank to Batavia, intending to locate it in a building he had prepared for it adjoining the American Hotel; but that being destroyed by fire (1850) he moved into a building adjoining the old Eagle Hotel. He soon after moved into the quarters occupied by the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank, now the Bank of Batavia. Mr. Tomlinson was very active in all that tended to develop his town. He was at one time president of the village, and was instrumental in introducing the present water works, he having secured the ground (from McDonald) where the present pump-house is located. He was one of the organizers of the Batavia Gas Co.

Lucian R. Bailey died in 1886, aged 53 years. He enlisted as a private in 1861 in the 28th Regiment, became lieutenant, and was in many battles. After leaving the army he was in Buffalo in the grain business. He started a clothing store in Batavia with N. Cross, then with D. Jones, then with J. C. Barnes, was then alone, and finally with Gould & Town. He was assessor, president of the village, two terms in the legislature, a prominent Mason, and was treasurer of Western Star Chapter.

Daniel Upton, father of Gen. Emory Upton, came to Batavia in 1817, and bought the farm in the western part of the town where his daughter, Sara W. Edwards, now lives, which farm has always been in the possession of the Upton family. He was the father of 13 children, of whom Emory was the most celebrated. The latter was born August 27, 1839, graduated at West Point, May 6, 1861, and immediately entered into active service under the government, taking a prominent part in the war of the Rebellion. Perhaps no former resident of Batavia has a name that became so widely known during his short career, for he died in the prime of life, being only 41 years of age. His death took place at Presidio, San Francisco County, Cal., March 14, 1881. In 1868 he married Emily Norwood Martin, of Auburn, N. Y., but left no children. His memory is fresh in the minds of all residents, as well as the whole Nation.

The names of a few of the old merchants who are living may not be out of place. Joseph C. Wilson came about 1830, and was in the grocery business for 50 years. H. L. Onderdonk came to Batavia in 1839 and engaged in harnessmaking. He is still at the same trade, and probably no other man living in the village can make out 51 years of continuous trade in one line of business. Gad B. Worthington began business for himself about 1845. M. H. Bierce, the dry goods merchant, has been in business since about 1850. Homer Bostwick, the real estate and insurance agent, came about 1851, and has been engaged in business ever since.

General training.—"One of the ever-to-be-remembered institutions in the earlier history of this section was the militia. There are few incidents of any nature that are recounted with more pleasure by the old men, or listened to more attentively by the rising generation, than those of the memorable drills and musters. The militia consisted of all the able-bodied white male citizens between the ages of 18 and 45 years. State officers, clergymen, school teachers, students, and some others were exempt. The major-general, brigade inspector, and chief of the staff department, except the adjutant and commissary generals, were appointed by the State. Colonels were chosen by the captains and subalterns of their regiments, and these latter by the written ballots of their respective regiments and separate battalions. It was the duty of the commanding officer of each company to enroll all military subjects within the limits of his jurisdiction, and they must equip themselves within six months after being notified.

"On the first Monday in September of each year every company of militia was obliged to assemble within its geographical limits for training. One day in each year, between September 1st and October 15th, at a place designated by the brigade officer, the regiment was directed to assemble for a general training. All the officers of each regiment or battalion were required to rendezvous two days in succession, in June, July, or August, for drill under the brigade inspector. Each militiaman was personally notified of an approaching muster by a non-commissioned officer bearing a warrant from the commandant of his company. A failure to appear resulted in a court-martial and a fine, and possibly imprisonment.

"‘General training’ was usually regarded as a pleasant occasion to meet friends, and the boys, provided with a few pennies to buy the inevitable gingerbread, were happier than the lads of to-day with their shillings that are invested in peanuts and a great variety of confections.
The place of meeting and the extent of the parade ground were design-nated by the commanding officer. The sale of intoxicating liquors on the ground could only be carried on by permission of the same officer.
Total abstinence was not the rule, however, and an officer who had the right to seize the prohibited article did not always practice self-denial, for often some of it would find its way down his own throat."

Of “general trainings” a veteran of those days writes as follows:

"Although the companies exhibited the élite of our regimental splendors, glittering with tinsel and flaunting with feathers, a more unsoldierly parade could scarcely be imagined. There were the elect from the far-off farms, who sometimes marched to the rendezvous barefoot, carrying their boots and soldier clothes in a bundle—the ambitious cobblers, tailors, and plowboys from cross-road hamlets and remote rural districts, short, tall, fat, skinny, bow-legged, sheep-shanked, cock-eyed, hump-shouldered, and sway-backed—equipped by art as economically, awkward, and variously as they were endowed by nature; uniformed in contempt of all uniformity; armed with old flintlock muskets, horsemen’s carbines, long-squirrel rifles, double-barrelled shot-guns, bell-muzzled blunderbusses, with side arms of as many different patterns, from the old dragoon sabre that had belonged to Harry Lee’s Legion to the slim basket-hilted rapier which had probably graced the thigh of some of our French allies in the Revolution.

"The officers of the volunteer companies were generally selected for their handsome appearance and martial bearing, and shone with a certain elegance of equipment each in the uniform pertaining to his company. There was also a sprinkling of ex-veterans of the War of 1812, recognizable by a certain martinet precision in their deportment, and a shadow of contempt for their crude comrades, but quick to resent any extraneous comment derogatory to the service. A city dandy who undertook to ridicule the old-fashioned way in which some officers carried their swords was silenced by the snappish reply: 'Young man, I've seen the best troops of Great Britian beaten by men who carried their swords that way.' This harlequinade of equipment, costume, and character was duly paraded twice a day, marched through the streets, and put through its manœuvres on the parade ground adjoining the village, much to the satisfaction of all emancipated school boys, ragamuffins, idlers, tavern-keepers, and cake and beer venders, and somewhat, perhaps, to the weariness of industrious mechanics, who had apprentices to manage, and busy housewives, who depended on small boys for help.

The militia history of Genesee County, like other sections, dates back to an early day. Turner says "there was a general training at Alexander as early as 1808," but the necessity for its observance grew out of the War of 1812; in fact as early as 1810 or '11, when rumors of war began to agitate the country, the State authorities contracted with Ellicott to build an arsenal. He erected one, of logs, at the forks of the road opposite F. B. Redfield's, 20 feet square. At the close of the war this was taken down and a stone building put up for the 15th Regt. U. S. A. This was on the north side of the road, but has within a few years been demolished. John Baptiste Morris, an old trapper, resided in the old arsenal for a time.

The "general training" was kept up regularly until about the year 1845. By that time it had become too much of a sham and burlesque, and the authorities gradually ceased their efforts in maintaining the discipline provided by the laws for the perpetuation of the old militia system.

The Holland Purchase Insurance Co. was incorporated April 16, 1867, with 26 persons taking shares. Thirteen directors were chosen, of whom Hiram Chaddock, George Bowen, and H. T. Cross are the only ones living. H. J. Redfield was president; H. M. Warren, secretary; Hiram Chaddock, general agent and adjuster; and Tracy Pardee, treasurer. This company closed up business a few years ago. Hiram Chaddock was appointed receiver, and closed up the affairs of the company with great credit to himself and all interested. Besides paying all policies and expenses (the latter amounting to over $8,000) he paid the stockholders $1.20 per share.

The Exchange Bank of Genesee was organized in Alexander in 1838. Among the stockholders were Samuel Benedict, Jr., Earl Kidder, Henry Martin, V. R. Hawkins, H. Hawkins, Jesse Hawkins, Stephen King, Josiah Newton, and Charles Kendall, of Bethany. The capital stock was $100,000. Heman Blodgett, E. S. Warner, H. T. Cross, J. E.
Pierpont, and others acted as cashiers at various times. D. W. Tomlinson, soon after his coming to Alexander, bought up all the stock and removed the bank to Batavia, and it was closed up about 1858.

_Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank_, of Batavia, was organized November 1, 1838, with a capital of $100,000. Among the subscribers to the stock were P. P. Kissam, T. Tredwell, John Norton, Jr., D. E. Evans, W. R. Gwinn, H. Holden, John Lowber, and John S. Ganson. The bank conducted business until about 1851, when its affairs were wound up.

_Newspapers._—Genesee County has had publications of various character, of which the following are worthy of mention. The names of the live papers are printed in SMALL CAPITALS.

The first paper issued here, and the first one west of the Genesee River, was the _Genesee Intelligencer_, in the spring of 1807, by Elias Williams, who purchased an old Ramage printing press from Manlius, N. Y., that had been put aside as useless. He also bought a box of old type in "pi." After much labor he got out his paper, a half sheet, medium size, with a subscription list of 100. It contained two or three columns of advertisements from the Holland Land Company, an account of an elopement, and a runaway apprentice boy, for whose apprehension a bag of bran was offered as a reward. In July, 1807, Benjamin Blodgett with his all ($48.75) joined Williams, and published 13 numbers, when Williams went to a general training in Alexander and never was heard of more. Blodgett abandoned the enterprise then, but in the spring of 1808 he enlisted Samuel Peck with him, then publishing the _Cornucopia_, an enlarged sheet with new type and a list of 300 subscribers. Peck died in 1811, and the publication ceased. In 1811 Benjamin Blodgett and Col. David C. Miller began the publication of the _Republican Advocate_, Miller continuing the same until 1828 (soon after the Morgan affair), when he dropped out and into politics, and soon moved away. He was succeeded by Charles Sentell and other publishers from time to time, among whom were Charles W. Miller, Edwin Hough, Andrew W. Young (later of the _Warsaw Sentinel_), assisted by Dr. Z. Metcalf in 1832, Lewis & Brown, C. C. Allen, Waite & Cooley, and D. D. Waite, who had charge of the paper more or less for 40 years, and who was first associated with Andrew W. Young in Warsaw. He was a hard worker, and under his management the _Advocate_ was for a long time the leading influential Whig and Republican journal of Western New York. He was firm in his political opinions and an honest man. He died in 1878, aged 67 years. About 1854-55 Kimberly & Goodrich, aided by John R. Cooper, a practical printer, who afterwards went to the war, controlled the paper, adding to it the name Genesee County Whig; but in 1857 Mr. Waite, on resuming the charge, placed the original name at the head, aided financially by Hon. Benjamin Pringle. In May, 1859, Mr. Waite started the Daily Advocate, continuing the same until 1867. Upon the death of Mr. Waite Messrs. Fairman (from Elmira) and Whittle purchased the paper, but they only issued it a few months, when it was discontinued, the publishers making arrangements by which the subscription list of the Advocate was merged in that of the Batavian. Messrs. Fairman and Whittle removed to Tioga, Pa., and established an Advocate there.

In 1852 (?) or prior a split occurred in the dominant political party in Genesee County, and two factions, known as the "Silver Grays" and "Wooly Heads," came to the surface. The Republican Advocate was then allied to the "Silver Gray," or conservative wing, and their opponents had no local organ. The late Trumbull Cary, of Batavia, long a personal friend of Hon. William H. Seward, then furnished the means to establish a paper named the Genesee County Whig, and intended it to further the interests of what soon became the Republican party. This paper appeared in 1852, with Kimberly & Tyrrell as editors, and its columns were constantly filled with the well written and spicy editorials of John H. Kimberly and William Tyrrell. It was a pronounced political success, and in two years (1854) the proprietors, having purchased the Advocate, consolidated the two papers.

The Progressive Batavian is a weekly newspaper published at Batavia by R. S. Lewis, its editor and proprietor. It was established by him in 1868, and succeeded the Genesee Democrat, which he acquired by purchase. It is Republican in politics, and has been, almost since its establishment, the leading paper of that party in the county. It has a circulation of over 2,000. It is a firm friend and advocate of temperance and good morals, and is, as its motto expresses it, "Firm in the Right, as God gives us to see the Right." Local news is one of its strong features. In each town in the county it has bright, active correspondents, who furnish it, weekly, with the local happenings in their respective towns and localities, and thus the Batavian is enabled each week to furnish its readers with a very complete report of the local news of the whole county. It is an influential and prosperous newspaper.

The People's Press was published in 1825 by Benjamin Blodgett, who carried it on, with the assistance of several gentlemen, for about one year, when it passed into the hands of Martin, Adams & Thorp, and was merged into the Spirit of the Times. The Morgan episode, occurring in the fall of 1826, was the occasion of numerous publications being started for and against Masonry. The Advocate, published by Miller, not being able to hold all the invectives directed against the Masons, he supplemented it by the issue of the Morgan Investigator, which was published from his office until 1827. During this excitement, and for about one year, the Masonic Intelligencer was issued from the office of the People's Press, and it is to be inferred that the whole subject was pretty thoroughly ventilated. In September, 1830, the People's Press was united with the Spirit of the Times.

In 1837 Peter Lawrence, a jolly, witty, smart, and shiftless Irish printer, went to Alexander and stared the Farmers' and Mechanics' Journal. That village was then very small, and though Lawrence was bubbling over with Hibernian humor, he could not make the thing pay. In 1840 Frederick Follett purchased an interest in the concern, and it was then removed to Batavia and called the Batavia Times and Farmers' and Mechanics' Journal. Its removal, however, brought no profit to the owners, and Peter Lawrence, who soon left, established a paper at Perry, N. Y. Mr. Follett continued until August 6, 1843, when he sold the establishment to William Seaver and his son Lucas, who merged it into the Spirit of the Times.

In 1842, when a phenomenal temperance furor prevailed, the Temperance Herald, a small monthly quarto newspaper, was published by Lucas Seaver from the Spirit of the Times office. Branon Young, a lawyer, of Batavia, was its editor, and, although the subscription price was only 50 cents a year, it had a wonderfully large circulation for two years, and was then discontinued.

The first number of the Spirit of the Times was issued at Batavia, February 3, 1819, by Oran Follett, a young printer from Canandaigua. He was assisted by Daniel P. Adams, also a young printer, and Frederick Follett, apprentice. Oran Follett continued as proprietor until January, 1825, when he sold out to his brother and went to Buffalo. Adams also went away, but returned a year later. In 1826 Frederick Follett added the name Batavia Advertiser, but soon dropped it. In 1830 the People's Press was united with it, both names being used, and published by Follett & Adams. Follett run the paper for five years, when it was sold to a "Democratic" syndicate, D. E. Evans, William Seaver, H. J. Redfield, Stephen Grant, D. H. Chandler, E. Mix, S. Cummings, J. B.
Skinner, W. B. Collar, and R. H. Smith, William Seaver being sole editor, and N. D. Wood the publisher. In 1837 Mr. Follett returned and issued the paper for three years, when Col. William Seaver bought out the interests of all the proprietors for his son Lucas, a practical printer. He issued the paper for five years, when Col. Seaver and his other sons continued the paper until September, 1853, when it was sold to C. S. Hurley, who tried to publish it (but unsuccessfully) as a "Know-Nothing" paper. It was sold (in 1856) under the hammer, and most all the material shipped to Central America. Andrew J. McWain, an apprentice with Col. Seaver, in 1856 purchased the Genesee Herald (then printed at Le Roy), moved all the material to Batavia, and in January, 1857, continued its publication under the title of Genesee County Herald and Spirit of the Times. The late Dr. Chauncy D. Griswold was its editor, and a Daily Herald was published in 1858, '59, and '60, and then dropped. Mr. McWain died June 29, 1860, aged 25 years, and for a few months his administrators carried on the paper, when, in 1860, Henry Todd bought out the establishment and dropped the Herald designation, retaining the familiar name of the Spirit of the Times, and once more made it the Democratic organ of Genesee County.

Henry Todd, a practical printer, came from England in 1852, and was for several months employed as a compositor on the Buffalo Courier, then owned by William G. Seaver. In 1852, with the assistance of Messrs. Redfield and Richmond, he went to Le Roy and began the publication of the Le Roy Democrat. In 1853 he removed the establishment to Batavia, and called his paper the Batavia Democrat, continuing the publication as such for two or three years, when H. Wilber and his brother-in-law became proprietors, and changed the name to Genesee Democrat, but it soon was a non-paying investment, so that the press and type were sold to R. S. Lewis, who began the issue of the Progressive Batavian. Henry Todd published the Spirit of the Times from 1860 until January 1, 1886, when his son, Charles E. Todd, and A. H. Thomas leased the plant, continuing the arrangement for one year, when Mr. Thomas became owner and conducted the office alone until April 15, 1889, when the present proprietors, Messrs. Thomas & Hall, took up the work so long pursued by Mr. Todd. They are giving the citizens of the county an ably edited, newsy, Democratic journal.

A. H. Thomas was born in Tarrytown, N. Y., November 8, 1855. He learned the trade of printer in the office of the Phelps's Citizen, and for a time was with the Newark Courier, after which he published the Clifton Springs News, at Clifton Springs, N. Y. For two years he was engaged in business at Cincinnati, Ohio, when he came to Batavia, and was local editor of the Progressive Batavian for three years when he became connected with the Spirit of the Times.

Joseph F. Hall was born in Rochester, N. Y., September 26, 1865. After completing his education he became connected with the Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co., of Rochester, N. Y., and Oshawa, Ont. He came to Batavia in 1885, and was in the employ of the Johnston Harvester Co. for two years. Since attaining his majority Mr. Hall has taken an interest in politics, and now occupies a position of considerable prominence in the Genesee County Democracy. Mr. Hall was married to Miss Frances Holden Seaver, daughter of David Seaver, in September, 1889.

The Batavia Daily News was established June 25, 1878, by M. D. & S. P. Mix. W. H. Bradish was the editor, remaining about three months, when G. S. Griswold succeeded him. It was a small four-column sheet, but being sold for one cent a copy it soon reached a circulation of 1,000 copies a day. The paper was enlarged in 1879 and the price raised to two cents per copy. G. S. Griswold, who had before retired from the paper, formed a copartnership with A. J. McWain, and together they bought out the business, which had never reached a solid foundation, the circulation having dwindled down to 500 copies. Under the new management of Griswold & McWain they have continued to publish the News, enlarging and improving it as their means would allow, and the business has increased until at the present day it is one of the most successful village dailies in the State, printing the United Press dispatches, having a circulation averaging 3,000 copies daily, and enjoying a large advertising patronage as well as doing a job printing business. The editor is A. J. McWain; the business manager is G. S. Griswold; the parents of both were engaged in newspaper work many years ago in Batavia.

For a short time from October, 1888, the Morning Advertiser was issued by George B. Herrick, an active, go-ahead man. There were 33 numbers published. In February, 1890, L. C. Parmer and M. A. Weed started the Sun, a weekly issued every Saturday.

Union School District, No. 2.—In 1811 a deed was executed conveying to Simeon Cummings and Libbeus Fish the premises which afterwards came to be known as the "old brick school-house," standing upon the northwest corner of what is now Main and Ross streets. This building was torn down in 1873, upon the widening of Ross street, after the erection of the present High School building. The earliest official school record of the district extant is dated November 25, 1813, and is as follows:

TOWN OF BATAVIA.

"School District No. 2 includes all that part of the village of Batavia East of an alley on the East side of Lot No. 16, and a line running South from the South end of Said alley to the Southern boundary of said village; the North half of Lots No. 7, 9, and 11. Section 8, North third of Lot No. 1, Section 12; Lots No. 8, 10, and 12, Section 8; Lots No. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12, Section 9; Lots No. 2, 4, and 6, Section 13, T. 12, R. 1.

"To Simeon Cummings, Esquire: You are hereby required and directed to warn all the freeholders or taxable inhabitants of District No. 2, a description whereof is above given, to meet at the Brick School-House in said District, on Wednesday the first day of December next, at One O'clock, P. M., by virtue of an act entitled: An act for the establishment of Common Schools.

"JOHN Z. ROSS,
"EBEN' R MIX,
"ISAIAH BABCOCK.

Com. of Schools for Town of Batavia.

"Batavia, November 25, 1813."

Following this is a list of 43 freeholders, or taxable inhabitants, warned in accordance with the above notice. At this meeting, held on the first day of December, 1813, Simeon Cummings, Libbeus Fish, and Daniel B. Brown were chosen trustees of the district; Richard Smith, clerk; and James Cochrane, collector. This marks the formation and the election of the first officers of school district No. 2.

By a report of the trustees to the school commissioners of the town dated March 26, 1822, it appears that 155 children had been taught in the school during the school year closing at that date; and that the number of children between the ages of five and 15 years residing in the district on the first day of January preceding was 121. At the annual school meeting held October 12, 1829, school district No. 2 was divided. All that portion of the district west of Center and Bank streets was set off and designated as district No. 12; the portion of the district east of said streets retained the original title of school district No. 2. The school records of the preceding and the following years are very meagre and unsatisfactory, as they contain little else than the recital of the election of certain persons as officers of the district, and the levying of certain small taxes, usually less than $50 annually. In the autumn of 1846 districts No. 2 and 12 were reunited under the title of "Consolidated School District No. 2."

At a meeting of the inhabitants of the new consolidated district, held December 28, 1846, a committee was appointed to ascertain where a suitable site could be obtained for the erection of a new school building. This committee reported at an adjourned meeting, held January 19, 1847, in favor of the lot now occupied by the Baker Gun Company. The recommendation of the committee was adopted at the meeting by a vote of 36 yeas to 12 noes. April 6, 1847, the trustees were authorized to borrow $5,500 for the purpose of purchasing the site and building a school-house. With the money thus voted the two-story brick building on Liberty street (now occupied by the Gun Company) was erected, and made ready for occupancy in the fall of 1848. In November, 1853, at a special meeting, it was decided by a vote of 102 to 34 to establish a Union Free School. At the same meeting, and by reason of the decision to establish a Union Free School, a board of education consisting of six members was elected. This board at its first meeting elected L. W. Hart principal of the Union School just established. The board, also at this meeting, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we do not deem it expedient, at present, to establish an Academic Department."

In April, 1854, G. W. Starkweather was employed as principal, the records leaving us in mystery as to the fate of his predecessor (L. W. Hart), employed the November previous. At the annual meeting, September 29, 1857, the following action was taken:

"Resolved, That the trustees, if they deem it proper, establish an Academic Department in the school."

No action on the part of the trustees, so far as the records show, resulted from this resolution. In January, 1861, the board of education made application to the Regents of the University of the State of New York for the establishment of an academic department in connection with the Union School. This request was granted, and in October of the same year the first "Report to the Regents" from school district No. 2 was adopted by the board of education and forwarded to them at Albany.

In the year 1871 it was found necessary to provide additional room for pupils, as the school building on Liberty street could not accommodate those seeking admission. A dilapidated tenement house in the vicinity was rented and fitted up with school furniture. It was soon crowded with from 60 to 70 pupils. As the number of those attending school continued to increase the subject of additional room forced itself upon the attention both of the board of education and the patrons of the school. In April, 1872, at an adjourned school meeting held in Ellicott Hall, the site of the present school building on Ross street was adopted, and $50,000 appropriated for the purpose of erecting a school building thereon. The State superintendent of public instruction, upon appeal, set aside the action of this meeting.

Pending the appeal to the State superintendent of schools the trustees purchased the present site for the school, there being no stay of proceedings, and the vote of the district meeting in April, 1872, having authorized it. On the first day of August following this decision the district, by a decisive vote, authorized the raising of $40,000, together with whatever money should accrue from the sale of the old school building and lot, for the payment of the new site and the erection of a new school building thereon. At the annual meeting in October, 1873, $25,000 additional was voted for the completion of the building.

On the first day of September, 1874, dedicatory exercises were held in the completed building, which was pronounced at that time by competent judges one of the finest and best equipped school buildings in the State. In October, 1874, the district voted the further sum of $5,000 for the furnishing of the building, grading of the grounds, etc. Although two rooms (one each upon the first and second floors) were not required for school purposes when the new building was first occupied, and the remark was by no means uncommon that provision for the wants of the district had been made for 50 years to come, yet within five years the building was crowded to its utmost capacity.

October 10, 1882, the annual school meeting voted $10,000 for the erection of a school building for the accommodation of the younger children living south of the railroads. With this appropriation a site was purchased and the Pringle Avenue school building erected. School was opened in two rooms of this building in September, 1884, but in November following it was found necessary to open the two additional rooms to meet the wants of the school. A special meeting of the district was called by the board of education July 21, 1884, to take into consideration the subject of providing still further accommodations for the children seeking admission to the schools. At this meeting the site of the Washington Avenue School was selected, and $8,000 voted for its purchase and the erection of a school building. The house was completed and occupied for school purposes in September, 1885. School district No. 4 (now West Main Street School) was united with Union School District No. 2 in June, 1883, and the district formerly known as district No. 15 (now Pearl Street School) in January, 1887. The area of the Union School District No. 2, as now constituted, is some 15 square miles. The number of children of school age (over five and under 21), according to the census of June, 1889, is 2,116.

Principals of the Batavia Union School from its formation in 1853 to 1889 are: G. W. Starkweather, 1853-54; George Babcock, 1855-59; George H. Stowilts, 1859-60; N. F. Wright, 1860-67; Gardner Fuller, 1867-89.

An event, perhaps the most worthy of commemoration of any in the history of the district, occurred March 12, 1889. Mrs. Mary E. Richmond had erected a beautiful library building and reading room as a memorial of her son, Dean Richmond, Jr. This she deeded, on that day, to the trustees of the Batavia Union School District No. 2, and their successors, for the accommodation of the school library, and to provide a free reading room for all the inhabitants of the district. This most munificent gift will doubtless prove through all the future an ever widening influence for good. At the same time the trustees of the Batavia Library Association conveyed to the trustees of the Union School District their library of upwards of 3,000 volumes and nearly $4,000 in invested funds; the library to be consolidated with the Union School Library, and the income of the invested funds to be used for the support of a free reading room in connection with the Richmond Memorial Library.

Professor Gardner Fuller, who is at present the superintendent of schools of Batavia, was born in Fullerville, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., and prepared for college at Falley Seminary, Fulton, and Cazenovia Seminary, Cazenovia, N. Y. He was graduated from Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., in 1858. After leaving college he taught for a time at Great Barrington, Mass., and also at Newtown and Bridgeport, Conn., and was principal of Macedon Academy, at Macedon, N. Y., from 1865 to 1867. In 1867 he was employed as principal of the Union Free School at Batavia, to succeed Prof. N. F. Wright. Professor Fuller took charge of the school, teaching as principal in the academic department, which had been established 10 years before. Soon after entering upon his duties he reorganized every department; classes were more thoroughly drilled; more attention was paid to the classics and higher branches of mathematics; and a greater thoroughness in all the branches was insisted upon. The course pursued by Professor Fuller drew in many pupils from surrounding districts, and people began to move into the village to educate their children. In 1871 it was found that additional room was required for the pupils, and school meetings were held in 1872, which resulted in the erection and completion of the large and elegant school building on Ross street. Upon moving into the new building the school was regraded under his supervision. The number of pupils has been on the increase ever since, and several private schools have been abandoned for the reason that they could not compete with the public school. Large additions to the population of the village have been made, and the prices of real estate have been kept up by the fact that it was everywhere well known that the village had an excellent Union Free School. By his thorough drill and management a great impetus has been given to the study of the classics and higher branches of an English education. A large number of students have been prepared for college, and wherever they have applied for admission they have been readily received, and in every instance have been found fully qualified for the classes they have entered. Others have prepared for the learned professions and are successful. These things operate as a great stimulus to those in the lower classes, who are stretching forward with eagerness to reach the academic department and complete the full course adopted in the school.

It is now over 22 years since Professor Fuller took charge of the school, and notwithstanding its multitude of pupils it was never more efficient or prosperous than at the present time. As a teacher and organizer of schools he has proved a very decided success. This of course requires great ability, a large amount of intelligence, and unflagging energy and perseverance, all of which qualities he fully possesses. He is not only an excellent classical scholar and well versed in mathematics, but is well read and keeps up his acquaintance with the literature of the day, as may be seen by the well selected library connected with the school, a large portion of its volumes having been selected at his suggestion.

The school is an institution the citizens of Batavia may well be proud of, and by their continuance of Professor Fuller in charge of it for nearly a quarter of a century they have shown their appreciation of his work. When he came here only four teachers were required to conduct the school. Now it requires upwards of 20. There were then four school-rooms occupied. Now 17 are in use besides the recitation rooms, and more school rooms are needed, and yet the utmost harmony pervades every department. The success of the school is due to an intelligent, liberal minded public, to its efficient board of education, to its energetic, self-sacrificing corps of teachers, and, most of all, to its able and energetic principal and superintendent, Gardner Fuller.

Dean Richmond, who for a long series of years was recognized as a vital force in the financial, political, and railroad world of New York State, won his way to the front rank of his generation by sheer energy, hard work, and a genius for overcoming obstacles and making circumstances the servants of his will. He possessed also the keen vision that enabled him to read the signs of the times, and shape his course in accordance therewith. He was truly the architect of his own fortune, inheriting nothing from the generations before him but an honored family name and the high qualities of character for which the Richmons of New England were noted. He was a native of Vermont, and was born March 31, 1804, in the town of Barnard. His parents were Hatheway and Rachel Dean Richmond, who early immigrated to that portion of New York State now embraced in the corporate limits of Syracuse, where his father was engaged in the early salt industry of that region. His father, being unfortunate in business, removed to Mobile, where he died, leaving a widow, two daughters, and a son, the latter only 14 years of age, dependent upon their own exertions. It was at this early age that young Richmond showed the material of which he was made, resolutely taking up the business abandoned by his father, and with little else save the debts of the old concern, and a capital composed of health and energy, began his active life. A year later the death of his mother left him an orphan.

The market for salt had heretofore been limited, but the energy with which the young man pushed the sale soon extended it to new districts, and ere long the business began to yield a satisfactory income. He soon after began to interest himself in various other enterprises, in which he also commanded success. In 1842 he removed to Buffalo, where he engaged in the commission and transporting business, dealing principally with the products of the great West. Bringing to his business operations the wise foresight and judgment which ever characterized him, he became, in the course of a few years, one of the wealthiest and most influential men of the lake region.

In the midst of this active career he formed his first connection with railroad affairs, becoming a director of the Utica and Buffalo Railroad Company. When the direct line to Batavia was completed he became a resident of that village, which continued to be his home for the remainder of his life, although his business headquarters were still retained at Buffalo. His connection with the New York Central Company was one of the great events of his railroad career. When competition of rival roads forced the consolidation of the seven distinct companies into the New York Central, in 1853, Mr. Richmond was foremost in the determined struggle, and his sagacity, address, and perseverance alone carried the measure in the State legislature. He was the first vice-president of the company, which position he held until he was elected president on the retirement of Mr. Corning in 1864. He also served as president of the L. S. & M. S. Railroad for a number of years. While connected with the Central the company relied most implicitly upon his judgment, and never undertook any enterprise of importance without first submitting it to him for advice and approbation. He was the first American railroad man to advocate the laying of steel rails, and after trial, his judgment proving correct, a large order was sent to England, but they did not reach this country until after his death.

It is needless to mention in particular all of the various business enterprises with which he was connected through a long an active career; he was eminently successful in all. His private business always possessed a charm to him superior to the allurements of office or public life. Esteeming it a duty, however, that each man owed to his country he gave close attention to politics. His political convictions were very strong, and were steadfastly maintained. His views were broad, and he grasped National affairs with no more difficulty than matters purely local. While a resident of Onondaga County, early in life, he was one of the Democratic leaders, and he always enjoyed the unlimited confidence of his political associates, and exerted a greater influence in the Democratic party of the State than any other man of his time. He served as chairman of the Democratic party from about 1857 until his death in 1866.
From a speech upon the life-work of Mr. Richmond, in the Democratic State convention of September, 1866, by Hon. S. J. Tilden, we quote the following:

"I remember very well in 1864, when the Nation was anxiously looking for a candidate for the highest office in its gift, public opinion turned very generally to this gentleman. Mr. Richmond firmly and persistently refused to entertain the idea. It is my firm conviction that except for that refusal his nomination was entirely possible, and his election extremely probable. I think he was one of the best informed and ablest men whom I have ever had the opportunity to know."

While Mr. Richmond’s mental qualities were all the foregoing describes, they were even excelled by his goodness of heart. Many noble deeds of his benevolence might be related. His acts of philanthropy were so numerous, and so disinterested and generous, that they defied attempts at concealment, and his name became as well known in the State for goodness of heart as it was for business astuteness and political sagacity. In his social relations he was kindly and genial, while in the privacy of the family circle his noble qualities shone with lustre.

In the summer of 1866, after attending the Saratoga convention, he, in company with Mr. Tilden, made a trip to Washington and Philadelphia, returning to New York, August 18th. The following day, while calling upon Mr. Tilden at his residence, he was taken seriously ill, and August 27th death relieved him from his sufferings. The marks of respect paid his memory by high and low, and the words of sympathy and sorrow that came from all sections, voiced the world’s appreciation of the greatness and goodness of the departed. Mr. Richmond was laid to rest in the cemetery at Batavia, where a magnificent mausoleum marks his final resting-place.

The Richmond Memorial Library, of which we present an engraving, was erected by Mrs. Mary E. Richmond in memory of her son, Dean Richmond, Jr., who died in 1885. The building stands on the west side of Ross street, in close proximity to the Union School. The site has a frontage of 179 feet on the street. The building was carefully planned by James G. Cutler, of Rochester, to afford the necessary accommodation for a combined reference and lending library, and is so arranged that the books are housed in a fire-proof building. It is of a monumental and elaborate character, befitting its memorial object, and care has been taken to so fit the library as not to incur a heavy expense in its maintenance. All of the structure as seen from the street is of light gray Fredonia sandstone and red Albion stone, which, combined, make two of the finest building materials in this section. The style is Romanesque, and is regarded as best adapted to the United States, and in which style most of the fine modern buildings erected within a few years past have been designed. A liberal amount of handsome carving gives a sense of completeness and richness to the structure, and a warm and agreeable color effect is produced by the orange red of the roof and crestings. The gutters and metal work are of copper. The dimensions are 87 feet across the front, and an extreme depth of 87 feet, the plan being in the form of the letter T; the reading room, hall, librarian’s room, and toilet rooms being in front, and the stock rooms projecting from the center to the rear of the main building. Ascending the low, broad flight of stone steps near the center of the front, the visitor stands first in a wide vestibule, with a handsome tile floor, and under the large half-circle arch which forms the principal entrance. From the vestibule a massive oak door gives entrance to the hall, 14 feet wide, at the end of which is the window communicating with the stock room. At the right of the hall on entering is the toilet and cloak rooms for ladies and gentlemen, and the door which connects with the office of the librarian. To the left of the hall a large pair of folding doors open into the reading room, which is the most attractive feature of the interior. This magnificent room is 24 feet wide by 42 feet long, with a height of 15 feet. At the end of the room, opposite the entrance, in a recess formed by the half-circle arch, is a great fire-place finished in red brick tile and surmounted by a handsome oak mantel with rich carving, and above the shelf is a large oak frame, on which is a bronze tablet bearing this inscription: “This building, erected A. D. 1887, as a memorial of Dean Richmond, Jr., by his mother, Mary Richmond.” This tablet is oblong in shape, and fits in the wood work over the fire-place. A large and very elaborate pair of wrought-iron andirons complete the fire-place, which has a brick tile hearth. The room is furnished with handsome oak tables and chairs of beautiful design; a handsome outfit of gas fixtures of wrought-iron, including a 24-light central chandelier, which hangs from the ceiling, between the heavy oak beams with which this part of the room is finished; and bracket lights, with Argand burners, over each table. The room is panelled in antique oak for a height of 7 1/2 feet from the floor, on a line with the bottom of the high windows, which have plate glass in suitable patterns in the transoms. The interior finish of all the rooms in the library is of antique oak. An extra room, for the storage of pamphlets, etc., has been arranged over the librarian’s and toilet rooms, access to which is by a winding stair in the octagonal tower, which is a striking feature of the exterior. This fire-proof building was commenced in 1887, and completed and presented to the village March 12, 1889. The capacity is for 40,000 volumes; the cost was about $35,000.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth (Mead) Richmond, whose many acts of charity and benevolence, and whose generous aid to every enterprise to build up Batavia and advance its moral and material growth, deserves especial mention in the history of Genesee County; was born in Troy, N. Y., in June, 1813, her ancestry being of English and French extraction. Her father was a ship chandler, and for many years navigated the Hudson River. Her mother died when she was nine years of age, and three years later the death of her father left her an orphan. Finding a home with her grandparents, in Troy, her early education was commenced in Mrs. Willard's Academy. Subsequently she found a home with her only sister, the wife of Brig.-Gen. Enos D. Hopping, who died while in the Mexican war. In 1849 her sister died, leaving no children. While residing with her sister she met Dean Richmond, and February 19, 1833, they were united in marriage. Nine children were born to them, namely: Alfred William, who died in New York in 1881; Harriet, who died in infancy; Henry A., the head of the Richmond Lithographic Co., of Buffalo; Charles, who died in infancy; Adelaide R. Kenny; W. Eugene, a resident of Buffalo; Edgar and Edward (twins), the former deceased, and the latter a resident of Chattanooga, Tenn.; and Dean, Jr. Dean Richmond, Jr., was a young man of promise, and died in 1885. He was a resident of Kansas City, Mo. Since 1853 Mrs. Richmond has resided in Batavia, and here we find her enjoying the autumn of her life, in her beautiful home, in a community in which she has done so much to advance its welfare and elevate its social and moral life.

The Richmond Memorial Library, erected by her to the memory of her son, Dean Richmond, Jr., will carry to posterity a grateful remembrance of her noble and generous nature.

Mrs. Adelaide R. Kenny has, since her residence in Batavia, been an able assistant and promoter of the good works of her mother, and has also been conspicuous in charitable, educational, and progressive business movements. She was born in Syracuse, but received her elementary education in the schools of Batavia, being also under the charge of a private governess. February 2, 1869, she was united in marriage with Dr. William J. C. Kenny, of New York city. He died in June, 1873, while serving as treasurer of the Buffalo Courier Co., of which he was the largest stockholder. Since 1873 Mrs. Kenny has resided with her mother in Batavia. She is now serving her second term as a member of the school board of education, and is also a director of the Genesee County Bank, of which her brother, Dean Richmond, Jr., was one of the founders. Mrs. Kenny and her mother were instrumental in advancing the interests of the new Hotel Richmond.

The First Presbyterian Society of Batavia.—The first organization of a society was September 19, 1809. A meeting was held at the Center school-house, presided over by Rev. Royal Phelps, of the Hampshire Missionary Society of Massachusetts, and a Congregational Church was formed. The original membership was as follows: Silas Chapin, David Anderson, Ezekiel Fox, Solomon Kingsley, Mrs. Solomon Kingsley, Patience Kingsley, Eleanor Smith, Elizabeth Mathers, Mrs. Esther Kellogg, Elizabeth Peck, Huldah Wright, and Mrs. Polly Branard. The church became Presbyterian, October 2, 1818. Its present corporate name was legally acquired in 1822. A sacramental service was next held in September in Jesse Rumsey's barn, and in June, 1810, a regular meeting was held in Abel Wheeler's barn, a sermon being preached by Rev. Reuben Parmelee. Subsequently other meetings were held at Phelps's inn, Phelps school-house, Clark's settlement, and the houses of Ezekiel Fox and Samuel Ranger. Benjamin Porter (of the Revolutionary war) was a trustee and deacon. In 1813 services were held in the court-house, and continued there until the completion of the "meeting-house" on Main street in 1824. The Presbyterian form of government was adopted October 2, 1818. The following are the names of the missionaries officiating at intervals up to 1818: Rev. Reuben Parmelee, Rev. John Spencer, Rev. John Alexander, Rev. Messrs. Ames, Bliss, Swift, Hanning, Sweezy, Squires, Colton, Duvel, and Chapin. In 1818 Rev. Ephraim Chapin was regularly settled, and officiated until 1822, and others succeeded as follows: Rev. Ephraim Chapin, 1817-22; Rev. Calvin Colton, 1823-26; Rev. Charles Whitehead, 1827-28; Rev. Russell Whiting, 1829-31; Rev. Erastus J. Gillett, 1837-39; Rev. William H. Beecher, 1839-43; Rev. Byron Sunderland, 1843-51; Rev. William Lusk, 1852-55; Rev. Isaac O. Fillmore, 1855-58; Rev. Charles F. Mussey, 1861-69; Rev. Chester W. Hawley, 1871-74; Rev. Thomas B. McLeod, 1875-77; Rev. William Swan, 1878-87; Rev. Allan D. Draper, 1887.

The first edifice was constructed of wood, at a cost of $3,574, and occupied by the society up to the opening of the present beautiful stone church edifice, dedicated February 20, 1856. The present church has been improved from time to time, and especially made more commodious by the addition of the Sunday-school rooms in 1882; by a new gallery in 1888; and a complete renovation and decoration of the inside walls in 1889. The old bell, cast in town, in very early days by Cochran, did duty in its wooden tower until dashed to the ground on the night of election in November, 1856. In 1886 a new bell was purchased. The board of trustees of the society are Henry F. Tarbox, president; Levant C. McIntyre, secretary; Theron F. Woodward, treasurer; Leonard Travis and W. Harris Day. The total membership of the society is 677. The Sabbath-school has 504 members upon the roll, with 29 classes, under the superintendence of L. C. McIntyre. The value of the property of the society is between $50,000 and $60,000, and the seating capacity of the church is 900.

Rev. Allan D. Draper, the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Batavia, was born in Phelps, N. Y. His parents were V. V. and Elizabeth Draper. He graduated from the Iowa State University (classical department) in 1876, and while there served one year as captain of Co. B, Iowa State Militia, University Battalion. In 1879 he was graduated from the Union Theological Seminary, New York city. He then served a pastorate of nearly six years at Red Creek, Wayne County, when he came to Bergen in 1884, remaining until July, 1887, when he was called to Batavia. December 29, 1881, he married Bertha F. Stoutenburgh, of Phelps, N. Y.

St. James's Protestant Episcopal Church.—The parish of St. James's Church is one of the oldest in this section of the State. The church stands to-day upon the same ground it has occupied from the beginning. The parish was established chiefly through the labors of the Rev. Alanson W. Welton, a clergyman of the church residing in Ontario County. For several years prior to 1815 he had been invited and officiated in this and the neighboring towns, though of necessity but few times each year. His labors were rewarded by the organization of the parish at Batavia, at a meeting held in the court-house, or Heacock's inn, on Tuesday, June 6, 1815. A committee was appointed to wait upon Joseph Ellicott, who agreed to give $1,500 if the new structure would be of brick. No record has been kept as to the number of members at that time, but enough certainly to comply with the law. At this meeting the following persons were elected members of the vestry: John Heacock and Samuel Benedict, wardens; Richard Smith, Isaac Sutherland, Isaac Spencer, John Z. Ross, Chauncey Keyes, David C. Miller, Aaron Van Cleve, Oswald Williams, vestrymen.
Steps were taken as early as 1815 for the building of a house of worship, but the first (brick) building was not completed so as to be occupied until eight years after, and was consecrated by Bishop Hobart, September 22, 1826. The sum of $5,100 was subscribed towards the debt of the church, the parties so contributing owning the pews occupied by them. Among the contributors we find the names of Libbeus Fish, $500; D. E. Evans, Trumbull Cary, and Joseph Ellicott, $350 each; J. Z. Ross and O. Williams, $300 each; J. Brisbane, $200; R. Smith and E. Mix, $150 each; and many others. James Cochran donated the bell at present in use, costing $300, and also $75. The majority of the subscribers mentioned above agreed to a transfer of their privileges in pews on the building of the present edifice. The second or present church building, of stone, was erected in 1835–36; at the same time the main part of the old rectory was built. The lot was given by D. E. Evans, who also gave $1,500 and the chandelier. Trinity Church of New York gave $1,000. Services were continued from the organization of the parish by the Revs. Samuel Johnston and L. B. Ives. The list of rectors is as follows: Rev. Lucius Smith, 1823–33; James A. Bolles, D. D., 1833–54; Thomas A. Tyler, D. D., 1854–62; Rev. Morelle Fowler, 1863–68; Rt. Rev. C. F. Robertson, Bishop of Missouri, a few months; Rev. George F. Plummer, 1868–75; George S. Baker, 1875–77; Rev. H. L. Everest, 1878–82; Rev. William A. Hitchcock, D. D., 1883–87; Rev. A. M. Sherman, 1887.

The church has a seating capacity of 700; number of families 180; number of communicants 330. The Sunday-school has 19 teachers and 150 scholars, with C. W. Stickie, superintendent. The estimated value of church property is $39,200. The windows in the present church are all memorial, that of the chancel being presented as a gift by Bishop De Lancey in 1854, in gratitude for his recovery from an accident while on his annual visitation, and for the kindness of the congregation during his illness. The parish records denote long service on the part of some of its wardens and vestrymen. Among them were William Seaver, 40 years; Phineas L Tracy, 25 years; Judge Pringle, 30 years; Trumbull Cary, 46 years; H. J. Redfield, 18 years; Junius A. Smith, 26 years; G. B. Worthington, 27 years, and now serving.

St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church of Batavia.¹—No religious organization of any denomination took formal shape in Genesee County until about 1809, and prior to that time the region was only visited by an occasional missionary. Prominent among them was Glezen Fillmore, a young man who received a license to preach in 1809, and during that year emigrated from Vermont to what is now Clarence, Erie County.

For a long time he was known as one of the "Fathers of the Church" in Western New York. The history of Methodist denomination begins with the formation of the Genesee Conference, organized at Lyons, N. Y., July 20, 1810, by Bishops Francis Asbury and William McKendree. The region west of the Genesee River was designated as the "Holland Purchase Mission," and connected with the "Susquehanna district," then in charge of Rev. Gideon Draper as presiding elder. For the next two years John Kimberlin, William Brown, Loring Grant, Elijah Metcalf, Marmaduke Pease, and Anning Owent were the only itinerant preachers whose names are mentioned on the records. In 1813 the name of "New Amsterdam Circuit and Genesee District" was given to all of the territory extending from Batavia to Niagara River, and from the mouth of Tonawanda Creek to 20 miles south of Buffalo, and comprised 28 or 30 stations, or appointments, which were each to be filled once in about every two weeks. In 1813–14 Rev. Gideon Lanning was the only traveling preacher on the circuit. As is well known no church edifice of any kind was built until about 1823, and the services in Batavia were held either in the court-house or a frame school-house, which formerly stood a short distance west of the old land office, on Main street. The itinerant system of course necessitated a yearly change of ministers, and in 1814–15 Minshall took charge of the circuit. In 1816–17 Revs. James H. Harriss and William Jones officiated at Batavia and vicinity, and in 1817–18 they were replaced by Elders Alpheus Davis and John Hamilton. In 1818–19 Rev. Aurora Seager and Rev. Peter Foster succeeded them, and about the same time Rev. Elisha House became a brief resident of Batavia. In 1819–20 Elder Ara Williams succeeded to the circuit, but Rev. Elisha House remained in the village.

At this juncture an organization was formed, called the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Batavia, and efforts were made to build a church.
In 1820–21 Rev. James Hall and Rev. Zachariah Paddock governed the circuit and officiated at Batavia. In due time, 1821–22, they were succceeded by Elders James Gilmore and Jasper Bennett. These in regular rotation were followed in 1822–23 by Rev. John Arnold and Rev. Asa Orcutt. On the 16th of May, 1823, a subscription paper was drawn up and a sufficient amount raised to warrant the undertaking. Hon. Joseph Ellicott made the largest subscription, which was $250 in cash and a lot upon which to erect the church, valued at $250, making $500 in all. On June 23, 1823, the board of trustees contracted with Thomas McCulley, Joseph Shaw, and Seymour Ensign for the building of a stone church to be 40x45 feet. McCulley was to do the mason work for $762, Shaw the outside carpenter and joiner work for $511, and Ensign the inside joiner work for $400. On its completion, at a cost of about $2,800, the church was dedicated June 13, 1824. The location (corner of Main and Lyon streets) was never, however, considered a good one, and after about 16 years' occupancy the society, desiring a more central location, sold the structure in 1839 to the "First Freewill Baptist Church of Batavia," by whom it was later occupied.

After the sale of the "West End" or Lyon street church the society regularly assembled, and for about two years held services in the "Nixon building," later a district school-house, which stood (now torn down) on the easterly side of the Episcopal Church on Ellicott street. On January 28, 1841, a subscription was opened and a sufficient amount raised to build a new church on the east side of Jackson street. The lot was donated by John Lomber, and Thomas McCulley contributed the stone foundation walls at a cost of $150. The entire cost, which included the donations of lot and foundation walls by Messrs. Lomber and McCulley, was about $3,000. Rev. Allen Steele was then the "preacher in charge," and the structure was dedicated on December 3, 1841, under the name of St. John's Church. In this condition it was occupied until February, 1866, when the property was sold to William M. Terry, then converted into a feed store, tenement, and temple of dramatic art, which was destroyed by fire on Sunday, July 15, 1888.

On leaving the Jackson street church the congregation worshiped about a year in Concert Hall, on the corner of Main and State streets, but previously had purchased the lot adjoining the then residence of David Seaver, on Main street. Upon this site the society erected an elegant edifice at an expense of about $20,000. This church, built of brick, is in the Norman style of architecture, 50x90 feet, with a lecture room in the rear. The spire on the corner is 160 feet in height, and contains a town clock.

Its interior appointments and arrangements are of the most substantial kind, and reflect great credit, not only upon the trustees and congregation, but upon Rev. Sandford Hunt, D. D., then (1868-70) preacher in charge, under whose supervision the edifice was built. The corner-stone was laid June 30, 1868, by Rev. E. E. Chambers, then presiding elder, with appropriate ceremonies. The first service in the session room was held on Sunday, August 1, 1869, and the edifice solemnly dedicated September 14, 1869.

The following is a list of the various ministers who officiated from 1841 to 1870: Allen Steele, five years; Philo E. Brown, one year; Joseph Cross, one year; John Parker, one year; William R. Babcock, one year; Daniel C. Houghton, one year; Philo Woodworth, one year; J. K. Cheeseman, one year; William M. Ferguson, one year; Charles Shelling, one year; E. Everett Chambers, one year; James M. Fuller, two years; John B. Wentworth, two years; De Forest Parsons, one year; King David Nettleton, two years; Joseph H. Knowles, two years; George G. Lyon, one year; Schuyler Seager, two years; Charles R. Pomeroy, two years; Sandford Hunt, two years.

To complete the history to the present time we add the names of those who have been pastors of this church since Rev. Allen Steele, who last served the society in 1870-71: 1871-73, R. C. Brownlee, two years; 1873-76, James E. Bills, three years; 1876-78, A. D. Wilbor, two years; 1878-81, T. H. Youngman, three years; 1881-82, O. S. Chamberlain, one year; 1882-85, John W. Sanborn, three years; 1885-88, C. W. Winchester, three years; 1888, S. W. Lloyd (now acting). During the pastorate of Rev. C. W. Winchester the church was re-frescoed, the seats elevated in amphitheater style, and a new organ purchased, the improvements costing about $3,000.

The First Baptist Church of Batavia.—On July 8, 1834, a council of delegates from Wyoming, Middlebury, La Grange, Bethany, and Batavia met, with Elder B. N. Leach, of Middlebury, for moderator, and William Smith, of Bethany, as clerk. Resolutions were passed "to give fellowship to the brethren and sisters — 24 in number — as a sister church in the gospel." Elder Leach preached from Phil. 1, 27: "Only let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ; that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." After the sermon Elder Clark, of La Grange, gave the right-hand of fellowship to the members of the new church, and the First Baptist Church of Batavia started out upon its mission of salvation. On the 9th of November, 1835, due notice having been given, the members met at the court-house in Batavia for the purpose of organizing a society according to law. Gideon Kendrick and P. S. Moffat were called upon to preside at the meeting. It was voted that the organization be called the "Baptist Society of Batavia village." The following trustees were then elected: Richard Coville, Jr., John Dorman, William Blossom, William D Popple, and Calvin Foster. A special meeting was called in January, 1836, to take into consideration the purchasing of a lot and the building of a house of worship. Calvin Foster, John Dorman, William Blossom, and Richard Coville were appointed a committee for that purpose. The lot now occupied by the society was purchased March 17, 1836, of William D. Popple, of Elba, for $400, and the deed was recorded in the clerk's office by the late Benjamin Pringle, then a deputy clerk here. The church building was erected soon after the purchase of the lot, and the prayer room was located in the front of the church, upstairs, where the gallery now is. About 25 years ago it was remodeled at a cost of $10,000. The edifice was as it now stands. In 1877 the society reorganized under the new State law, and took its present name.

Since its organization the church has had 12 pastors. The following are their names and the date of the commencement of their work: 1834, Ichabod Clark; 1837, William W. Smith; 1840, L A. Esta; 1844, Gideon Williams; 1845, S. M. Stimpson; 1852, W. Harrington; 1855, J. B. Vrooman; 1859, L. J. Huntley; 1861, S. M. Stimpson; 1865, O. E. Mallory; 1875, D. D. Brown; 1877, William C. Learned; 1882, C. A. Johnson. In 1843 Isaac Fargo was granted a letter and a license to preach. William Putnam and H. P. Brotherton were also sent forth to declare the glad tidings of salvation, the former in 1844 and the latter in 1869. Two ladies from this church are now working in the missionary field, viz.: Mrs. Alice Buell Roberts and Mrs. Lillian Clark Chase.

The Sunday-school was organized in 1837, with 13 teachers and 60 scholars. The school now numbers six officers, 21 teachers, and 280 scholars. The membership has grown from 24 to 327, and during the past year, for the support of the church, they gave $2,200 and $460 for benevolences. The new lot on East Main street was purchased December 10, 1883, of Miss Mary L. Douglass, and cost $4,500, and a new church, of stone, in process of construction, will cost over $30,000, and will seat about 500 persons. The church was never more united and prosperous than at present.

Rev. Cyrus A. Johnson, the pastor of the First Baptist Church of Batavia for the past eight years, was brought up in Connecticut, graduating from the Wesleyan University there in 1865, and from the Union Theological Seminary of New York in 1868. His first pastorate was at Cohoes, but his health failing he traveled for two years. On his return he went to Whitehall, N. Y., and preached in that section for 12 years. In 1882 he accepted his present charge, and through his labors the church society has largely increased. The new edifice now being erected was made possible through his efforts and the harmony of the entire society. He was married, in 1872, to Miss Sarah Scott, who died in 1884, leaving two children, Bertha and Lester. In 1886 he was united in marriage to Mrs. Anna Potter, of New York, who shares with him the labors of his field.

The First Freewill Baptist Church, on Bank street, was organized in January, 1885, with about 25 members. The church was built and completed in 1889, at a total cost for the whole property of $10,000. It will seat 450 persons, is a neat wood structure of churchly design, and in a quiet neighborhood. There are about 60 members belonging to the church and 70 to the Sunday-school. The pastor is Rev. J. H. Durkee, the superintendent is Charles J. Stanley, and the secretary is George Redshaw. The church’s trustees are Calvin S. Loomis, E. A. Rial, and Albert B. Crary. Jacob H. Durkee, the pastor, is a native of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. He was born in 1847, educated at New Hampton, N. H., and took a collegiate course at Bates Theological College. His first pastorate was in Meredith village and New Market, N. H. From there he came to Phoenix, N. Y., where he remained four years, when he went to Pike, N. Y., for four years, and in 1885 located in Batavia. He was married, in 1876, to Miss Susan T. Douglass, a native of Maine, whose father was a clergyman there. They have one child, Harold K., and their residence is at 159 Bank street. Rev. Mr. Durkee is also the editor and publisher of the Welcome, a monthly newspaper published in the interest of his church and congregation. By his superior executive abilities he has organized several church societies and erected three new churches.
Evangelical Association of Batavia is located at 27 Center street, with the Rev. G. H. Gelser in charge. It was organized in 1862, by M. Pitzinger and Adolph Miller, the first pastor being Jacob Seigrist. The first house of worship was built of wood in 1862. The present house is of brick, and was built in 1871, at a cost of $6,000. There are 14 members.

St. Paul's German United Evangelical Church was organized April 20, 1873, by John Friedley, president; Martin Wolfley, treasurer; and Louis Uebel, secretary. The first pastor was Rev. George Field. The church is located on Ellicott street. Rev. J. Bank, who has been pastor for about seven years, has recently resigned. He intends to retire from the ministry and will reside in Buffalo.

St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church.—From 1840 to 1843 the few Catholics who had settled around Batavia (perhaps not more than 12 or 14 in all) were occasionally visited by Rev. Father Gannon. No written record of his visits remains, but he is yet remembered by some of the oldest Catholic residents. Rev. Bernard O'Reilly, subsequently bishop of Hartford, Conn., and his brother, Rev. William O'Reilly, both at the time stationed at Rochester, attended the settlement from 1843 to 1847. These gentlemen officiated at the house of James Ronen, and sometimes at the residence of Edward O'Connor. Soon the number of Catholics had so increased that a private dwelling could no longer afford them sufficient room to assemble for divine worship, and then, through the kindness of Messrs. Otis & Worthington, they were allowed, free of rent, the use of a large room in the second story of the building still used by G. B. Worthington as a hardware store. Rev. Thomas McEvoy attended the mission in 1848. April 4, 1849, Rt. Rev. Bishop Timon appointed Rev. Edward Dillon to the pastoral charge of Batavia, and on the following Sunday, April 8th, which was Easter day, Father Dillon officiated in the brick school-house on the corner of Main and Eagle streets. At this time the number of Catholics was about 75. Encouraged by the presence of their resident pastor they immediately went to work raising a fund for the erection of a church. But it was difficult to find a suitable lot that would be sold to them for that purpose. In May following Bishop Timon lectured in a small hall near the Eagle tavern, now the Hotel Richmond, and a few days afterwards Benjamin Pringle sold to the Catholics of Batavia a two-story stone building on Jackson street for $1,200. This building had been erected for a select school. The Catholics worshiped in it for several years, and it is now the parochial school.
of St. Joseph's Church, where 300 children are taught in all the branches of a practical English education. Mr. Pringle donated $25 towards the purchase of the building and lot; Messrs. Redfield, Cary, Smith, Rowan, Glowacki, Haney, Ganson, Knowles, and Holden also contributed liberally. In November, 1850, Father Dillon resigned the pastoral charge, and was succeeded by Rev. Thomas Fitzgerald. Rev. Francis O'Farrell succeeded Father Fitzgerald on the 5th of September, 1852. On the 10th of December, 1855, Father O'Farrell was appointed vicar-general of the diocese of Buffalo, and rector of St. Joseph's Cathedral. Rev. Peter Brown succeeded him in Batavia. September 28, 1856, Father Brown resigned, and was succeeded by Rev. James McGlew, who resigned on the 10th of December, 1860, and was succeeded by Rev. Thomas Cunningham, with Rev. John Castaldi as his assistant. September 15, 1862, Father Cunningham purchased the present site of St. Joseph's Church, on the site where in early days one Williams owned a tannery, on the corner of Main and Summit streets, from Lawrence Timmons, for $2,500, and in 1864 the edifice was erected at a cost of $45,000. Father Cunningham, having retained the pastoral charge for nearly 13 years, was succeeded on the 23rd of August, 1873, by Rev. P. A. Moloy. On the 22nd of August, 1874, Father Moloy resigned to Rev. Martin McDonnell, who left in April, 1880. His charge at that time numbered about 2,200 Catholics. Attica was also made a mission. He was succeeded by Father James McManus in January, 1882. He died in Batavia at the age of 40 years. During his sickness Father Walsh, an assistant, was in charge until February, 1882, when Father T. P. Brougham, the present priest, was called to preside over the spiritual wants of the parish. Father Brougham came from Java. He had been previously at Somerset, Niagara County, in charge there of three churches for a period of 10 years. During his incumbency here great changes in the parish have taken place. The old convent, located on Jackson street, was sold in 1882, and the new one erected on Summit street the same year, as was also a parochial school adjacent, which accommodates 400 pupils. Sister Felice is in charge of the school. St. Joseph's Convent of Mercy is built of brick, and is a house for sisters, called the Mother house, or Novitiate, novices being taken in here and sent to all parts of the State.

Father Brougham was also instrumental in acquiring additional grounds east of the church, where in time will be erected a new priest's house. The church also has been completely renovated and newly decorated inside, making a very attractive edifice. The first convent (on Jackson street) was built in 1862, where they remained until 1880, when a building on Ross street was leased for two years, until the present edifice was completed.

The Bank of Genesee was incorporated under that name about 1829, and March 23, 1830, the first by-laws were adopted. The bank began business with a capital stock of $100,000, which was subsequently increased the same year to $150,000. Trumbull Cary was elected the first president, and William M. Vermilye, cashier. For many years it was the only bank in this section, and its business extended all over Western New York. The old bank building, corner East Main and Bank streets, is one of the old landmarks of Batavia, and is now occupied by the Batavia Club. The bank was reorganized in 1851, as a State bank, and in March, 1865, it became the National Bank of Genesee, with a capital stock of $114,400. Previous to this period the capital stock had been changed several times, and for some years was $500,000. The charter to the bank was renewed in 1885, and it continued business as a National bank until June, 1888, when their charter was surrendered and it was reorganized under the State laws, with a capital of $75,000. The business office of the bank was removed to its present place, 98 East Main street, in September, 1887.

The officers of the bank from its organization have been as follows: Presidents: Trumbull Cary from organization until March 31, 1840; Phineas L. Tracy from 1840 to December, 1851; Benjamin Pringle from 1851 to June 12, 1855; H. U. Howard from 1855 to July, 1885; and A. N. Cowdin from 1885 (still serving). Vice-presidents: P. L. Tracy from 1834 to 1840; J. C. Ferris from 1840 to 1844; J. B. Skinner from 1844 to 1849; Benjamin Pringle from 1849 to 1851; Alva Smith from 1851 to 1853; H. U. Howard from 1853 to 1855; Alva Smith from 1855 to 1857; J. B. Skinner from 1857 to 1870; E. H. Fish from 1870 to 1874; Walter Cary from 1874 to 1880. Cashiers: William M. Vermilye from organization to May, 1830; J. S. Ganson from 1830 to January, 1838; J. E. Robinson from 1838 to 1851; T. C. Kimberly from 1851 to 1858; M. L. Babcock from 1858 to 1859; A. N. Cowdin from July, 1859, to July, 1885; Trumbull Cary from July, 1885 (still in office). It is impossible to give a full list of directors who have served this venerable and noted corporation, but we subjoin a list of some of them whose names will be familiar to old-time residents. The directors elected June 8, 1830, 13 in number, were Jacob Le Roy, Oliver Benton, Alva Smith, James C. Ferris, Henry Hawkins, Gaius B. Rich, T. Cary, Rufus H. King, Augustus Cowdin, the father of Augustus N., was born in New Hampshire in 1803. At the age of 30 years he came to Batavia and engaged in the boot and shoe trade. He immediately identified himself with the Presbyterian Church, was for 50 years a teacher in the Sabbath school, and was ever a willing and valued helper in church work. He always proved himself worthy of the respect and esteem of the whole community, and held positions of trust at various times. He was justice of the peace, supervisor, superintendent of the poor, and a trustee of the Union School. He died February 25, 1884. His wife was Jane G. Getty, a native of this State. The son, Augustus N., born here in 1840, was reared and educated in the schools of his native place, and at the age of 17 years entered the bank (of which he is now the head) as a clerk. He filled all the intermediate positions, and is now its trusted and honored president. For one-third of a century he has been connected with the oldest and staunchest monetary institution of Genesee County, and has rounded out this long period with a reputation of unsullied honor and integrity. He has served as town clerk, as treasurer of the village, and is secretary and treasurer of the Gas and Electric Light Company. He is also a Knight Templar.

The First National Bank was established in 1864, with a capital stock of $50,000, and its number was 340. The first trustees were R. H. Farnham, C. H. Monell, George Bowen, Tracy Pardee, and Henry Monell, and the first officers elected were R. H. Farnham, president, and C. H. Monell, cashier. The latter never acted, and subsequently, in June, 1864, Marcus L. Babcock was appointed to the office and served over one year. May 31, 1865, the capital stock was increased to $75,000, and January 9, 1883, was made $100,000, which still continues. The officers have been as follows: Presidents: R. H. Farnham from March 21, 1864, to June 29, 1865; Tracy Pardee from June 29, 1865, to January 10, 1884; Levant C. McIntyre from January 10, 1884 (still in office). Cashiers: C. H. Monell, appointed March 21, 1864; M. L. Babcock from June 4, 1864, to February 8, 1865; Daniel E. Waite from February 8, 1865, to August 13, 1866; L. C. McIntyre from August 13, 1866, to January 16, 1884; J. L. Bigelow, appointed January 16, 1884 (still in office.) The office of vice-president was created in 1883, and Gad B. Worthington was elected, serving in that capacity ever since. The first board consisted of five directors, and in 1869 the number was increased to seven. The directors have been R. H. Farnham, C. H. Monell, George Bowen, Tracy Pardee, Henry Monell, John McKay, Leonidas Doty, John Fisher, Gad B. Worthington, and Cyrenus Walker. Since 1884 the board has consisted of the following members: L. C. McIntyre, D. W. Tomlinson, Samuel Parker, E. C. Walker, G. B. Worthington, and George Bowen. In 1874 the directors were Leonidas Doty, Tracy Pardee, John Fisher, George Bowen, Edward C. Walker, and Gad B. Worthington.

Gad B. Worthington, the vice-president of the First National Bank, was born in Lenox, Mass., in 1815, where he was educated in part, and at Owego, to which place the family moved, remaining there until 1836, when our subject came to Batavia, and was a clerk in the hardware store of Belden & Otis. Later he became a partner with them, and finally controlled the business, in which he has since been engaged. Mr. Worthington was one of the organizers of the Batavia Gas Light Co., and is now a director. He and family are members of the Episcopal Church. His children are Gad D., a partner in the hardware business; Edward W., an Episcopalian minister at Cleveland, Ohio; Amanda C., living with her parents; and Sarah, wife of E. De L. Palmer, of Albany, N. Y.

Tracy Pardee, at one time president of the First National Bank, was a man of prominence in the village. He was born in Steuben County, and came to Batavia in 1852, where he lived until his death in 1883. He was at one time a member of the legislature. His father was in the War of 1812, and died in Elba in 1858.

Levant C. McIntyre, president of the First National Bank, is a native of Genesee County, and was born in 1829. His father, Eden McIntyre, was an early magistrate of the town. His mother was Harriet Dunham, a daughter of Col. Shubael Dunham, a very early tavern-keeper, from whom Dunham's Corners was named. Mr. McIntyre received good educational advantages, attending Cary Collegiate Seminary, and commenced business as a druggist, pursuing the same for eight years in Batavia. He then went to Romeo, Mich., in the dry goods business, and assisted in the organization of the First National Bank of that place, being cashier of the same. He remained there until 1865, when he returned to Batavia, and became identified with its banking and business interests. Mr. McIntyre is conservative in the business management of his bank, yet withal progressive in spirit. He enjoys the confidence and esteem of the entire community. He is a member of the board of education, trustee of the Johnston Harvester Co. and the Cemetery Association, president of the Y. M. C. A., and is foremost in acts of charity and benevolence. In 1852 he united in marriage with Miss Marietta Fellows, and they are parents of four children, viz.: Allan F., Mary L., Nellie G., and Grove E. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. McIntyre is an elder and superintendent of the Sunday-school.

The Genesee County Bank was organized as the Genesee County National Bank, No. 2,421, April 4, 1879, with a capital stock of $50,000. The first officers were S. Masse, president; Dean Richmond, Jr., vice-president; and William F. Merriman, cashier. The first board of directors consisted of 11 members, viz.: Solomon Masse, Dean Richmond, Jr., Dr. H. S. Hutchins, Charles R. Gould, Henry Craft, William C. Watson, W. F. Merriman, J. C. Guiteau, Edwin Darrow, H. A. Huntington, and F. C. Lathrop. The officers have been as follows: Presidents: Solomon Masse from organization until July 14, 1885; Royal T. Howard from July 14, 1885 (still serving). Vice-presidents: Dean Richmond, Jr., from organization until January 12, 1882; Dr. H. S. Hutchins from January 12, 1882, until January 9, 1883; William C. Watson from January 9, 1883 (still serving). Cashiers: William F. Merriman from organization until June 22, 1880; Charles R. Gould from June 22, 1880, until August 28, 1882; Jerome L. Bigelow from August 28, 1882, until January 18, 1884; John W. Smith from January, 1884 (still in office). H. K. Buell succeeded W. F. Merriman as a director January 12, 1881, and Alvin Pease succeeded Dean Richmond, in May, 1882. January 9, 1883, the by-laws were amended, and the board was reduced from 11 to seven members. The present board consists of R. T. Howard, Mrs. A. R. Kenny, H. A. Huntington, William C. Watson, R. A. Maxwell, Henry Craft, and J. C. Guiteau. The charter of the bank was surrendered to the government December 31, 1884, and the bank was at that time reorganized under the State laws as the Genesee County Bank. The place of business is 103 East Main street.
Royal T. Howard, president of the Genesee County Bank, is a native of Wyoming County, and a son of Samuel and Roxa (Carpenter) Howard, both from Connecticut. Samuel Howard came to Perry in 1811, where he married and resided until his death. Royal T. began business as a lumberman in Allegany County, pursuing this business for 18 years, and was also engaged in the manufacture of staves and heading in Warsaw and interested in pine lands in Michigan. Mr. Howard removed to Batavia in 1871, purchasing a lumber yard and planing-mill, and soon after organized the firm of Howard & Olmsted, which continued business three years. The firm then became R. T. Howard & Co., and was such until 1882. Mr. Howard engaged in various business enterprises until 1885, when he became president of the bank. He is also vice-president of the Genesee County Permanent Loan and Building Association.

John W. Smith, cashier of the Genesee County Bank, is a native of Batavia, where he was born April 23, 1850, and is a son of George W. and Mary A. (Baldwin) Smith. His father was a native of Vermont, and his mother of Connecticut. They have been residents of Batavia many years. John W. was educated in the schools of his native town, and early in life began his business career as recording clerk in the office of County Clerk Holden, where he was engaged six years. He began his banking life as book keeper in the First National Bank, where he was employed over one year, and subsequently entered the Bank of Batavia, with which institution he served as book-keeper until April, 1879, when, upon the organization of the Genesee County National Bank, he became identified with that corporation. In January, 1884, he succeeded J. L. Bigelow as cashier, which position he has creditably filled, and is still serving in that capacity. Mr. Smith was married, August 30, 1871, to Miss Emma Fillmore, of Batavia, and resides at 112 Ellicott street. He and his wife are members of the First Baptist Church, of which he is clerk and a leading working member. He is also a member of the K. of P. and the Empire Order of Mutual Aid. He is a young man of ability, enterprise, and promise.

The Farmers' Bank of Batavia was established in 1860 by Leonidas Doty, who came from Attica, where he had been engaged in the banking business with the late Dean Richmond. Mr. Doty came from Greene County, where he was born in 1812. He was in the mercantile business at Attica for 20 years, then engaged in banking, and was also identified in other business measures in that village. He was also one of the founders of the National Bank of Batavia, and a member of the vestry of St.
James's Episcopal Church, being a liberal contributor to its support. He died in 1888, at Buffalo, where he had resided for 12 years after leaving Batavia. The Farmers' Bank has lately erected and is now occupying an elegant and commodious structure on the corner of Main and Jackson streets, having the best facilities for transacting its large and increasing business of any bank in Western New York outside of Buffalo. A few years since John H. Ward was admitted as a partner in the business of the bank, and he is now sole manager of the concern. He was born in Bergen in 1846, a son of Henry M. and Adelia C. (Curtis) Ward, who are natives of Bergen, and descendants of the earliest pioneers of that town. His father, Henry M. Ward, was a merchant, and died in 1857. His mother died in 1882. Their children were Emma C., wife of Prof. A. G. Clement, and John H., who began his business career at the age of 13 years as a clerk in Bergen. He was afterwards a member of the firm of Green & Ward until 1875, when he was elected sheriff of Genesee County, and removed to Batavia. At the expiration of his term of office (three years) he entered the Farmers' Bank. Mr. Ward is the U. S. loan commissioner, and is a 32d degree Mason. He was united in marriage, in 1871, with Isabella D. Mann, of Syracuse, and they have one child, E. Gertrude.

The Bank of Batavia was incorporated July 11, 1876, with a capital of $50,000, the late D. W. Tomlinson being the leading man in its formation. In March, 1883, the capital stock was increased to $100,000. D. W. Tomlinson, son of D. W., is now president; H. F. Tarbox, vice-president; and H. T. Miller, cashier. The bank is located in a fine brick building at 71 East Main street.

Olive Branch Lodge, No. 39, was chartered in 1811, and held its first meeting May 11th at the public tavern of William Keyes. The first master was Ezra Platt; senior warden, Richard Smith; secretary, I. Babcock, who acted as such for four years. Richard Smith acted in the capacity of warden three years. L. Foster was warden in 1814 and master in 1815. Blanchard Powers was master in 1816–17, J. Z. Ross in 1818, and Powers again in 1819–20, when sessions were held at his house in Bethany. The meetings in Batavia were generally held at the taverns, for want of regular lodge rooms, and after holding two meetings at Keyes tavern an arrangement was made with Aaron Van Cleve, sheriff and landlord at the court-house, for their meetings in his tavern. On September 2, 1811, a plat of ground was bought by the trustees of the school district, acting in conjunction with the Free Masons, the sum of $5 being paid for the same. The location was on lot 32, north side of Main street, on the corner of an alley, and contained 1,500 feet of ground, being where 315 Main corner of Ross streets now is. This was sold by Nathan Rumsey, conditioned upon there being a two-story brick building erected on the site within one and a half years, the lower portion to be occupied as a school, the upper portion for lodge uses. The Masons subscribed funds toward the erection of the building (as was understood). The War of 1812 prevented the completion of the building until the winter of 1813-14, when it was finished and ready for occupancy. The first meeting in their new rooms was held February 28, 1814, and subsequent meetings were continued there until 1816, when they tired of the location and tried to sell their interests to the school trustees, but failed. Other meetings continued to be held at the taverns until about 1819, when trouble arose among its members and the lodge was removed, and meetings were held at Bethany in Powers’s and Huggins’s houses and C. J. Lincoln’s inn. From Bethany it was moved to Le Roy, where it is now located.

A new lodge was again formed in 1824, called “Batavia Lodge, No. 433,” and a charter was granted that year. It was installed December, 13, 1825, at St. James’s Church. William Seaver was the presiding officer for 10 years, and Blanchard Powers, senior warden. Richard Dibble was junior warden, and Richard Smith, secretary and treasurer. Meetings were held at Bissell Humphrey’s “Eagle tavern” until it was burnt in 1833, and in 1839 the warrant was surrendered. The Morgan excitement, beginning in 1826, interfered seriously with the cause of Free Masonry, and for 16 years, or until 1842, meetings were held only at rare intervals. In 1842 the charter was revived, and for 18 months the lodge met at O. T. Fargo’s tavern, midway between Batavia and Alexander. Ebenezer Mix was master for three years, Joel Allen two years, and G. B. Shepard one year. D. M. Seaver was junior warden, and H. Humphrey, treasurer. In January, 1844, they moved from Fargo’s tavern to the “Cobble-stone block,” and held regular meetings until 1847, when the charter was again surrendered. In the course of a year or so a new lodge, No. 88, was formed, but did not long survive. The records of this lodge were destroyed by fire, so names of officers cannot be given. In the winter of 1850-51 the fraternity again organized under the name of “Fisher’s Lodge, No. 212” (named after Lillie Fisher, a very early settler of Alexander). They met for about one year at the old lodge rooms in the “Cobble-stone block.” For masters until 1859 (when its charter was surrendered) there were Cyrus Pond, Horace M. Warren, E. C. Dibble, K. Ferren, Gad Worthington, and S. A. Wilson. H. T. Cross was treasurer for a few years, and John Eager and D. Seaver, secretaries. Meetings were also held at the corner of Main and Jackson streets, in the new hall occupied by the Odd Fellows.

In 1859 the charter of this lodge was surrendered, and what remained of Fisher's Lodge was reorganized April 7th into "Batavia Lodge, No. 475," the charter being granted July 4th. In 1860 or 1861 the Masonic fraternity desired more independent quarters, and they leased rooms in the Champion block, owned by Joseph C. Wilson. Again, in 1865, it was decided to make another change, and a spacious series of apartments were leased on the corner of Main and State streets, and about $2,000 expended in fitting up the same. The dedication of these rooms was the occasion of drawing together a large assemblage of the fraternity from all parts of the county, lodges from Le Roy, Canandaigua, Pembroke, and Akron being represented. A delegation of Knights Templars from Buffalo Commandery, led by Captain Lockwood, and another from Pen Yan, by Hon. Darius A. Ogden, in full regalia, gave splendid effect to the scene. The dedication was made by John L. Lewis, P. G. M., who delivered a brief address to the fraternity and citizens assembled in the park. The brethren, accompanied by the ladies, passed from labor to refreshment in the dining-room of the lodge. The meetings are now held in elegant rooms in the Walker block, which were dedicated in 1880.

Bliss (deceased), formerly an attorney of Batavia; William Hoyt, since moved to New York; Simeon Lothiemi, who now resides in Germany; and Thomas Yates and B. P. Fonda, who are now living, the oldest members of the fraternity in the county. The present officers are Oscar Netzen, N. G.; Fred Gardner, V. G.; Frank Snyder, R. S.; Ira Howe, F. S.; Frank A. Moreau, treasurer. The lodge meets every Wednesday evening at their hall in Jackson street.

The Equitable Aid Union, No. 396, has 19 members, who meet bi-monthly. Thomas Capp is president; William Wescott, V. P.; I. V. Dibble, treasurer; and William Udritz, secretary.

Batavia Farmers' Club was organized in 1872, with P. P. Bradish as president; J. G. Fargo, secretary; and Henry Ives, treasurer. The present officers are Sylvanus Ford, of Elba, president, and John B. Crosby, secretary. It is one of the oldest clubs in the State.

The rooms are located on Main street, corner of Jackson, being elegantly fitted up for recreation for the young men, making an attractive and desirable place in which to spend their evenings, with no restraint so far as pleasant games and amusement are concerned. Tables of choice serials, magazines, and daily papers are at hand for those inclined to a literary taste, and a spacious gymnasium, fitted up with all necessary appliances for healthful exercise, make this an inviting place for those interested in the moral and religious welfare of the young men of Batavia.

The Genesee County Loan and Building Association was incorporated April 21, 1879, the object of the association being to encourage the saving of small sums of money weekly, thus accumulating a fund to be loaned to other members in such manner that they can repay the loan in easy weekly payments, or the amount of ordinary rent, thus helping them to secure a home. Its first officers were: President, Wilber Smith; vice-president, C. H. Howard; secretary, F. M. Sheffield; treasurer, F. S. Wood; attorney, S. E. North. Batavia cornet band.—The earliest record we have of any band was one led by Phineas Todd and a Mr. Hunt in 1820. This was disbanded after six years. The present one was organized about 1856, with A. W. Gardner as leader, and consisted of 14 members, among whom were Dr. Showerman, A. Bowen, E. Locke, W. Locke, and R. B. Pease, who loaned the band money to purchase instruments. The present officers are: Leader, C. Klimitz; treasurer, L. M. Smith; secretary, —— Leonard; and there are 15 pieces.

The Batavia Club was organized July 28, 1882, under the management of nine directors. The first ones elected were L. R. Bailey, D. W. Tomlinson, J. H. Bradish, A. E. Clark, F. S. Wood, A. N. Cowdin, J. H. Ward, A. T. Miller, and W. L. Otis. The first officers were D. W. Tomlinson, president; J. H. Bradish, vice-president; A. T. Miller, secretary; F. S. Wood, treasurer; L. R. Bailey, W. L. Otis, and A. E. Clark, house committee. The club-house, situated on Main street near the opera house, was opened January 4, 1883. This building was destroyed by fire February 16, 1886. On the 17th of April, 1886, the club was removed to its present building, on the corner of Main and Bank streets. This desirable building with location are the former quarters of the Bank of Genesee. The club was incorporated April 7, 1888, and shortly af-

...ward they purchased the present property. They have now 58 resident members and 31 non-resident members. The present directors are Henry Todd, D. W. Tomlinson, R. D. Dewey, J. H. Bradish, F. S. Wood, A. N. Cowdin, George P. Bowen, Trumbull Cary, and H. B. Fisher. The officers are Henry Todd, president; George P. Bowen, vice-president; F. S. Wood, secretary and treasurer; D. W. Tomlinson, J. Bataonia Business University was established by W. W. Whitcomb in 1867, at 92 East Main street. In 1885 the Hon. John M. McKenzie became associated with Mr. Whitcomb in the reestablishment of the school, with all the later improved methods, Mr. McKenzie acting as secretary and treasurer. The school was then located at its present quarters, Main corner of Jackson streets. The school has graduated over 800 pupils since it was established. Many of the young business men of Batavia are among its graduates. The “business practice” course of about two months is made to cover all possible transactions that may ever occur.

To a limited extent Mr. Whitcomb has become quite proficient in the subject of astronomy, having published an Illustrated Solar Chart, which gives at one view the relative positions of the planets; their orbital speed per hour; length of years; length of days; amount of light and heat on each; distance of each from the sun, also from the earth; inclination of orbits; diameter of each; density; gravity; eclipses of the sun and moon; phases of moon; inclination of axis of earth; Saturn and moon, from photographs; Saturn’s rings and moons; annual parallax; sun spots and faculae; moon, Saturn, and Mars, from photographs; the three motions of the sun explained; tide waves; transit of Mercury and Venus. The contents of several books are all before the eye, and in a plain, comprehensible manner. Mr. Whitcomb has also invented and procured letters patent on a Lunar Globe. The earth globe is confined in a groove forming an eclipse, thus showing the sun at the foci and the earth at a corresponding greater distance in June than in December; also the radius vector for each day in the year. The moon ball is so arranged as to follow the exact path of the moon, climbing in her course for 173 days and descending in same length of time, and in passing her nodes will show plainly when and how an eclipse is caused. Also how we may have seven eclipses in one year and only four in another, and will also pass accurately through the Chaldean period, or saros, and repeat the eclipses once in about 18 years. The “orbit band” is so arranged that the higher part indicates at a glance where, and in what months, the aphelion part of the moon's orbit is located—and careful study proves that wherever this is found the weather is under its influence: warmer, when between the earth and sun in winter, and cooler when from the sun in summer; or, to state it again, when the "orbit band" is toward the sun in summer we have extremes of heat, and, as when it is to the sun in summer, it is from the sun in winter, we have extreme cold. This is proved by dates covering over 60 years.

The Johnston Harvester Company.—In 1868 Johnston, Huntley & Co. established at Brockport, N. Y., a manufactory of harvesters, having had the machines built on contract for 1867. The principal member of the firm was Byron E. Huntley. They first manufactured what was known as the Johnston sweepstakes. After a few years the manufacture of these machines was abandoned, being supplanted by the present Johnston harvester. In 1870 a joint stock company was organized for the manufacture of these machines, with Samuel Johnston, president, and Byron E. Huntley, secretary and treasurer. In 1874 Mr. Johnston withdrew from the company, although the name of the corporation was not changed. In June, 1882, the works at Brockport were burned, and the company at once determined to remove to a place offering greater facilities for transportation, and accordingly they were located here. The works now consist of seven large buildings, occupying 17 acres of ground on Harvester avenue, between the N. Y. C. & H. R. Railroad and the N. Y., L. E. & W. Railroad. Steam engines of 300 horse-power furnish the propelling force for the machinery, and from 400 to 500 skilled mechanics are employed. The original cost of the plant was $300,000. The fact that Batavia is a good manufacturing point has been fully demonstrated, and a number of new manufacturing concerns have recently located there; none, however, are equal in magnitude to the Johnston harvester works.

In November, 1888, the company was reorganized by the election of the following directors: George E. Dana, of Syracuse; C. C. Briggs, of Pittsburg; L. C. McIntyre, B. E. Huntley, and A. J. Glass, of Batavia. The officers are A. J. Glass, president and treasurer; Byron E. Huntley, vice-president; and E. J. Mockford, secretary and superintendent. In January, 1889, there was added the manufacturing of the "Continental rotary disk pulverizer and corn cultivator," representing about 40 patents. They manufacture four styles of mowers, two styles of reapers, and two styles of self-binders.
Albert J. Glass, president and treasurer of the Johnston Harvester Co., is a native of Livingston County, and was born in 1841. Receiving an academic education in his native county upon attaining his majority he went to McGregor, Iowa, and became engaged in selling farming machinery and agricultural implements. In 1867 he was appointed the agent for the sale of Johnston harvesters, and in 1871 was made the manager of the Western business of the company, with offices located at Chicago. In 1882 he left the service of the company, and was for six years the manager of the Janesville Machine Co., at Janesville, Wis. In January, 1888, he came to Batavia at the request of Mr. Huntley, and was active in the reorganization of the present company. Mr. Glass is a man of superior executive ability, and under his supervision the affairs of the works are flattering and prospering.

Byron E. Huntley is the vice-president and European manager of the Johnston Harvester Company. His native home was Mexico, Oswego County. He moved to Fairport, Monroe County, with his parents, when 12 years of age, and in 1844 to Brockport. He prepared for college at Brockport Collegiate Institute, and subsequently attended the Madison University, at Hamilton, Madison County. Owing to failing health, however, he was compelled to give up his college course, and soon after he took a position as office boy in the factory of Fitch, Barry & Co. About 1845 an arrangement was made by Fitch, Barry & Co. with McCormick (who had come up from Virginia to Brockport to get his reaper built) to manufacture his machines under a license. The McCormick machine was built for a few years at this factory, which was one of the earliest in this line of work. Mr. Huntley spent about five years here as employee, and at the expiration of that time he secured an interest in the business, the firm being then known as Ganson, Huntley & Co. But few machines had been turned out up to this time; and the records show that Huntley, Bowman & Co. commenced work on the Palmer & Williams self-rake in 1853, that 50 machines were made that season, that in 1854 the number was increased to 325, and in the following years to 825 machines. In 1871 failing health compelled Mr. Huntley to seek a change, and he spent that year in Colorado, a rest that was of great benefit to him, and one of the best investments he ever made, he thinks; but prior to this he had established a market for their machines in Europe, and had opened an office there. As the Franco-Prussian war was in progress he did not go over in 1871, but he went the next year, and has gone regularly ever since. Mr. Huntley has crossed the Atlantic 38 times, and is, perhaps, better posted on the European harvester and mower trade than any man living; and the aim of the Johnston Harvester Company, influenced by his practical suggestions, has not been to lead in numbers of machines turned out, but to regularly make the best; and it is this course that has gained for them a world-wide reputation.

Edward J. Mockford was born in England in 1853, and came so this country in 1866. He entered the employ of Johnston, Huntley & Co. at Brockport in 1869, and has remained with the company ever since through all the changes of management. He has filled the positions of bookkeeper and cashier, and is now the very efficient secretary and superintendent of the large factory of the Johnston Harvester Co.

The Wiard Plow Company.—Thomas Wiard was a blacksmith and farmer in East Avon, N. Y. In 1806 he was engaged in the manufacture of the old-fashioned “bull plow” that was used by the pioneer farmers. In 1815 he began to purchase from Jethro Wood (the inventor of the first successful cast-iron plow) the necessary castings, and these he wooded and completed in his shop. Thus he continued until 1819, when he erected a foundry, made patterns for improved plows, and manufactured all the parts himself. He continued the manufacture of plows at East Avon, in connection with his sons William, Seth, Thomas, Henry, and Matthew, till about 1830, and one or more of his sons were manufacturing there until 1871. During this period improvements were being made in the Wiard plows till they had acquired a reputation above those of any other pattern in use. It is worthy of note that all the numerous members of the Wiard family from the grandfather down were men of superior practical ingenuity.

In 1865 George Wiard, son of William, and president of the present company in Batavia, purchased a half interest in the establishment at East Avon, and in 1871 Charles W. Hough, treasurer of the company, purchased the interest of Matthew Wiard, the firm being Wiard & Hough. The firm continued at East Avon until 1876. During its existence at East Avon the works were several times burned. In 1876 the business had so increased as to necessitate better facilities for transportation, and a removal was determined on. The village of Batavia offered better railroad facilities than any other place, and the citizens saw fit to donate a site for the works as a further inducement to the company to locate here. The works, located on Swan street, between the Erie and Central railroads, were erected by Wiard & Hough, and on their completion in Sep-
TOWN OF BATAVIA.

Tember, 1876, the present company was organized. The capital stock was originally $70,000, but was subsequently increased to $100,000. George Wiard was the president and general superintendent, and C. W. Hough the secretary and treasurer. The present officers are the same, except that J. J. Washburn is now the secretary. Since the establishment of the works here the business has been mainly the manufacture of plows, of which the company makes an endless variety, adapted to all kinds of soils and circumstances, and the more important parts of which are covered by letters patent in the United States and Canada. These consist of one, two, and three-horse plows, with chilled and steel mold-boards, wood, malleable, and cast-iron beams, sulky and walking, flatland and side-hill, and particularly swivel plows for level land. The original capacity of the works has been about doubled; the establishment now covers about four acres of ground, and an average of 125 hands are employed. The machinery is driven by an engine of 100 horse-power, and the shops are heated by steam and lighted by the Edison system of incandescent electric light, and are provided in all parts with automatic sprinklers. One feature, rare in manufactories of agricultural implements, is that these works have never, since the company was organized in Batavia, for one day been closed for want of something to do. The company has also invented important improvements in sulky hay rakes, for which patents are pending, and having added this class of implements to their business are now engaged in the extensive manufacture and distribution of the same.

George Wiard, the organizer and head of the Wiard Plow Company, is a self-made and representative business man of Western New York. His parents were William and Lucinda (McLaughlin) Wiard, early settlers of Western New York, and for several years in East Avon, where his father engaged in manufacturing. In 1820 he removed to Canada, and was the first to manufacture cast-iron plows in that country. He resided there until his death in 1841; his wife also died there in 1864.

George Wiard was born in Canada in 1833. When 15 years of age he went to Buffalo and learned the trade of molder, and thus gained a practical knowledge of the requirements of the business he was to follow, and has so successfully developed. He has been a resident of Genesee or Livingston counties since 1854. Losses from fire, several times, have only resulted in renewed energy and perseverance, until at last a model establishment is the result. Mr. Wiard is also closely identified with the growth and development of the village. He has been an active and influential member of the board of education for many years, serving as its president for four terms. He was one of the organizers of the Genesee County Permanent Loan and Building Association, serving as president for 10 years. He was one of the commissioners appointed to build the water works. To religion, charity, and works of benevolence Mr. Wiard is a cheerful giver, he and his family being connected with the Baptist Church.

Mr. Wiard has an honorable record of service during the late war. He enlisted in the 129th Regt. N. Y. Vols. in 1862. This regiment subsequently was changed to the 8th N. Y. H. A. In a battle before Petersburg Mr. Wiard received a wound by which he was confined to the hospital, from where he was ordered to Washington to instruct fresh troops. He was on the staff of Gen. Hardin and Gen. Haskins, commanding defences of Washington. He was inspector of artillery until the close of the war, after which he had charge of dismantling forts south of the Potomac, and was finally transferred to the 4th N. Y. H. A., being a captain in that regiment when mustered out in October, 1865. In 1856 Mr. Wiard married Miss Emeline Warren, of East Avon. She died in 1870, and in 1872 he was married to Miss Isabella Warren, also of East Avon, and they are parents of five children, viz.: May, Louis, Ernest, Henry, and Harry.

After the close of the war he had charge of dismantling the forts around Washington, north of the Potomac, and was mustered out in October, 1865. He then resumed his business life, engaging in mercantile trade in his native county, but removed to Minnesota, engaging in the manufacture of farming implements until he became a member of the Wiard Plow Co. in 1871, where his knowledge of the requirements essential to the sale of farming implements has redounded to the benefit of the company. He has been largely interested in real estate operations; has opened up an addition to Batavia on Central avenue, Pringle and Wood streets, and the section where the new Union School is located. He is also a large owner of plantation property in Florida, where he is engaged in cultivating orange and lemon groves. In all the enterprises to promote the growth of Batavia he is a valued counselor and a liberal contributor.

Mr. Hough formed a matrimonial alliance, in 1866, with Miss Jennie Young, of Cayuga County, and they have two children, Arthur G. and Edward W.

Julian J. Washburn, secretary of the Wiard Plow Company, was born in Randolph, Vt., in 1842. He came of old Puritan stock, being a direct descendant of the Rev. Robert Cushman, who first obtained the charter of the ship Mayflower, and of his son, Thomas Cushman, and Mary Allerton, both of whom came to Plymouth on the first voyage. Mr. Washburn was educated in the grammar schools of his native State, and became a teacher, pursuing that vocation until September, 1802, when he joined the 15th Regt. Vt. Vols. (Col. Redfield Proctor), and served during its term of enlistment. He was then employed as clerk in the U. S. Hospital Department until the close of the war, when he engaged in agricultural pursuits and teaching until 1870, being officially connected with various agricultural and literary associations during the time. He next engaged in commercial pursuits, going to Boston, Mass., in October, 1870, and spending most of the time in traveling for the seven succeeding years. In 1877 he became a resident of Batavia, and has ever since been connected with the Wiard Plow Co., of which he has been a trustee, and the secretary since May, 1880. In this time he has also served both as trustee and president of the village of Batavia. Mr. Washburn is a genial and cultivated gentleman, and an honored and respected addition to the social and business element of the county.

He was married, in 1866, to Martha K. Bigelow, daughter of the late Hon. Abel Bigelow, of Brookfield, Vt. They have two children, Edward A., a counselor at law, and Mary V., at present a pupil in the Union School of Batavia. The family attends the Presbyterian church, and takes the greatest interest in all that pertains to the moral and intellectual advancement of the community.

The Batavia Wheel Company was organized May 13, 1887, by Frank Richardson, William W. Leavenworth, Dr. W. C. Gardiner, A. M. Colt, E. E. Leavenworth, Mrs. Mary E. Richmond, Mrs. A. R. Kenny, Moses E. True, John M. Sweet, and James R. Colt. The capital stock was placed at $50,000, and the following officers were elected: Frank Richardson, president; Dr. W. C. Gardiner, vice-president; William W. Leavenworth, secretary; A. M. Colt, treasurer; and John M. Sweet, superintendent. The business was originally inaugurated in 1880, by Colt Brothers & True. The works were located at Exchange Place, and were burned in January, 1886. Upon the organization of the present company grounds were secured on Walnut street, adjoining the Central Railroad tracks, consisting of 254 feet on Walnut street and 478 feet on the railroad. Upon those grounds spacious buildings were erected, consisting of a main building 40x150 feet, three stories in height, with brick engine and boiler rooms, and other buildings consisting of a hub room 40x20 feet, storage and coal sheds, etc., and a handsome office building. A switch from the Central tracks connects the manufactory with ample transportation facilities. The machinery is propelled by a 60-horsepower engine, and the firm employs an average of 40 workmen, and turns out from 50 to 75 sets of wheels per day. The wheels manufactured by the firm are Sweet's concealed band and the True shell band, which rank as the best in the world and find a ready sale all over the United States and Australia. The firm also manufactures various other hardware specialties. The plant is a model of its kind, and cost, with machinery, about $40,000.

Frank Richardson, the president of the Batavia Wheel Co., is a native of Saratoga County, where he was born in 1851. His father was a railroad contractor, and this business was followed by the son, who was connected with the construction of various lines of road in this country. He next engaged in the hardware trade in Watertown, and in October, 1886, purchased the stock of Volz Brothers, hardware merchants, of Batavia. Three months later he lost his stock of goods by fire. He then organized the company of which he is president, and is devoting his exclusive attention to the management of this progressive manufactory. Mr. Richardson was united in marriage, in 1883, with Miss Emma P. Johnson, who died October 25, 1888, leaving one child, Rufus J.

Since entering the service of the Batavia Wheel Company he has served as secretary. His wife's maiden name was Miss Ida Barber.

Alva M. Colt, treasurer of the Batavia Wheel Co., was born in Warsaw, N. Y., in 1842, and is a son of Joseph R. and Sarah A. (Phelps) Colt, who moved to Darien in 1853. Learning the trade of blacksmith in Warsaw Alva W. followed this calling from 1859 to 1880, in Erie and Genesee counties. In 1869 he came to Batavia, where he has since resided. He was a member of the firm of Foster & Colt, and in 1880 a partner of the Batavia Clamp Co. He is a Republican, a member of the Masonic order, and a member of the Presbyterian Church. He married Elizabeth C. Wheeler, of Hamilton, N. Y., and they have one son, Charles.

The New York Lumber and Wood Working Company is now one of the leading manufacturing industries of Batavia. In 1884 the Batavia Manufacturing Company was formed, with a capital stock of $200,000. This firm was soon changed to the Batavia Sewing Machine Company, the capital stock authorized to be increased to $300,000, and they contracted to manufacture the Post combination sewing machine. During the summer of 1884 the company erected, near the eastern boundary line of the village, a brick building, 60x300 feet, three stories in height, with an engine-house attached. The cost was about $40,000. Financial embarrassment prevented the execution of the plans of the company, and in 1885 the building became the property of the New York Lumber and Wood Working Co., formerly the New York Wood Turning Co., of New York city. This company has a capital stock of $100,000, all owned by New York parties, where the principal office is located—173 Broadway. The officers of the company are W. C. Andrews, president; George P. Smith, vice-president; Lewis Coon, secretary; and O. P. Shaffer, treasurer. C. Honeck is superintendent of the manufactory, and W. H. Sidway is the local financial representative. The company employs on an average 150 workmen, and its principal market is New York city. The work produced by the company consists of all kinds of decorative and cabinet work for house finishing, besides a vast variety of fancy furniture, wood turning, molding, carving, etc. The machinery is of the latest improved pattern, and the establishment is a model of its kind. The building is protected from fire by the automatic water system. The business of the firm is fast increasing, and their force is now working 10 hours per day throughout the year.

W. H. Sidway, who is the financial manager of the Batavia office of the New York Lumber and Wood Working Co., is a native of Buffalo. His business experience began as a reporter for the Express of his native city. In 1886 he became a clerk in the New York office of his present company, and was subsequently promoted to his present position. Mr. Sidway is a young man possessing fine business qualities, and represents his corporation with energy and fidelity.

Charles H. Honeck, superintendent of the New York Lumber and Wood Working Co., is a native of Prussia, and immigrated to America in 1856. He learned the trade of cabinetmaker in New York, and evincing an aptitude for art designing entered the Plassman School of Art in New York city, and was graduated therefrom. He subsequently became the superintendent for Brooks & Co., of Brooklyn, retaining that position three years, and also had charge of the establishment of R. W. Myers, cabinetmaker and interior decorator, for three years. He was then placed in charge of the works of his present employers, in New York city, and since 1887 has been superintendent of the Batavia works.

The Syracuse Forging and Gun Company removed their plant from Syracuse to Batavia in the spring of 1889. This company began business in the manufacturing of an improved fifth wheel for wagons, and finally added the manufacture of the new Baker gun. They are located in the old brick school building on Liberty street, and with additions made by them have in use about 20,000 square feet of flooring, and one and one-half acres of ground. The motive power is supplied by three engines aggregating 75 horse-power, and an average of 100 men are regularly employed. An electric light plant furnishes 150 lights for their use. The fifth wheel manufactured by them is a combination of valuable patents, and ranks as a leader in the trade. The new Baker gun is the invention of W. H. Baker, the general superintendent of the company. It is a breech-loading, double barrelled shot gun, manufactured in many different weights, and about 5,000 are sold annually at a list price of $30 each. The market for the gun extends all over the United States. The business of the company will exceed $175,000 annually. Dr. E. L. Baker is the president of the company; Ralph Helm, of Syracuse, vice-president; W. T. Mylcrane, secretary and treasurer; and W. H. Baker, general superintendent. The capital stock is $60,000.

The Batavia Preserving Company was originally started by John Pier-son in 1879, who began canning fruits and vegetables at Bushville. He supplied himself with all the modern appliances of the trade, but owing to want of attention to the details was not pecuniarily successful. In 1881 the Bank of Batavia became the owner of the establishment, and the business was conducted by it one season at Bushville. In 1882 Sprague, Warner & Co., of Chicago, the present proprietors, purchased the establishment and conducted the business. In the spring of 1883 they removed to the corner of School and Liberty streets, in the old school-house, then a manufactory of engines. The business as conducted by the present company is very successful. All kinds of fruits and vegetables common to this locality are put up in glass or tin, the latter being manufactured on the premises. From 175 to 350 hands are employed, and 1,350,000 cans are put up in a season. The business increased so rapidly that the company was forced to erect larger and more convenient buildings, and in May, 1888, they moved to the new quarters on Mill street. The main building is 50x209 feet, with wings 80x35 and 40x60 feet. The motive power is furnished by a 70-horse-power engine. This company has also a branch at Spencerport, Monroe County, where 200 persons are employed during the busy season, producing about 500,000 cans.

in 1860. He became connected with the firm in 1884, and in 1886 was appointed to his present position. He is deserving of the confidence reposed in him.

Breweries and malt-houses.—In 1827 a brewery and malt-house was built by Libbeus Fish on what is now Elm street, on the present site of A. H. King's malt-house. It was a wooden building of small capacity, though sufficient for the demands of the place and vicinity at that time. From time to time the capacity of the establishment was increased to meet the demands of the trade, till in 1860 it was capable of turning out 8,000 barrels annually. It was conducted by Libbeus Fish until 1835, when Eli H. Fish, his son, became proprietor, and he continued the business till 1862. In that year he disposed of the establishment to Boyle & Smith, who carried it on as a brewery till the autumn of 1864, when it reverted to Mr. Fish. In January, 1865, it was burned. In the summer of the same year a malt-house was erected on the site by Mr. Fish, who conducted it till 1871, when R. A. Maxwell (now State superintendent of insurance) became a partner. In a year's time that firm was succeeded by Maxwell & Ensign. In December, 1872, the buildings were again burned, and in 1873 again rebuilt by Mr. Fish. Soon afterwards A. H. King became a partner with Mr. Fish. The firm continued until 1876, when the interest of Mr. Fish was purchased by King & Son. In May, 1883, the establishment was again burned, but was at once rebuilt by King & Son, with about double its previous capacity, and with all modern improvements. About 80,000 bushels of barley are annually converted into malt in this establishment, and the barley crop of the county is the principal one. Mr. King became sole owner in 1886. Upton & Warner have conducted the business since. The cost of the building is $26,000. New York and Boston are the principal ports of sale.

A. H. King, a native of Monroe County, was reared upon a farm, and has always been engaged in handling agricultural productions. He was for many years a large dealer in grain and wool in his native county, and during the late war was an extensive dealer in oats, which he furnished the government. He has served as supervisor in Monroe County for eight years, and for five years was superintendent and weighmaster on the Erie Canal.

In 1857 Eli H. Fish built spacious ale vaults on the site of the brewery above noted, which were used as such till 1870, when they were converted into a brewery, which was conducted by different parties from time to time till 1880, when William Gamble purchased the property and suc-essfully operated it till 1887, when the buildings were burned. Their capacity was 4,500 barrels annually. Mr. Gamble now confines his attention to bottling beer, handling ale, and retailing liquors, at 508 East Main street.

In 1850 John Eagar purchased the old stone church (built in 1827 by the Methodists) on West Main street. This he converted into a brewery, using it as such till 1862, when it was burned out. He then erected, on the south side of the street (opposite), a large brick building, which has been used as a brewery and wholesale liquor store from that time. The size of the building is 50x125 feet, three stories high, with basement. After the burning out of the old stone building it was re-roofed and fitted up as a malt-house. Mr. Eagar died in 1869, but the business is still carried on under the firm name of Eagar & Co., composed of John F. V., H. B., and W. T. Eagar, and Mrs. Emily M. Whitcomb, and they are agents for Syracuse ale. After the destruction by fire of the Fish malt-house, on Elm street, in 1872, R. A. Maxwell and H. J. Ensign erected a new malt-house on Union street, near West Main street. It was of concrete, three stories high, 100x140 feet. They conducted a malting business until 1881, when Craft & Caldwell purchased the business and have carried it on since, malting 35,000 bushels of barley per year.

The Batavia Brewing Company was organized November 1, 1889, with William Hooker, president, and William Gamble, manager. A building 40x60 feet, three stories in height, and an extension, will be used for the business. It is expected that 10,000 barrels of ale and porter will be manufactured annually.

House's bottling works are located on West Main street.

Callender's crayon factory was started in 1887, on Jackson street. Oil, lithographic, and lumber crayons are manufactured.

Giddings's cigar factory is located on Main street and employs four hands.

J. F. Garnier's cigar factory is located over 90 Main street. It was started in 1884, and now makes 15,000 cigars per month.

The Batavia Steam Laundry, located at 202 East Main street, was established by Mrs. Nettie Showerman, October 7, 1889. It has all the modern appliances for doing first-class work.

Ellicott street roller-mills, of Batavia, were erected by Frank G Moulton in the summer of 1889. The structure is 60x40 feet, five stories high, and from foundation to roof is symmetrically and substan-
Genesee County.

The motive power is furnished by a 60-horse-power steam engine. All the machinery is of the latest patent's and the best manufactured. A requirement in the contract between Mr. Moulton and the builder was that the mills should be capable of doing as good work as any on the American continent. These mills have a capacity of 100 barrels of flour per day. They were constructed with anticipations of doubling their capacity. The business is now conducted under the firm name of Parsons & Co., with Mr. Moulton as the chief proprietor and factor in the firm.

The Batavia Gas and Electric Light Company was organized as the Batavia Gas Light Company in 1855, with a capital of $32,500. The first directors were George Brisbane, D. W. Tomlinson, G. B. Worthington, S. C. Holden, Alva Smith, Frank Chamberlin, and R. Merrifield. D. W. Tomlinson was president, secretary, and treasurer, and W. H. Tompkins, superintendent. The works, located on Ellicott street, near the Erie Railroad freight depot, were completed in the autumn. The gas holder at that time had a capacity of 13,500 feet. There were 150 consumers and 20 street lamps. In 1878 a new holder, with a capacity of 35,000 feet, was built. From the first construction of the works the consumption of gas has steadily increased, till now over 400 consumers and 124 street lamps are supplied. The mains have been extended from two miles to seven miles. Early in 1885 new works were erected for the manufacture of gas from crude petroleum. The gas so manufactured is of a better quality and cheaper in price. In 1886 the company augmented their plant by introducing a dynamo for electric light, using both the Jenny and Brush systems. The present officers are Wilber Smith, president; A. N. Cowdin, secretary and treasurer; and Alexander Wyne, superintendent, he succeeding Mr. Tompkins.

They manufacture the Schad and other carriage wheels. The superiority of the Schad wheel consists of its locked spoke in an iron jacket, with its heavy shoulder resting wholly on the wooden hub, making it especially desirable for stone pavements. The company contemplates manufacturing on a large scale this superior wheel.

In September, 1888, D. K. Chaddock opened up a spacious livery stable at No. 8 State street. He keeps from 15 to 20 horses. He is also owner and proprietor of the Pratt mills at Indian Falls, and is a dealer in horses. He resides on the corner of Ellicott avenue and Mix Place.

Y., prior to 1860. The Doctor made his own pill-boxes, and invented his machinery and tools. After Dr. Palmer's death the business was carried on by his children in a small way until 1883, when it was moved to Batavia. In 1889 E. N. Rowell, finding the old plant inadequate to his business, took in E. G. Buell, and they purchased a new outfit of machinery and moved into larger quarters, using both plants, to which they are constantly adding new machinery for further enlargement of the business. E. N. Rowell has invented many new boxes for the drug trade, some of which are now made and quoted by every box factory in the United States and Canada. So many new things are being made that it is often called the Novelty Manufacturing Company. Their goods are shipped into every State in the Union and to Canada.

Anson Higley.—The pioneer settlers of Genesee County and their children are rapidly passing away, and in a few years all will have been gathered to their fathers. But they have a no more worthy representative living in this county than Anson Higley.

John Higley, the eldest child of Jonathan Higley and Katherine Brewster, his wife, was born in Surrey, England, 30 miles southwest of London, July 22, 1649. When of suitable age he was apprenticed to a glover in London for the period of his minority. Family tradition says that, in his seventeenth year, he incurred the displeasure of his master, who promised him a severe flogging the next morning. To escape the lash, and perhaps to satisfy a longing for adventure, or actuated by the worthier motive of becoming a free citizen of the new and promising land which he no doubt had read and heard of much, he hastily bundled up his scanty wardrobe, and concealed himself in a vessel which was about to sail for America. In due time he landed at the trading post of Windsor, on the Connecticut River, and there he found employment. In 1671 he married Hannah Drake, daughter of a prominent citizen of the place; soon after purchased a home, and became in time one of the most prominent in the colony. In 1690 he was commissioned a lieutenant, and was afterward promoted to the post of captain. He was elected to the General Assembly of Connecticut in 1689, and afterwards elected to 28 of the 37 sessions of that body. He was the father of 16 children. This runaway boy, John Higley, is the sole ancestor of all who bear the name in America.

In 1808 Isaac Higley, Sr., (the grandfather of Anson,) with his brother Eber, (who was in the War of 1812, taken prisoner, and died in Halifax,) and Isaac, Jr., came to Elba and settled on Spring Creek. There were seven children, of whom Isaac, Jr., was the eldest and the only son. The daughters were Abbie, wife of Elias Pettibone, the father of Col. Elias J.; Ruth, wife of Squire Daniel Mills, an old justice of Elba; Adah, wife of Zebulon Woodruff, of Elba; Anna, wife of Samuel Lampson, of Onondaga County; Hannah, wife of William Knapp; and Candace, wife of John Hawkins, of Alexander. The grandfather died in 1810, and was the first person buried in the old burying-ground in the southeast part of Elba.
Isaac Higley, the father of Anson, married, in Connecticut, Dorothy Killburn, and reared seven children, namely: Emily (Mrs. W. Holbrook), who died in Ohio; Horace, who died in Elba; Maria (Mrs. Isaac Tinkham), who also died in Ohio; Eber, who died in 1887 in Wisconsin; Isaac N., who died in Elba; Elvira (Mrs. Charles Ames), now of Seneca County, Ohio; and Anson. The father was a farmer in Elba from his settlement in 1808 until his death in 1829.

Anson Higley was born in Elba in 1811, and is one of the oldest living natives of the county. He followed farming in his native town for nearly 70 years, and has obtained by hard work and steady application a handsome property, which he has generously divided among his children. Since 1881 he has been a resident of Batavia, where he is enjoying a well earned rest from active labor. While a resident of Elba Mr. Higley was for several terms assessor and supervisor of his town, and was always in favor of improvements to the benefit of town and county. He was one of the first highway commissioners, and labored assiduously in establishing the roads of his section. He united in marriage, in 1837, with Lydia Newkirk, of Orange County, who died in 1858. They had six children, viz.: Mary, wife of M. M. Brown, a leading attorney of Osage, Mitchell County, Iowa; Sarah E., wife of F. P. In 1875 Mr. Higley was united in marriage with Lizzie Cassidy, a native of Vermont. They are active members of the Baptist Church, and are liberal contributors to its support. Mr. Higley is still interested in farming, and in all the relations of life has borne himself conscientiously, uprightly, and honorably. He is a man of genial personality, of superior mental attributes, and a kindly, Christian gentleman.

Mr. Hopkins, grandfather of James, was of the old Puritan stock, and at the time of the French and Indian war suffered for the necessaries of life. It is told of him that prices for inferior provisions at that time were enormous: for one-quarter of a dog five shillings and sixpence were paid; for a dog's head two shillings and sixpence; horse flesh was nearly two shillings per pound; even cats, rats, and mice were used for food. A pound of tallow was worth four shillings. William S. Hopkins married Prudence E. Jones, of Batavia, and they have two children, Robert J. and Eliza. He is now a resident of Buffalo, being engaged in the malleable iron works at Black Rock. Robert N. Hopkins is a farmer on road 63, where he has lived for 29 years.

Hector Humphrey was born in Marcellus, Onondaga County, N. Y., December 25, 1809. When a young man he came to Batavia with his brother Bissell, who was proprietor of the old Eagle tavern. He assisted his brother in the hotel and stage business. He married Hannah M. He has built many of the finest residences in the county, and also does work in Rochester, Buffalo, and surrounding towns. Henry B. Homelius, son of Henry B., was born 1830, and came to America when six years of age. He married Catherine Knight, settled in Batavia in 1856, and is engaged in contracting and building.
Dr. Horace S. Hutchins, son of Asa and Lydia (Willis) Hutchins, was born in the village of Manlius, Onondaga County, N. Y., January 5, 1829. The father, a descendant of sturdy New England stock, was one of the early and efficient pioneers in the early settlement of the central part of this State. He died in Genesee County, October 1, 1871. The mother is from a long-lived family, and the oldest of a family of children each of whom lived to the age of 80 years. She married successively two brothers, and by each husband reared two sons and one daughter: Oramel, Loren, and Lure Ann; Sophia, Horace S., and Harvey. Dr. Hutchins's early life was spent upon the farm and in attending the district school winters, receiving such knowledge as they afforded a half century past. At the age of 16 he commenced his academic work in Hamilton Academy in Madison County, N. Y., pursuing a four years' course of preparatory study, which enabled him to enter Madison University, from which institution he graduated and secured the degrees of A. B. and M. A. in course. He was teacher of mathematics in the Ladies' Seminary of Hamilton two years, and principal of Peterboro Academy one year, during which time, having formed a taste for the study of medicine, and obtaining from many able physicians a good practical knowledge of therapeutics, he naturally developed the faculties necessary for the course he marked out for himself, and to which profession he has since devoted his energies and life. At the age of 25, seeking to restore his health and to learn something of the world, he set out on an ocean voyage to the West Indies, Central America, across the Isthmus, along the route of the Nicaragua Canal, up the San Juan River from Greytown to Castillo rapids; thence across Lake Nicaragua and the highlands of Gautemala to the Pacific Ocean; thence with the Coast Survey along the coasts of Mexico and California to San Francisco, landing there in the early years of the gold fever. For three years, and during his stay in Nevada City, he had charge of its school work, and also pursued the study and practice of medicine. He held various official positions in that city, whose foundations were laid in gold. It was during his visit and stay in California that he was one of many who engaged in that terrible struggle for supremacy between law and order, and the minions of overt criminality, when the famous Vigilance Committee assembled in hosts sufficient to awe and overpower the workers of crime. The powers of State were restored, society purified, and an example for good was inaugurated which has left its impress upon the whole Nation. It may not be out of place here to state, for a comparison, that the last professional act of Dr. Hutchins on the coast brought him the sum of $40 in gold, he being the recipient of that amount for a simple prescription, unsolicited on his part.

In June, 1857, he returned from California to Buffalo, N. Y., engaging in active business relations with his brother Harvey, and in September of the same year was married to Harriet M., daughter of Corrington Babcock, of Madison County, N. Y. In May, 1859, he moved to Batavia, taking up his old work—the practice of medicine. Visiting New York city the next year, and spending many months in review and study in the old and new schools of medicine, he graduated and returned to Batavia, where for the past 30 years he has faithfully and successfully labored, obtaining a rank in the profession possessed only by the few, gaining the respect and confidence of those who are the recipients of his ministrations, and by his consistent conduct and steadfastness of purpose has gained the respect of the whole community. He has been one of the vice-presidents of the New York State Homeopathic Medical Society, and one of the censors of the same society for years; a member of the American Institute of Homeopathy 23 years; a member of the Western New York Medical Society since its formation; an alumnus of the New York Homeopathic Medical College Hospital Association; and a director and active worker in the banking interests of the village. For nearly 10 years he was president of the board of education, and an active and zealous promoter of the cause of education. Dr. Hutchins's children are Fanny A. and Eleanora, the latter the wife of Dr. John W. Le Seur. The family are earnest and devoted members of the Baptist Church, contributing generously to its growth and support.

Dr. John Wesley Le Seur (son of John Le Seur, now in his 85th year, and a minister of the Methodist Church in Vermont) was born in Hardland, Vt., in 1857. He was graduated in turn from the Fort Edward (N. Y.) Collegiate Institute, class of '77; Rochester University, class of '81; Rochester Theological Seminary, class of '84; and the Hahnemann Medical College of Philadelphia, class of '86. In 1885 he founded the Medical Institute of Philadelphia, to which he still contributes articles. He began to practice with Dr. Hutchins at Batavia in the spring of 1886. In 1887 he was appointed by Governor Hill one of the trustees of the Institution for the Blind at Batavia. During the same year and the succeeding one he was town physician, and is now jail physician. Dr. Le Seur for three years has been president of the Philharmonic Club in Batavia. He is a member of the American Institute of Homeopathy and the Western New York Homeopathic Medical Society. His family consists of a wife, formerly Miss Eleanora Hutchins, daughter of Dr. Hutchins, and two children. He belongs to the Baptist Church, and is also an active member of the Young Men's Christian Association. Dr. Le Seur is regarded as one of the most skilled physicians in the place, and commands a lucrative practice.

At one time (about 1825) he kept the American Hotel. He died in 1871, aged 84 years. He was father to Richard O. Holden, who was born March 5, 1814, in a log house on the farm owned by W. H. G. Post. have been born to him, the elder of whom came to an untimely death by drowning in the summer of 1881. Although belonging to what is called the "old school," he readily recognizes the merits of other systems of medicine, and is keenly alive to all that is progressive and valuable in professional investigation.

Hon. Edward C. Walker, son of Cyrus, was born in Byron, June 14, 1837. His grandfather, Amasa Walker, who was born in Ashford, Conn., in 1767, came to Byron with his family in 1811, when Cyrus was but 12 years of age. Genesee County at this time was mainly a dense and heavy forest. Here this hardy pioneer located, and by thrift and industry a good home was secured in the new Genesee country. Their unmistakable English ancestry can be clearly traced to Plymouth Colony, Mass., and is distinguished for strength of mind, high aims and purposes, industry, and unyielding perseverance. Cyrus Walker united in marriage with Anna Hulette, of Byron, in December, 1822. They were industrious, economical, hardy, possessed sound judgment, sterling integrity, and were very successful.

Senator E. C. Walker, their fifth and youngest child, was a studious youth, and fortunately had the very best early advantages to acquire a thorough literary and business education, which he wisely improved. At an early age Mr. Walker was a student at the Cary Seminary of Oakfield, and later pursued his studies at Wilson Academy, Niagara County, and graduated in June, 1861, at Genesee College, in Lima, N. Y., now Syracuse University. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1862. His large and varied business interests have demanded a great portion of his time, and left but little for the practice of his profession. He has been an extensive traveler through both America and foreign countries. Senator Walker has been a citizen of Batavia since 1862, and has been active in promoting the general interest and improvements of the town. He has responded nobly to the cause of benevolence and charity, and is especially generous to home and foreign missions. He has served some years as trustee of the New York Institution for the Blind at Batavia, and trustee of Syracuse University; is now a trustee of Ingham University at LeRoy, and of the Y. M. C. A. of Batavia. He has also been commissioner of Auburn Theological Seminary. Later he was a delegate to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States. He has been a director of the Bank of Batavia most of the time since 1870, and was also a director of the Holland Purchase Fire Insurance Company. His political life began with his election to the Assembly of the State of New York in 1868, which position he held two years, and was chairman of the important committee of public education, which reported many bills that became laws that improved the State system of public instruction. In 1885 he was elected State Senator from the 30th senatorial district, composed of the counties of Genesee, Livingston, Niagara, and Wyoming. He was honorably recognized by being appointed chairman of the important committees of banks and the manufacture of salt, and was also a member of the committees of railroads, insurance, and engrossed bills. He was reelected in 1887 by an increased plurality of 859 over the previous election in 1885. In the last Senate (1889) he was chairman of the committee on railroads, a member of the committee on general laws, and of several others. It also fell to the lot of Senator Walker to be placed on the committee to investigate the corrupt ring that procured the franchise of the Broadway Surface Railway Company of the city of New York. This committee did good work. In doing their whole duty they built for themselves a monument for integrity and virtue that will endure in history when granite and marble will have crumbled to dust. The committee relentlessly pursued and shattered the corrupt ring, exposed the gigantic fraud, and brought the guilty perpetrators to condign punishment.

As a legislator Senator Walker is industrious, and his object is always "the best interests of the people." Among the bills that he introduced which became laws were a number improving the banking system of the State; the motor power bill, authorizing street service railroads to change from horse to any other power, after obtaining the consent of the majority of the property owners along the line of the roads, and the consent of the railroad commissioners; and the bill which prevents assignees from giving to preferred creditors more than one third of the estate. He also introduced the marriage license bill, which would prevent ill-timed marriages, protect the clergy, and provide a more perfect record for tracing the estates of children. This bill passed the Senate twice, and it is hoped that the day is not far distant when it will become a law in this State. For this Mr. Walker has received complimentary letters from Bishop Doane and other prominent clergymen, and, also from prominent judges and attorneys throughout the State, who appreciate the importance of such a law. Senator Walker is known throughout his State, and is highly respected as a gentleman of sterling integrity, and as a safe and careful law-maker. He is a good organizer, and a forcible and logical speaker who goes direct to the issue and "hews to the line." In January, 1890, he was selected by the Hon. William! Windom, Secretary of the Treasury, one of three commissioners to locate the government and postoffice building at Buffalo. He wears his honors modestly, which he character and mind richly deserve; and as a Christian gentleman and representative man he is widely known and highly respected.

January 14, 1861, he was united in marriage with Martha Marsh, of Lockport, N. Y., a highly cultivated lady of a cultivated family, and a sister of the eminent scientist, Prof. O. C. Marsh, of Yale College. Mr. and Mrs. Walker are parents of two sons, Edward C., Jr., and Raymond Marsh. This Christian family are members of the Presbyterian Church.

James M. Walkinshaw, a popular druggist and baker, is a native of Batavia, and was born in 1840, a son of James and Isabella (Pattison) Walkinshaw, natives of Scotland, who came to America in 1839. They located in Batavia, where he pursued his trade as a baker until his death in 1851. He was employed by B. C. Page, who started the bakery now owned by Baker & Walkinshaw, in 1835. James M. learned the trade, and in 1869, with Lucius Baker, purchased the business, and they have conducted it since under the firm name of Baker & Walkinshaw. In 1874 Mr. Walkinshaw added to his business interests a full line of drugs, medicines, and fancy toilet goods, and in this branch has secured a large trade. The prescription department is under the charge of a competent pharmacist. His place of business, at 63 East Main street, is central and attractive. Mr. Walkinshaw has served as alderman from his ward, and as chief engineer of the fire department. He was married, in 1861, to Martha Winn, of Batavia. Their only child, Onis, is deceased.

William C. Watson is a gentleman of fine physique and commanding presence. His life has been that of a leader, and his face bears the impression of his character. He has gone down to the very substratum of the principles of the law, and his opinion has almost judicial weight. The year 1837 marked the opening of his career in the little village of Pembroke, in Genesee County. He is not a college-trained man. His early opportunities were limited. His father tried cases in justices' courts, and from him the son imbibed a love for the profession. A short period was spent at the seminary at Alexander, and Col. James M. Willett gave him a start in law study. Next he is found in the office of Wakeman & Bryan, and in 1865 he was admitted to the bar. He practiced for a short time with Mr. Tyrrell and later with Hon. Seth Wakeman. For some 15 years he has done business alone. Mr. Watson was the only Republican supervisor elected in many years. He was twice district attorney, and in 1882 was candidate for member of Congress. He frequently goes to State conventions. Mr. Watson has been on the board of education a number of times, and has contributed largely to manufacturing industries locating in Batavia. The name of John H. Yates, for the past few years, has appeared in connection with a class of homely, popular ballads, which fairly entitles him to a prominent place among American poets. He was born November 21, 1837. He is a native of Batavia, of English parentage, and therefore possesses the simplicity of manners common to that class of people. His mother was a schoolmistress, and from her he inherited his literary taste. His education was not very extensive, taking in only the common English branches, and much of his time since early boyhood has been spent as clerk, yet he is well informed on general subjects, and does good service as licensed preacher of the Methodist Church, of which he is a member. His active work as assistant editor of the Progressive Batavian, with which he has been connected for four years, brings him in contact with all classes of men, the better fitting him for the exercise of his excellent taste in subjects for poetry. He has written for the Rochester Sunday Morning Times, the Batavian, Harper's Weekly, and Harper's Bazaar, and his "Old Man Ballads" (as they are called), "The Old Man in the New Church," "The Old Man in the Stylish Church," "The Old Man in the Model Church," and "Goin' West to Die" will ever appeal to the finer feelings and sympathies of all who inherit the love and respect of the aged.

Park Place School.1—Among the leavening influences of the village of Batavia, and, in fact, of the county, must be prominently included the Park Place School, whose incipient steps were so faithfully watched and cared for by its founder, Mrs. Ellen A. K. Hooker, who has so happily impressed her influence on all its pupils and students whose good fortune it has been to be under her guidance; and who now is in charge of the lady students of Cornell University; and to whom, being so prominently connected with Sage College as principal, those interested in the higher education of women look with great confidence. The school was founded September 11, 1884, and was organized with a college graduate in each position in its faculty; and its design was to prepare young ladies for entrance into the most advanced colleges for ladies in the country. It is now presided over by Miss Mary J. Stephens, who maintains its high standing, and who is a lady of culture and refinement.

BERGEN.

BERGEN is situated in the northeastern part of the county, is the eastern town of the northern tier, and contains 17,289 acres of land. It is a portion of the triangular tract, described as sold to Le Roy and others from the Morris Reserve; it also has two tiers of lots from the Connecticut tract, on the west side of the town. The town was erected from Batavia, June 8, 1812, then including the present town of Byron, which was set off in 1820, leaving Bergen in its present form.

The soil is a very rich, fertile, and level farming land, with slight undulations and inclinations towards the north, and is gravelly with clayey loam. Black Creek flows easterly through the town, just north of the center, which, with its tributaries flowing from every direction, renders the entire territory of the town a well-watered, desirable section, and to its abundance, excellence may be added. Its agricultural interests excel, because of its advantages, and wheat, barley, beans, and potatoes are its main products in the order named.

Those who came from Killingworth, Conn., prior to 1810 settled between Bergen Corners and Fort Hill. They were Josiah Pierson and his five brothers,—Simeon, John, Philo, Linus, and Russell,—David Franklin and his four brothers,—Ishi, Sylvanus, Daniel, and Reuben,—Harvey Kelsey, Capt. Daniel Kelsey, Uriah, Martin, and Charles Kelsey, Josiah Buell, Jesse Griswold, Thomas Stevens, Daniel Stevens, Job

The first church organization was established in December, 1807. The first Congregational religious society was organized January 25, 1808, at the house of Dea. John Ward. The first temperance society was established in 1826, with only six members—Rev. Josiah Pierson, Rev. Herman Halsey, Dea. Pitman Wilcox, Dea. John Spencer, H. E. Evarts, and Henry D. Gifford. The first religious meeting on the Sabbath was at the log house of David Franklin, and the first sermon preached in the town was in Mr. Franklin's barn by Rev. Calvin Ingalls, a missionary. The first school was taught by Harvey Kelsey, a graduate of Yale College. Titus Wilcox taught the second school, and Joshua Field the third. Chloe Wright, daughter of Dea. Benjamin Wright, was the first female teacher, Lucy Hill was the second, and Betsey Pierson was the third. The first marriage was that of Isaac Wallace and Susannah Brooks, at the house of Dr. Levi Ward, and by Judge Ezra Platt, of Le Roy. Luther, son of Jedediah Crosby, was the first male child born in the town. The first female born was Louisa, daughter of Orange Throop, who became the wife of David Fancher. The first death was the child of Capt. Daniel Kelsey; the first death of an adult was Mr. Kelsey's wife, both dying the same year. The first frame house in the town was erected by Dr. Levi Ward, the second by Dea. Benjamin Wright. The first frame barn was built by David Franklin, the second by Dea. Wright. The first saw-mill in the town was erected by Jared Merrill, the second by Levi Bissell. The first store in Bergen was opened in 1808, by Dr. Levi Ward; the second in 1811, by Josiah Pierson; the third in 1812, by Titus Wilcox. The first inn opened in the town was in 1809, by Samuel Butler, and the first postmaster was Col. W. H. Ward. The first supervisor was Dr. Levi Ward, who held the office seven years. He died January 4, 1861, in his 90th year. The first road was opened in 1801, when the Lake road was surveyed and opened four rods wide from Le Roy to the lake. This road is now a very important one, upon which is the stone church, and is the principal street of Bergen village.

Hamilton Wilcox came to the town in 1808 from East Guilford, Conn. He taught school here at the age of 16, and was a successful teacher. When the call for troops was made in the winter of 1813-14 he left his school to take command of a company, to report at Buffalo, where he was when that "village" was burned. He was ordered to Black Rock in the night of December 30, 1813, as the enemy were crossing the river at that point. In the affray he received a bullet through his chest, lodging in his arm. Several days after he was brought back to Bergen. It was soon necessary to amputate his arm, from which he died January 25, 1814, aged 28 years.
This town has been devoted to the cause of religion, and can point with pride to 12 of its citizens who have been leaders of flocks in the cause of the Master. They are Revs. Josiah Pierson, A. C. Ward, F. De Ward, H. M. Ward, William H. Spencer, H. W. Pierson, D. D. H. Parmelee, Bela Fancher, Franklin Howe, William H. Evarts, C. Dibble, and W. Pierson.

Solomon and Levi Leach, brothers, whose names are among the early settlers, traded wives, Levi giving Solomon five gallons of whisky "to boot." In two weeks, being sick of his bargain, he gave Levi a horse to trade back. It is just to presume that the whisky in those "hard" days was the great incentive to this unusual occurrence.

The Presbyterian Church at North Bergen was organized November 18, 1823, by the following persons, who assembled at the home of Jonah Gurthrie: Rev. A. Darwin, Josiah Pierson, John T. Bliss, and David Fancher. It was denominated the Congregational Church of Bergen, Byron, and Clarendon. Its original membership was 21, and at a meeting held April 11, 1827, at the stone school-house, it was resolved to become a Presbyterian society and unite with the Rochester Presbytery. D. Fancher, Milton Bird, Thomas Templeton, and Daniel Robinson were elected the first ruling elders, and Milton Bird was ordained deacon. The first regular pastor was Rev. N. Clapp, who was ordained and installed February 25, 1827. On the 2d of April, 1829, the society was called after the postoffice of that time,—Lyme,—but in 1840 with the postoffice the name of North Bergen was appended to its religious title. In 1832 a framed church edifice was erected, neat and commodious, with a seating capacity of about 250, at a cost of nearly $10,000. The society numbers over 100 members, and Rev. Lindsey C. Rutter was the pastor as late as 1887. Rev. John R. Lewis is the present pastor.

North Bergen is a postoffice in the northwest corner of the town, containing a church, a store, two manufactories, and about 150 inhabitants.

Stone Church (p. o.) is in the southeastern portion of the town, on the Lake road, in direct line with Le Roy and Bergen villages. Good postoffice facilities are enjoyed by its inhabitants, who number about forty, and it contains one church, one store, and one manufactory. In 1828 Col. Norton S. Davis built a stone tavern, and kept it for some time.

West Bergen is still another postoffice in the west part of the town, on the Central Railroad, and has a store and shop, with a good community around it.

The Cold Spring Creamery, on road 8, is owned by a stock company, and managed by B. A. Walker. It uses the cream from 900 cows, making 400 pounds of butter per day in summer, which is sold in Buffalo, Rochester, and New York.
BERGEN is a pretty, flourishing, incorporated village, pleasantly situated on the N. Y. C. & H. R. Railroad between Rochester and Buffalo and is the principal village in the town, with a population of about 1,000—a trifle more than one-third of the town. It contains four churches, two hotels, 14 stores, one machine shop, two grain elevators, eight manufactories of different kinds, three blacksmith shops, one saw and planing-mill, two feed-mills, etc., and is one of the most healthy and pleasant hamlets of Western New York, enjoying all the facilities of daily mail and the advantages of the best of thoroughfares. This village has been unfortunate in being partially burned at two several times—January 16, 1866, and March 1, 1880; the last fire covered an area of five acres in the business portion, consuming elevators, stores, shops, offices, halls, hotel, dwellings, and barns, to the amount of over $120,000. Bert E. Hall A. L. Green, and George H. Church were severely burned in their endeavors to stay the progress of the fire and save property. The burned district was at once built up with substantial brick buildings, with a vigor and perseverance peculiar to the enterprise of the place, and the pride of the citizens in their neat village is commendable. The Bergen village officers are as follows: George H. Church, president; A. T. Southworth, treasurer; D. J. McPherson, clerk; trustees, T. J. Tone, two years, James Miller, one year, T. D. Richardson, one year. The board of education is composed as follows: George H. Church, president; L. D. Arnold, H. S. White; G. N. Buell, collector. The officers of the fire department are: James R. McKenzie, chief engineer; G. O. Emerson, president; M. F. Bergin, vice-president; D. S. Thompson, secretary; Michael Bower, treasurer; trustees, J. J. Snyder, D. A. Ide, James Whalen. Bergen Hose Company No. 1, 10 men, headquarters in Buell block: E. C. Snyder, foreman; E. D. Snyder, assistant foreman; equipments, hose cart and 400 feet hose. Bergen Engine Company No. 1, 30 men, headquarters in Buell block: Irving Ide, foreman; G. W. Sackett, assistant foreman; equipment, hand engine. The postoffice is located in the Southworth block on Lake street. M. H. Parmelee is the postmaster. He was appointed under the present administration and took charge of the office June 10, 1889. E. H. Parmelee is assistant postmaster and W. G. Woodworth, clerk.

The First Congregational Church of Bergen was organized in December, 1807, by Rev. John Lindsley and 13 others. At this time Bergen was Northampton. Levi Ward, Sr., and Benjamin Wright were the first deacons, and Levi Ward, Jr., the first clerk. The present church organization was perfected January 25, 1808, by the following persons, at the house of John Ward: Alexander White, John Gifford, Levi Ward, Sr., Benjamin Wright, Josiah Pierson, Simon Pierson, John Ward, Selah Wright, W. H. Munger, and Levi Ward, Jr. The first trustees were Alexander White, Simon Pierson, and Levi Ward, Jr. This church, excepting a Scotch church at Caledonia, is the oldest one west of the Genesee River. Rev. Allen Hollister was its first ordained minister, and was installed July 4, 1810. The church edifice was first situated on Cemetery
Hill, one mile south of its present location, where it was removed in the spring of 1854. Rev. A. O. Whiteman was pastor at the time of its removal. Although a Congregational Church strictly, it placed itself in the Presbytery on the accommodation plan soon after its organization, and so it remains to-day. It has a fine frame building that seats about 400 people, and its property is worth $10,000. It has never had missionary aid in support of its ministry. Its present pastor is Rev. J. R. Lewis.

The Second Congregational Church of Le Roy and Bergen is in the southeast part of Bergen, which has originated the postoffice "Stone Church" in the town. Sixteen persons in 1828, March 18th, met and organized the society. They chose S. Dibble and J. Ward, deacons, and Russell Pierson, David Byam, and Luther C. Pierson as assistants, and the five were to be a standing committee. Quite a number from the First Congregational Church united with this society by letter early in its existence. On September 24, 1828, a stone edifice was erected, which has perpetuated the name "Stone Church" to the present time, although in 1864 a fine frame edifice was built upon the site, which was dedicated in 1865. The first pastor was Rev. Elisha Mason, who accepted the call October 20, 1828. The church property is worth $4,000, its seating capacity about 250, and its membership about 65.

The First Roman Catholic Church of Bergen was erected in 1859. An organization had been effected prior to that date (about 1850), and meetings held from house to house. Rev. Father McGowan was mainly instrumental in the erection of the church, and for several years had the pastoral charge of the society. It is under the diocese of Buffalo, Bishop Ryan presiding. In 1883 the old church was torn down and the present edifice, more commodious and better, was erected, under the supervision of Father Maloy. It has a seating capacity of 400, cost $7,000, and is a fine frame edifice. It has not had a resident pastor during all these years, until Father O'Riley came in 1886. He was there 15 months. The Rev. Father H. H. Connery came in September, 1888, and now presides over the spiritual wants of the parish. He was born May 15, 1853, in County Derry, Ireland, and came to America July 22, 1875. He was educated at the Seminary of our Lady of the Angels, and placed in charge of the parish at Limestone, N. Y. He was there two years, at East Pembroke two years, and at Rexville, Steuben County, three years.

In June, 1872, a mission was organized in this town by Rev. E. L. Wilson, holding services in the M. E. Church and in David Hooper's hall. In March, 1874, Mrs. Cynthia L. Richmond presented the trustees of the parochial fund of the dioceos a deed of lot No. 65, as a memorial gift to her late husband, upon which the ceremony of laying the corner-stone was held June 6, 1874, by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Coxe, who conducted the dedicatory services January 6, 1875. The building, which was consecrated June 15, 1880, is a frame one, with a seating capacity of about 200. The society is small, and is supplied by Rev. A. A.
Brockway, of Attica, N. Y. It is called St. John's Church, and is situated on Rochester street. They have no settled rector.

The First Methodist Episcopal Church was organized April 5, 1831. The records of the society show that Rev. Reeder Smith founded a society prior to this date, which was called the "First Society of the M. E. Church of Bergen." A small plat of land, located on lot 120, in the town of Le Roy, on the 100,000-acre tract, was deeded to the society. It is said that the society was born in a revival meeting by itinerants, and was made part of the Scottsville circuit. The first place of worship was at the stone school-house, Bergen Corners, but the meetings were changed to the town-line school-house. A profitable season of meetings gave courage to build a church, and in 1838 an edifice, costing $1,000, was erected. In 1853 the society removed to the present site the former edifice, and beautified and enlarged it at a cost of over $2,000. In 1873 the society numbered 45 members and was a part of the Churchville circuit, but under the labors of Rev. T. E. Bell the membership in that year was swelled to 118 and 60 probationers, and a separate existence was created. In 1876 a parsonage was erected at a cost of $1,500, and August 3, 1882, the present elegant brick edifice, built in gothic style, was dedicated, with Rev. J. B. Countryman, pastor. Its value in dollars is at least $10,000, seating capacity 400, and the membership on January 1, 1887, was 132. It has two endowments—the Doolittle fund of $500, and that of Wickham Fields of 17 acres of his town-line farm. The present pastor is Rev. J. A. Smith. The Sunday-school numbers 200 members.

Wardville Lodge, No. 198, I. O. O. F.,—originally No. 412,—was organized September 19, 1849. Its founders were Dr. Andrews, Sr., F. T. Moseley, John Norton, E. B. Andrews, and H. S. Andrews. Fourteen members were initiated at the first regular meeting of the lodge. It is the oldest of its order in the county, having been sustained for 40 years, and is still strong in its old age. The first N. G. of this lodge was the elder Robert Andrews, M. D. Its books, regalia, furniture, etc., were lost in the fire of 1866, and again in the great fire of 1880, when Bergen suffered so greatly, its property was destroyed; still phenix-like, it has flourished, and has not missed any meetings during its adversity. The elegant rooms are now in the Carpenter block, and nearly 100 members enjoy the benefits of the fraternity. When the territory of Bergen was a wilderness Levi Ward, one of the pioneers, prepared a map of the land where Bergen is, and purposed to call it "Wardville." It somehow lost his adopted name as to the town, but it is kept in memoriam by the oldest and most prosperous order of the county. The lodge has a membership of about 40. The officers are: E. C. Snyder, N. G.; J. J. Snyder, V. G.; G. W. Grimes, recording secretary; Fred Lewellyn, permanent secretary; N. J. Davis, treasurer.

Bergen Lodge, No. 187, I. O. of G. T., was organized July 18, 1885, by the installment of the following officers: G. W. Parkerson, W. C. T.; Mrs. Lizzie Murray, W. V. T.; Richard Bassett, W. chaplain; William Gillett, W. secretary; Miss Clara Peck, W. A. secretary; Fremont Peck, W. F. secretary; Miss Stella Butler, W. treasurer; Samuel Bassett, W. marshal; Miss Rena Gordon, W. A. marshal; John Langham, W. O. guard; Bert Sackett, W. I. guard; Miss Ella Fenn, W. R. H. S.; Miss Emma Snyder, W. L. H. S.; Mrs. C. Clothier, P. W. C. T. The number of charter members was 29, and George E. Whittaker was elected lodge deputy for the first year. The lodge has been a very active and successful one, and numbers now nearly 100 members. Its influence for good is felt and respected. The place of meeting is in the Carpenter & McKenzie block.

Wilbur Fuller Post, No. 412, G. A. R., was organized October 13, 1883, with a charter membership of 16. The post occupies a fine suite of rooms in the Carpenter block, over Carpenter & Son's store. The charter members were William H. Randolph, H. C. Matoon, John Byrne, M. McFarlane, Jerry Feathers, William C. Kneale, Isaac Bristol, James A. Miller, Patrick Kerivan, H. W. Thompson, A. L. Preston, Benjamin Coxe, Murray Johnson, A. E. Wilbur, James A. Cooper, and Sidney Richmond. The post is a very strong and flourishing one for its age, and will hold its place with any other in the county. The present officers are as follows: H. F. Fordham, commander; E. M. Wilcox, S. V. C.; E. C. Day, J. V. C.; J. A. Miller, adjutant; J. D. Richard, Q. M.; M. W. Townsend, surgeon; J. T. Crittenden, chaplain; G. E. Wilber, O. D.; M. W. Lyman, O. G.; J. R. Emerson, S. M.; E. Howell, O. M. S.

Bergen Grange, No. 163, was organized in March, 1873. It had a charter membership of about 18 members. N. C. Johnson was its first master. For a few years they used the Odd Fellows hall. In 1878 they had one of their own, but were burned out at the big fire of 1880. After the Carpenter block was rebuilt they had their lodge room overhead until the fall of 1885, when they sold out to the G. A. R. Since then they have held their meetings at the homes of different members throughout the town. Its present membership is about 60.

The schools of the town are excellent, and 13 teachers are constantly employed in each school year. There are nine districts in the town, with a fine graded school in the village. The Union School building, which was erected in 1868, is located on Rochester street. The school is in a flourishing condition. The average daily attendance is about 140. Four instructors are employed, as follows: E. M. Crocker, principal; Miss Mary J. Russell, second grade; Miss Ella Wood, intermediate; Miss Maud Meyers, primary.

The early settlers were desirous of keeping abreast of the times, and took measures to foster their literary taste by organizing libraries, one such, called "Bergen Moral Library," being organized in 1815.

Doran's cider-mill was built in 1886 by Michael Doran. It is run by steam-power, and has a capacity of 30 barrels of cider per day. It is located on Munger street.
Aaron Arnold, eldest son of Enoch Arnold, of Berkshire County, Mass., was born November 3, 1781. He engaged in farming till of age, when he was a foreman for three years on the turnpike then being constructed between New York and Philadelphia. In 1806 he was married to Eliza, daughter of Amos Allen, of Canaan, Conn. In 1807 he came with his wife to this town—then Northampton—and began farming. He died March 28, 1843, and his wife survived till June 1, 1855. He filled in his day many offices of trust, being supervisor, etc., for a number of years. Three children were the result of the marriage, viz.: Charles G., born August 12, 1809, died April 17, 1841; Harriet, born July 18, 1816, married Alson Ostrander, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and died April 20, 1853; and George W., born July 18, 1822, who is the only survivor. He married Martha G., daughter of Aaron and Harriet Gifford, October 19, 1843, and is a resident of the village. They had one child, who was born February 12, 1848, is a resident of the town, and is a carpenter and joiner by vocation. George W. Arnold has given much attention to stock dealing in connection with his farming, and has been very successful. At the big fire in 1880 he lost nearly all his village property, and indeed has often been a sufferer by fire. Amos Allen, father of Mrs. Aaron Arnold, was a Revolutionary soldier, and at his death, in 1845, was the oldest pensioner in Genesee County.

Robert Andrews, M. D., third son of Robert Andrews, Sr., was born in Wheatland, Monroe County, N. Y., in 1836, and removed to Bergen in 1843 with his father. He received the advantages of a common school education. His father was a physician of large practice, which he retained till one year before his decease, in 1862. Dr. Andrews carried on the practice of his father, as a general practitioner, but has been very successful as a specialist in curing cancers. He is now in the midst of a profitable and wide-spread practice, and is 53 years old. He married Julia A., daughter of Joseph Beardsley, and they have four children now living—Lewis B., Charles H., Fred E., and Robert M. The eldest, Lewis B., is a practicing physician and surgeon. The entire family are members of the First Congregational Church. The second son, Charles H., is a graduate of the Buffalo Medical University, and Fred E. graduated in the classical course of the Brockport Normal School in 1887.

Dea. Ebenezer Arnold, youngest son of Daniel Arnold, came with his parents from East Haddam, Conn., in 1802, to this town—then Northampton and afterwards Ogden. Here the father died in 1813, leaving the Deacon a lad only 12 years old. At the age of 18 he came to Bergen, and purchased the farm now in part owned by James Barr. He purchased the farm now owned by him in 1854. He first married Chloe, daughter of Captain Austin Wilcox, in 1824, who died in 1836, leaving two children, of whom Henry W. is the only one living. In 1839 he married, second, A. Jannette Cushman, by whom four children were born to him, three of whom survive, viz.: Linden D. and Irving R., who reside here, and Rose (Mrs. Nelson F. Holman), of the State of Washing-
TOWN OF BERGEN.

Mr. Arnold acquired the title of deacon from long years of service as such in the First Congregational Church. In 1882 he was compelled to retire from active life. Linden D. Arnold, the third son of Deacon Arnold, was born in this town, January 16, 1843. He has followed farming from choice, but makes a specialty of stock, notably the breeding of Chester White and Poland China swine. His farm is a fine one of 81 acres, situated on the Lake road one-half mile south of Bergen village; he also has a farm of 90 acres on the town line road west of the village. On the two farms, during the seasons of 1885–86, he produced 3,950 bushels of wheat and 1,920 bushels of barley. November 5, 1874, he was married to Nellie A., daughter of Abel E. and Elizabeth S. Wilcox, of Bergen, and they have three children, namely: Clara A., born November 14, 1877; Percy L., born January 6, 1883; and Rose E., born May 25, 1885.

Philo P. Bassett, the youngest son of Samuel and Betsey Bassett, was born in Bergen, August 26, 1834, and at the age of 20 began life for himself, choosing the occupations of carpenter, joiner, and painter, which he followed successfully till 1877. February 25, 1859, he married Harriet W., daughter of William H. and Frances E. Keytes, of Owosso, Mich. In 1877 he commenced the undertaking business in this town, being located then one block south of his present place of business. Just before the big fire of March 1, 1880, he had removed to the building just south of the Bergen Hotel, and thus escaped. The latter part of 1885 he removed his business to the Carpenter & McKenzie block. He deals in funeral furniture, artists' materials, pictures and frames, stationery, etc., and is a funeral director. As an undertaker he is successful and worthily very popular, and his business is largely extended to neighboring towns.

Jacob Baird was a resident of Richmondville, Schoharie County, N. Y., where John Baird was born February 13, 1827. Although reared to farming John learned the art of brickmaking when he attained his majority, and has followed that business the most of the time since. He was two years at Batavia, and made the brick for the Blind Asylum and M. E. Church there. Soon after the fire of 1880 he came to this town and started a brick yard, from which he has furnished brick for all the business places except two hotels, manufacturing in a single year as many as 1,000,000. He is well and favorably known as an upright, reliable dealer. Mr. Baird was married, October 7, 1853, to Agnes Doland, of Rochester, N. Y., and one child, Lydia, was born to them, August 7, 1854, now the wife of Frank Jones, of Darien.

John Bergin, son of Michael Bergin, born in 1837 in Kilkenny, Ireland, came to this country February 5, 1865, and located first at Hartford, Conn. After two years he went to Brooklyn, N. Y., and for one year engaged in the cotton business. He then went to South Amboy, N. J., thence to Genesee County, locating at South Byron, where he spent two years in farming and work for the N. Y. C. & H. R. R. In 1870 he removed to Bergen, and has since made his home here. He is baggagemaster at the Bergen depot. He married Hanorah Welch, of his native country, in 1858, and of their eight children only one is living, a son, M. F. Bergen, born in Ireland, December 10, 1859. Up to 20 years he was employed on a farm, and then began business in this town as proprietor of a first-class restaurant and saloon. He married Mary A., daughter of Philip and Mary Whalen, of this town, January 15, 1884, by whom he has one child, Gregory, born January 2, 1885. In February, 1881, Mr. Bergin opened an extensive grocery and wholesale liquor store, of which he is still the proprietor.

Aaron M. Bissell, the third son of Aaron and Lucinda Bissell, of Hebron, Conn., was born in Bergen, August 10, 1818. He followed farming, carrying on 265 acres of land which he owned, and was a breeder of fine horses and sheep. On April 29, 1845, he married Avis Mitchell, of this town, and died August 24, 1862, leaving, besides his wife, six children, namely:
James A., born January 27, 1846; Emily L. (Mrs. John R. Emerson), born October 24, 1847; Franc A. (Mrs. Andrew Gifford), born July 26, 1849; Frederick M., born July 29, 1851; William A., born August 24, 1857; and George A., born September 9, 1859. Frederick M. Bissell, the fourth son of Aaron M., was born in this town and remained on the farm till of age, when he engaged in the occupation of house painting, which he has followed since. He married, April 24, 1872, a daughter of Malden and Rhoda C. Gifford, of Bergen. They had five children, as follows: George R., born August 6, 1873; Carrie A., born August 16, 1875; Clarence G., born January 3, 1880; Earl C., born February 19, 1881; and Bert L., born September 15, 1883. Mr. Bissell is a professor of music, having led the Bergen cornet band for years, and has given instructions upon the violin and cornet, of which he is master. He is also leader of Bissell’s orchestra. William A. Bissell, the fifth child of Aaron M. and Avis Bissell, was born here August 24, 1857. He, with George A., his brother, owns 218 acres of land one mile north of Bergen village. They are partners not only in farming, but in the produce and coal business, with warerooms at the West Shore freight house. William A. was mar-rried, November 30, 1880, to Nellie, daughter of Alexander and Lois Miller, of Caledonia, N. Y., and they have one daughter, Jennie, born September 15, 1885. One remarkable fact worthy of mention is that 208 acres of the 218 belonging to these brothers was the original homestead taken up by Aaron Bissell in 1807. James A. Bissell, the eldest child of Aaron M., born January 27, 1846, was married, January 8, 1880, to Loretta E., dughter of George and Catherine Wrightmeyer, of Baraboo, Wis. They have one child, Avis M., born July 8, 1883. Mr. Bissell is a farmer, owning a valuable farm of 42 acres just east of the corporation line, and makes a specialty of furnishing fresh milk to the residents of the village.

William A. Bower, eldest son of Michael and C. Caroline Bower, was born in Bergen, October 26, 1855. His grandfather, Jacob Bower, was an old resident and pioneer of Bergen, from Cayuga County, N. Y., and followed farming till his death in 1871. William A. Bower, also a farmer, in 1878 purchased a farm in Byron, where he resided until March 6, 1886, when he removed to Bergen village, into his residence on Buffalo street. He married, November 8, 1876, Florence L., daughter of Andrew Y. and Harriet A. Weeks, of Bergen, and they have three children. Michael Bower, father of William A., was a farmer until 1881, when he removed to Bergen village, on Clinton street, where he now resides.

Benjamin Bower, one of the early settlers, came from Cayuga County to Bergen in 1834. His wife and six children located on the town-line road west of the village. His wife died in August of the same year. Mr. Bower followed farming, renting, until his death September 2, 1864. Three of his children survive him, viz.: Mary Ann (Mrs. Ai S. Chase) of Byron; Susan (Mrs. J. D. Gifford), of North Bergen; and Abner, who lives on the old homestead. The latter was born in Springport, Cayuga County, October 23, 1825. He was three years old when his father came here, and has always remained on the farm. He was married to Mary E. Huff, of Canadice, Ontario County, February 27, 1845. They have had three children, only one of whom is living, Mary A., wife of Chester Adams. She was born in 1845.

Jacob Bower came to this town from Aurelius, Cayuga County, N. Y., in 1833. He located in the western part of the town, on what is known as the "town-line road," and lived there until his death, April 21, 1871. One of his two children was Michael, who was born in Cayuga County, May 19, 1831, and was reared a farmer, following that occupation to the present time. He married, January 1, 1855, Cynthia C. Billings, of Byron, and their three children were William A., born October 26, 1855; Rosanna E., born December 25, 1857; and Charles M., born February 27, 1875. The daughter died April 26, 1875, and his wife February 2, 1878. He married for his second wife Eliza E. Berry, relict of James Berry, by whom he had two children, namely: Ella F., born August 15, 1881, and Joseph L., born July 16, 1886. Mr. Bower still owns the old home farm, but resides in the village, though still actively interested in farming, and has been master of the Bergen Grange for several years.

Samuel Carpenter, the fourth son of James and Sarah Carpenter, was born in Somersetshire, Eng., February 22, 1826, and was one of a family of 13 children,—seven daughters and six sons,—all born in England. Samuel was bound out to the tailor trade when 10 years old, and this is his business at the present time. In December, 1849, he came to America with only $5 in his pocket, but as an expert at his trade he was soon in the employ of James Moore, of Rochester. He moved about some, and came to this county, stopping a short time in Bergen, where he was married to Anna A., daughter of Samuel and Betsey Bassett, November 1, 1851. He then went to Oakfield in the employ of Chamberlain & Parmelee, where in six months he saved up $60, with which he returned to Bergen and "opened shop" for himself. Benjamin Wright assisted him to put in a comfortable stock for those days, and he soon was able to buy out and pay off his interest. After two other partnerships, which lasted about four years, he continued alone till 1863, when he formed a partnership with Wolfe & Bachman, of Rochester, who purchased the Doolittle block of Bergen village. Shipping goods to Canada proved a successful venture and resulted in the accumulation of quite a sum. His stock and the Doolittle block were afterwards carried away in smoke and flames. He at once commenced to rebuild, doing business in the meantime in the building just south of where the Bergen Hotel now stands, and in the autumn of 1866 opened in the new store. After three years he leased to Fisher and Murdock, on a three years' lease, but he had built two other stores, one of which he moved into, and here he was when the big fire of 1880 occurred, which destroyed again all of his real property. In 1880 he built the Carpenter block, and in 1882 built the block occupied by Oathout & Gage as a hardware store. This block, costing $2,800, he gave to his youngest son on his 17th birthday. He has three children, viz.: George A., born March 2, 1852; Carlos N., born August 6, 1859; and Burton W., born October 9, 1866. The elder sons are now in partnership with the father, carrying on an extensive business in ready-made clothing, hats, caps, machines, wall paper, trunks, etc., and keeping about 20 employees in the business. Mr. Carpenter is a model business man, as his beginning in life and present high standing will attest.

Thomas Jefferson Dean was the son of Ephraim Dean, and was born at Mansfield, Conn., July 7, 1800. In early days he learned the blacksmiths' trade, which he followed till two years before his death, which occurred August 5, 1848. May 4, 1824, he married Fanny F. Gurley, of Mansfield, Conn., and came to Genesee County in the spring of 1835, to Pine Hill, in Elba. Here he lived most of the time until he died, leaving seven children, of whom only one is living—Thomas Jasper Dean, born October 29, 1836. The latter learned the shoe trade, which he followed for 10 years, when he engaged in farming and its kindred duties, which suited better his taste. He was in the civil war, enlisting as a private in Co. B, 129th N. Y. V., and was mustered, August 22, 1862, into the U. S. service. His regiment was transferred to the 8th N. Y. H. A., and Mr. Dean was in all the battles of that valiant regiment, serving until the close of the war. A shell-wound on his left shoulder was the only injury he received during the entire list of battles. He received a commission as second lieutenant July 1, 1864, dated June 3d. He was mustered out of service at the expiration of his term, June 22, 1865. On January 30, 1866, he married Celestia M., daughter of S. H. and Sarah K. Reed, of Bergen. Three children were born to them, viz.: Minnie C., born January 6, 1868; Charles R., born January 25, 1870; and Calvin N., born June 15, 1874. He has filled the offices of justice of peace seven terms and justice of Sessions two.

John W. Davy, third son of John and Margarette Davy, was born in Canada, November 22, 1845, and at the age of 17 commenced the trade of blacksmithing. In April, 1866, he came to this town, and for eight years he worked for other parties, but for the past 15 years has carried on the business himself. He married Anna B. Gordon, of Kingston, Canada, September 30, 1867, and has a family of three children, one of whom, Ethel E., is an adopted daughter. Willie J. was born December 6, 1869, and Grace G. July 9, 1876. Mr. Davy has been very successful in business, and is able to reap the reward of industry by doing business in his own brick block on Buffalo street. He enjoys the confidence of his townsmen, as is attested by his success in business and the offices of trust he fills in the school and other corporations of the village.

Erastus Emerson, eldest son of Joseph Emerson, was born in Riga, N. Y., July 27, 1810. He followed farming till 1854, when he was compelled to retire by reason of injuries received. Four children were born to him, as follows: Joseph T., John R., Jerome E., and George E., all of whom are living except the first named. John R. Emerson, the second child, of Bergen village, was born in Riga, February 9, 1844, and at the age of 15 he went to Colchester, Conn., to learn the trade of tanner and currier, remaining there about three years. He enlisted in Co. H, 21st Conn. Vols., for three years, or during the war. He was mustered into service at Norwich, Conn., August 22, 1862, and left for the seat of war September 11th. He was attached to the Army of the Potomac, in the 9th Corps; was at the battle of Fredericksburg, was marched the length of the peninsula to Hampton, July 12th, and on the 15th was marched to Portsmouth to act as provost-guard for the city. On the 15th of May he joined Butler's army, on the James River, and was assigned to the 18th Corps. He was at the battle of Drury's Bluff, joined Grant's army at Cold Harbor, June 1st, and was at the surrender of Lee. He arrived at Richmond, June 15, 1865, and embarked for home. Arriving at New Haven on the 18th he was mustered out July 1st, making the term of service 34 months. Five battles and three skirmishes were participated in without a scratch. He then attended Eastman's Commercial College at Rochester, from which he received a diploma in 1866. March 18, 1868, he married Emma L., daughter of Aaron and Avis Bissell, of Bergen. He followed farming till 1883, when he entered the mercantile business as partner of A. B. Enoch. They carried on a general store for several years. Mr. Emerson has two children—Clayton B., born December 28, 1870, and Bessie E., born July 1, 1879.

Abraham Enoch was born in Wood County (now Wirt), West Virginia, January 16, 1804. His father, Isaac, was one of the earliest settlers in the "Old Dominion." Abraham married Mary Gibbrus, October 14, 1830, and to them were born eight children, of whom six are living, viz.: I. L., M. V., J. T., A. F., J. G., and A. B. The first four named are now residents of Virginia. I. L. Enoch has served four years in the West Virginia legislature. Mr. Enoch was a farmer and lumberman, and at the breaking out of the civil war was a Union man—and a Democrat. He was the first county judge of Wirt County in the new State of West Virginia, and held court contrary to the order of the rebel geneva, who subsequently offered a reward for his person delivered at Richmond. Wirt County was near the borders, and furnished men for each army, but pronounced Union men had to suffer from the repeated raids and injuries of the rebel bushwhackers. It was nothing to be stripped of horses and stock, and also sleep in well-guarded quarters.
The last eight years Mr. Enoch spent in Henrietta, Monroe County, N. Y., where he died in November, 1883. His youngest son, A. B.
Enoch, was born in Wirt County, as above, February 6, 1849. Although a boy he belonged to the home guard during the war, and had considerable army experience while protecting property. He had one brother who served in the 6th W. Va. Regt., and another who raised a company for the 11th Regt. A. B. Enoch was married, January 12, 1871, to Mary, daughter of Cornelius S. Dewitt, of Henrietta, N. Y.
They have one child, Sherman D., born September 25, 1873. Mr.
Enoch came to this town April 18, 1880, and engaged in the mercantile business. He was appointed postmaster March 16, 1886.

He married Jane Green, May 22, 1828, daughter of Joshua Green, who was also a settler in this town in 1809. Jane Green, his wife, was born May 22, 1808, at Rome, N. Y., and died at North Bergen, September 13, 1883, after residing in Genesee County 74 years. Their family consisted of three sons and one daughter, viz.: Andrew H., born November 26, 1829, died August 13, 1849; Herbert, born April 19, 1832, was killed while serving as captain in the 3d Mo. Southworth, the eldest son, was born in this town August 12, 1824, and remained on his father's farm until 18 years of age. He then hired out for six months on a farm for $10 a month, which he drew at the end of that time, placing $50 of it at interest, which was the foundation of his future financial success. He married Emily A., daughter of William Ellis, Jr., of Norwich, Conn., whose family consisted of eight children, who are still living, the eldest being over 72 years old. Danford Storer has two children by adoption—Charles S. Mills, in Michigan, and Julia, now Mrs. Gilbert Briggs, of Ovid, Mich. Mr. Storer sold his farm at West Bergen (part of which was his father's homestead since 1830), and now lives a retired life, enjoying the fruits of his industry.

John Tone, the fourth son of John A. Tone, was born in Scipio, Cayuga County, N. Y., October 17, 1799. In 1820 he came with his father to this town, locating on the farm now known as the Elijah Loomis place, which was owned by the Tone family for 46 consecutive years. John A. Tone died September 29, 1825. John Tone married Electa E. Hubbard, of Oneida County, N. Y., in May, 1824. He was a builder and contractor, and many of the buildings of Bergen, Byron, Sweden, etc., are the witnesses of his skill. He had a family of 11 children, six of whom survive. He was a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, acting as trustee and leader for many years. He died February 27, 1861, and his wife November 2, 1872. Thomas J. He afterwards returned to Bergen, where he has remained, engaged in the business of dealer in grain, produce, and coal, and proprietor of Tone's elevator. October 18, 1858, he married Catharine D., daughter of Sumner Spafford, of this town, and has three children, viz.: S. La Rue, born November 1, 1864; Frank D., born October 16, 1868; and Florence M., born January 3, 1871. Mr. Tone has been a prominent member of the First Congregational Church, leading the Sunday-school, and acting as trustee and clerk of the society. He is also largely interested in all matters of public interest, so much so that he has long been one of the board of trustees of the public school.

Vols. from New York, from 1861 to 1864, and is now engaged in a successful and extended practice in Genesee and Monroe counties.

Samuel C. Tulley, the second son of Francis S. and Adaline Tulley, was born September 22, 1837, in the city of New York. His father was a well-known dealer in stoves, gas fixtures, etc., in Rochester, where he came in 1840, and died there in 1884. Samuel C. Tulley began business for himself in this town in 1859, and has followed the hardware business since. February 21, 1865, he married Mary I., daughter of James R. and Mary Thompson, of Philadelphia, Pa., and three children have been born to them, as follows: Loa Belle, December 20, 1865, died April 16, 1867; James F., January 4, 1868; and Harry L., January 8, 1870. Nelson D. Wright was born in the town of Bergen, January 22, 1826. His father, Alfred Wright, came to this town from Guilford, Conn., in 1807, with his father, who was an early settler of the town, one of the founders of the Congregational Church, and a prominent citizen of those early days. Nelson married Mary F. Green, of Bergen, in 1851. He was a farmer for 30 years, and then engaged in the produce business. His life has been spent in Bergen with the exception of a few years.

Hon. Samuel Church, an old resident of Bergen, was born in Sangersfield, Oneida County, N. Y., December 16, 1809. He was one of 11 children. One brother, George H., survives him, and lives in Water-ville, Oneida County—a prominent man politically and religiously.

Mr. Church came to Bergen at the age of 16, in 1825, on a packet boat, the year the Erie Canal was opened, and walked from Brockport to Bergen. He attended the village school during the winter. In the spring he chose the trade of a blacksmith, entering the shop of C. B. Bigelow, his half brother, giving attention to his studies during the winter seasons until he attained his majority. He made great progress in learning as well as in business. His earlier days were those of earnest toil and struggle. He had no aid of money, only as he earned it by his own labor. He soon mastered the trade, hired the shop, and commenced business for himself, which he managed successfully until his health began to fail. He then followed the business of broker. Mr. Church never recovered his health, but battled with disease periodically during a life of only 56 years. May 17, 1835, he married Harriet A., youngest daughter of Capt. Austin Wilcox, a pioneer of the town. She still lives in Bergen.
TOWN OF BERGEN.

Their children are Mrs. B. F. Taber, of Buffalo; George H., a lumber dealer, of Bergen; and Charles Samuel, who died in 1875, at the age of 17 years.

Of Samuel Church, Ebenezer Scofield, his cotemporary, said:

"Mr. Church has resided here since 1825, where he was so favorably known and highly esteemed for his many virtues and pleasing social qualities. He will long be remembered by his numerous friends and associates, who ever took pleasure in his society. He was a man of more than ordinary mental faculties, whose opinion was looked up to in matters of public interest by all who knew him. He had filled many public positions with honor to himself and credit to his town and county. His loss will be deeply felt by the community, and by his family who are sorely afflicted by the bereavement."

The Rochester Union and Advertiser of April 14, 1866, had the following:

"At the session of Genesee County Court, on Tuesday last, the following resolutions on the death of Samuel Church, Sessions justice, were presented by William G. Bryan, Esq., and ordered by the court entered at large in the minutes:

"Resolved, That the members of the bar of Genesee County have heard with regret of the sad and unexpected intelligence of the sudden death of Samuel Church, Esq., one of the justices of Sessions of Genesee County; that as a magistrate of large experience, clear and forcible mind, rare good sense, unquestioned uprightness, and integrity of purpose and purity of character, he will be favorably remembered by the community in which he has so long resided; and that we shall miss and lament his absence from the bench to which he has twice been chosen by the people of this county.

"Resolved, That, with the permission of the court, these resolutions be entered in the minutes, and a copy transmitted to the widow of the deceased."

"District-Attorney Bissell seconded the resolutions, adding some remarks referring to his long acquaintance with deceased, and the loss the county has sustained in the death of so excellent a magistrate. The county judge, in directing the entry of the resolutions, spoke at length of the diligence and aptitude of Mr. Church, both as a Sessions judge, magistrate, and business man; and it being suggested that the funeral would take place to-morrow, the court ordered, as a mark of respect to the memory of deceased, that the jury be discharged, and the Court of Sessions adjourned until Thursday morning."

Capt. Austin Wilcox, a pioneer of Western New York, was born in Madison, Conn., October 28, 1779, and married Clarissa, daughter of Ezra Nettleton and Damaris Seward, of Killingworth, Conn., March 27, 1805. They lived in Westbrook, Conn., he following the business of a blacksmith, spiking vessels, till May 20, 1815, when they emigrated to Bergen, where he had previously been to explore the country and make a purchase in 1813. Their journey of 400 miles was made with two yoke of oxen and a covered wagon, containing their necessary valuables, and a one-horse covered wagon, in which the family, consisting of the mother and five children, rode. All the children were under 10 years of age. Three more children were added to this family in after years. Mrs. Wilcox's life in this new settlement, with her growing family, was one of hardship and toil, like that of all the pioneers, a life she was not calculated for. She was reared tenderly, in affluence, and possessed a slender constitution, predisposed to consumption. At an early age, after an illness of 18 months, she fell a victim, with many others of the pioneer mothers, to the prevailing malady of the pioneer settlement, -consumption, -leaving her little family of eight children to the care of a tender husband. Her death occurred in June, 1828, at the age of 49 years. The Congregational Church on the hill was just completed, and hers was the first funeral held there.

Chloe B., the oldest daughter, married Ebenezer Arnold in 1825, and died aged 31, leaving two sons, H. Windsor, now living in Bergen, and Homer W., deceased. Polly N. married William Carey, and removed to Fond du Lac, Wis., in 1845. Mr. Carey died in March following their removal, and Mrs. Carey in 1866. Their children numbered eight, three of whom are now living in Fond du Lac, prominent and useful citizens. Clarissa married Ira Bidwell. They removed to Adrian, Mich., in 1836. She died at the age of 54. They had five children. Austin Scranton, the oldest, married Hannah Bodwell, of Bergen, and removed to Adrian, Mich., in 1837. He purchased 80 acres of land west of the village, then an unbroken forest. His highest ambition seemed to be to excel in his calling, and he was able to look out upon over 200 acres of splendid farming land changed from a wilderness to fruitful fields by his own industry. He always declined office and notoriety. He is deceased. He had born to him six children. Elizabeth A. married Josiah Pierson, Jr., of Bergen, where they resided during her short life of 31 years. They had one son and one daughter. Harriet A., born January 31, 1817, married, May 17, 1835, Samuel Church, of Bergen, where she still resides. Their children are Mrs. B. F. Taber, of Buffalo; George H., of Bergen; and Charles Samuel (deceased). William Seward, born April 25, 1819, lived in Bergen until September, 1836, when he went to Michigan in the employ of his brother-in-law, Ira Bidwell. He afterwards became a partner in the business, and soon after started the hardware store and continued the business alone until 1867, when his brother H. H. became his partner. After five years the firm was changed to Wilcox Brothers & Co., when George A., son of W. S., became a partner. This is the name of the firm at the present time.

In 1848 W. S. Wilcox was elected treasurer of the village of Adrian, and held the office one year. In 1864 he was elected to the legislature of Michigan, which office he held two terms, and was chosen a member of the ways and means committee, and during the second term acted as its chairman. In the spring of 1865 he was elected mayor of the city of Adrian. In the fall of 1870 he was chosen State Senator, which office he held one term, and was chairman of the finance committee. In 1869 he was appointed State prison inspector by Governor Baldwin, and was immediately chosen president of the board of inspectors, which he held for 12 years. In 1866 he was elected president of the Michigan State Insurance Co., which position he still holds. In 1884 he was elected one of the presidential electors on the Republican ticket. In 1879 he became partner in the firm of Whitney & Wilcox, Commercial Exchange Bank, giving his time and attention to the institution. For 50 years successively he has been superintendent of the Baptist Sunday-school. Mr. Wilcox was first married at Benton, Ind., Captain Austin Wilcox
May 10, 1842, to Sarah Frances, daughter of Rev. Bradbury Clay. Mrs. Wilcox died February 12, 1852. His second marriage was, August 17, 1854, to Miss Josephine Southworth, daughter of Dr. William Southworth, of Avon Springs, N. Y.

Henry Hamilton Wilcox reached his majority in the fall of 1843. He went West to seek his fortune, and found employment in the hardware store of George L. Bidwell. In the spring of 1844 he received a letter from his father expressing feelings of sadness that his boys had all left him in his old age. The next morning found his youngest boy, H. H. W., homeward bound, that he might be a comfort to his father in his declining years. He remained at Bergen until after the death of his father, and in the fall of 1852 he started with his family for Adrian, Mich., again with a view of purchasing a farm. He was induced to take a place in his brother’s hardware store and give his children the benefit of the Adrian schools until a favorable opportunity presented for the purchase of a farm. Although fresh from the fields, and unaccustomed to business, he very soon became master of the situation and the leading salesman in one of the largest hardware houses in Southern Michigan. In 1867 he became one of the firm of Wilcox & Brothers, contributing largely to its successful management. Mr. Wilcox was married, in Northampton, Mass., in 1844, to Eunice J., daughter of Hervey Smith, by whom he had five children.

The pioneers of Bergen, who laid at the same time the foundations of the church and town, were a noble race of men. Unlike most early settlements the population was not mixed, but homogeneous. Nearly all of them came from Connecticut and Massachusetts, and brought with them the sturdy New England virtues of industry, integrity, and high moral aim. Among them was Capt. Austin Wilcox. We wish we could present him to the present and future residents of the town exactly as he appeared to his contemporaries; but that is a difficult matter. His portrait shows that his was a very strong and original character. Mr. Lincoln, in preparing a brief sketch of his own life for the Congressional Directory, wrote: “Education limited.” This describes Capt. Wilcox; but his natural ability and quick wit largely overcame this disadvantage.

He was a man of stalwart frame and untiring industry. Settling in this county before the time of railroads, he soon saw a place was needed where man and beast could find refreshment and rest as they sought a market for products of Genesee’s rich fields, and he soon built up a hotel business, showing tact and ability in that line that in these days would make a railroad magnate. When he began hotel life it was in his own house on his farm at Bergen Corners. To this building he made various additions as his patronage increased. It is impossible for those of the present day to understand the enormous travel of those days to Rochester and Brockport, when all the produce of the farmers, and all the merchandise sold over a large extent of country, passed over these roads. At the same time Capt. Wilcox ran a line of stages from Le Roy to Brockport and Clarkson, carrying the mails, and also kept the postoffice. But large as his patronage was it is difficult to understand how he could have made such vast improvements with the very small charges of those days: sixpence for lodging; 18 and 20 cents for the best of meals. Most of the farmers carried their own dinner, a box and oats for their teams, with them, and if they paid for a pint of cider and hay to bait their horses, that was all it cost them for shed-room and a warm fire before which to eat their meals from the ample dinner-pail.

A close observer of men, united with a natural detective ability, made him an acute reader of human nature. Quick to detect guilt, and fearless in exposing it, many a rogue has quailed beneath the keen glance of his eye, and has been betrayed into a confession of his guilt by his apt questions. On one occasion, as a man on horseback rode up to his platform, he took his horse by the bridle and said to him, in the most abrupt manner, "You have stolen this horse!" The man was so startled he could only say, "What makes you think so?" He replied, "If it was your horse you would not be riding him with this blind bridle; he is a valuable horse; if you owned him you would not be riding him so hard as you are." The men in pursuit soon rode up and captured the thief. At another time some men in pursuit of a thief, who was escaping to Canada, stopped at his house to dine and feed their horses. At he listened to their conversation he found they were in trouble because they did not know the name of the thief and could not insert it in the warrant for his arrest. He asked to see the warrant, took his pen, and, after filling the blank, handed it back, saying, "What I have written will read any man's name that ever lived." Many other acts might be told illustrating his ready detective wit. His manner of expressing himself was so striking and original as to draw around him a crowd of listeners, not only at home, but wherever he traveled. At a meeting of the pioneers in Rochester he was called upon to relate his experience as a pioneer. He began: "I was born in Madison, Conn. I remember the day just as well [great laughter] as any other man remembers his birthday." With this beginning he did not lack attention to the close of his strikingly original address.

He was ever foremost in promoting public good and spared neither his time or means. The church and its interests were ever dear to him, and when, in mature years, he gave to the subject of personal religion, thought and study, that same sense of right that ever governed him was acted upon, and he became a true, consistent member of the church, making a public profession in 1836. This consecration was largely due to the power of religious instruction and example of his mother, who was a woman whose peculiarities were more strongly marked than his own. His peculiar traits of character were chiefly inherited from her. Her religion was simple, earnest, genial, and hence influential with her children and others. At the age of 60 she came to Genesee County to visit her children. Here she died and is buried in beautiful Mount Rest Cemetery, where many of her descendants lie. He ever took a deep interest in re-
TOWN OF BERGEN.

Religious society, and was for many years one of its trustees and burden bearers. The burying-ground was also his pride, he giving his particular attention to any matters of interest connected with it. This interest increased with his years, and was also a family trait for generations.

His hospitality to ministers of the gospel, who, in his time, nearly all traveled in their own conveyances, and who, in the capacity of agents or missionaries, were far more numerous than now, was ever unstinted. His house was always open to old friends from Connecticut, and his journal records many such visits.

From the Genesea Evangelist, written by his pastor, Rev. Sabine McKinney, now of Binghamton, N. Y.:

"Died in Bergen, Genesea County, New York, Capt. Austin Wilcox, aged 77 years, August 18, 1856.

"Capt. Wilcox was a native of Madison, Conn., from whence he removed to Bergen in the year 1815. He was widely known as a man of great influence, energy, and decision of character. He took a hearty interest in everything which he regarded as of public utility, and was especially remarkable for kind attention to and sympathy for the sick, and for his attendance at the house of mourning, which won for him the gratitude of many. Both as a member of the First Congregational Society of Bergen, and for many years one of its trustees, he was liberal and efficient, and the society is largely indebted to his efforts for their beautiful church edifice. He ever welcomed ministers of the gospel to the hospitality of his house, in that respect setting an example worthy of all imitation, and while in health was a constant attendant upon divine service. Hopefully converted after he was 50 years of age, he made a public profession of his faith in 1836. During the past spring and summer he frequently expressed it as his conviction that his days on earth were nearly numbered, and though he had not that full assurance which God is pleased to give to some of his children, yet he indulged the hope that, through grace in the Lord Jesus Christ, his name was written the Book of Life."

Dea. Pitman Wilcox, one of the pioneer settlers of Genesea County, came from East Guilford, Conn., in 1810. He was married to Eliza Wilcox, and they reared a family of five sons, viz.: Thomas F., Abel E., Edmund, Harman, and Pitman, Jr. He died July 13, 1828. The second son, Abel E., was born August 12, 1801, and came to this county with his father when about eight years of age. He followed farming, and had necessarily received, from the early condition of the new country, a limited education. He married Clara Richmond, of Cayuga County, N. Y., November 7, 1825, who died December 25, 1826, leaving no children. Mr. Wilcox married, second, Elizabeth, daughter of Deacon John and Elizabeth Spencer, of Bergen, by whom he had 10 children, seven of whom survive, viz.: Clara A., widow of Reynold Curtiss of Cambdridge, Eng.; Edwin M.; Jane E. (Mrs. John Birdsal), of South Evanston, Ill.; J. Spencer; H. Halsey; Ellen A. (Mrs. Linden D. Arnold); and Charles J., of Vicksburg, Mich. Abel E. Wilcox became a member of the First Congregational Church of Bergen in 1834, with which he was prominently connected for years as deacon. He died October 2, 1879, aged 76 years. Edwin M., the eldest, born March 5, 1836, was married, December 19, 1865, to Ella A. Dudley, of Guilford, Conn, and their children are Hamilton, born February 27, 1867; L. Dudley, born May 25, 1870; William S., born May 14, 1875; and Edwin E., born June 23, 1880. Edwin M.
Wilcox enlisted in Co. G, 14th Conn. Inf., July 27, 1862, and continued in the service to the close of the war, participating in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Wilderness, Petersburg, and several minor engagements. He was wounded at Fredericksburg and again at the Wilderness, and was twice a prisoner, being once in Libby and once in Belle Isle. After the war he returned to farming. J. Spencer Wilcox, second son of Abel E., was born in Bergen, November 25, 1842, and has followed farming April 11, 1872, he married Hermoine, daughter of William Patten, of Bergen, by whom he had four children, as follows: Clarence E., born March 4, 1873; Mary E., born December 8, 1875; Nellie G., born September 25, 1877; and Russell H., born March 11, 1882. H. Halsey, third son of Abel E., now living, was born in this town November 23, 1847. He has always lived in Bergen as a farmer and breeder of thoroughbred sheep. He was married, October 10, 1878, to Anna M., daughter of William P. Squiers, of Churchville, N. Y., and they have three children, as follows: Anna Mabel, born August 19, 1879; Roscoe S., born June 14, 1882; and Marion H., born April 15, 1884.

Charles J. Wilcox, youngest son of Abel E. Wilcox, was born in Bergen, January 7, 1856, and in his early years worked with his father on the farm. At the age of 20 he graduated from Eastman's Commercial College. In the spring of 1879 he went to Kalamazoo, Mich., and remained there, farming, seven years, when he removed to Vicksburg, Mich., where he now resides. He married Elizabeth Adams, of Kalamazoo County, Mich., February 13, 1882, and they have one child, Ina Belle, born February 14, 1883.

Thomas J. Wilcox, fourth son of Elias and Rachel Wilcox, was born in Sweden, Monroe County, N. Y., January 26, 1835, removing to Bergen with his parents when quite young, where his younger days were spent in work on the farm and attending the common schools. At the age of 17 he began apprenticeship with Carmine Martin, at carpentering, where he was employed seven years. In 1859 he married Eleanor, daughter of Carmine and Caroline Martin, at Avon, Livingston County, N. Y. He enlisted in the service of his country October 5, 1861, in the 27th N. Y. Vols. He was a member of Scott's cornet band of Rochester. From Washington, D. C., he was ordered to Western Virginia, where he was taken sick with typhoid fever, and died at the 7th Brigade Hospital, January 26, 1862. His remains were at once brought to Bergen, and now rest in Mount Rest Cemetery. He left, surviving him, his wife and one son, Sanford H. Wilcox, who is now engaged in the carpenter and joiner business. Mrs. Eleanor Wilcox, his widow, still resides here, and is a dressmaker.

The third child of John and Betsey Walker, born April 30, 1832, was William C. Walker. He was from Gates, Monroe County, N. Y., whence he was removed to Ogden, on the town line of Riga, at the tender age of two years. Here the father died in 1881. William C., at the age of 22, purchased a farm in Riga, one mile east of Bergen village, where he lived till 1882, when he removed to the village. The year previous he had built a fine brick building on Lake street, corner of Rochester, for a hotel, which he opened to the public in the spring as the " Walker House." This is first-class in all its appointments and enjoys the favor of the public. He married, April 4, 1857, Candace, daughter of Rhoderick and Mary Gooding, who died January 5, 1858, leaving no children. August 21, 1861, he married Elizabeth A., daughter of Leander and Lavia Hitchcock, of Eagle Harbor, Orleans County, and they have five children—Gertrude E., Sidney E., Dewitt C., and Lewis E. Mr. Walker, as a farmer, made a specialty of hops, which proved very successful under his management. The genealogy of the family is extensive, extending back to 1620, and has been published down to 1861. W. C. Walker, grandfather of the present William C., was born at West Becket, Mass., in 1761, and died October 8, 1841. John Walker was also born at West Becket, November 18, 1795, married Betsey Sprague in 1823, and died in 1881.

Dr. Levi Ward, son of Levi, and a native of Connecticut, emigrated to Bergen in 1807, accompanied by his brother, John Ward. At Le Roy they met R. M. Stoddard, agent of the Triangle tract, and were induced to locate in what was then called the North Woods (now Bergen village). Finding temporary quarters in the newly erected log house of Daniel Kelsey, Dr. Ward erected a small frame house and covered it with cedar shingles, which were then deemed aristocratic for the new country. His brother erected a log house, and both began clearing off the land. It was on Saturday that they arrived at their new home in the wilderness. Accustomed to regular attendance at public worship their first thought was to provide for religious exercises. A meeting was agreed upon at the house of the new settler, and 14 or 15 persons assembled from the scattered settlements. Prayers were offered, a sermon read, and hymns were sung. For nine years Dr. Ward was one of the most active of the early pioneers. He was an efficient helper in all that was to be done in the back woods: in opening new roads, establishing schools, organizing religious societies. He came to the new country to find a home for himself and family rather than to practice his profession. In 1811 he was appointed agent to settle the accounts of the commissioners who built the bridge over the river at Rochester. In 1812 he was the means of getting mail routes established. At the time of the War of 1812 he collected all the muskets, rifles, etc., with what ammunition could be found, for the use of Gen. Davis. He was supervisor for six years, and judge of the county at one time. In 1817 he moved to Rochester. His eldest son, W. H., was postmaster of Bergen.
BETHANY.

BETHANY, as will be seen by the list of the early settlers, was among the earliest towns which invited the pioneers to its rich lands. The most of the settlements were made before the War of 1812. On June 8th of that year the town was formed, being taken from Batavia. The land is rolling in the upper half, and somewhat hilly as the lower bounds are reached. It is a well watered section, Black Creek, Tonawanda Creek, and White Creek being the principal streams.

In 1803 John Torrey, Orsamus Kellogg (who had a child born that year), Charles Culver, John Dewey, L. D. and Samuel Prindle, Nathaniel Pinney, Jedediah Riggs, M. Scott, Horace Shepard, O. Fletcher, David Hall, Capt. George Lathrop, and Richard Pearson either settled on lands in the town or declared their intention so to do; and in 1804 many others came; the sound of the axe was daily heard in the forests, and a musical and welcome sound it must have been in those days to all those who had determined to deny themselves so many comforts in order to make a home in the new Genesee country. Capt. Lathrop, who located in the center of the town, is said to be the third person who came. He was a captain in the War of 1812, and died on his farm, aged 92 years. Solomon Lathrop, who came in 1804, lost his wife about 1816. He went on a visit (soon after) to Cattaraugus County, and was never heard from. Henry Lathrop located in 1804, and died on his place, aged 85 years. Richard Pearson, Sr., came from Lyme, Conn., to Genesee County about 1803, bought 155 acres of land for $426.25, and returned to Connecticut, coming again to the county in 1806. He returned to Connecticut again in 1807, and finally came to the county in 1812, in which year he bought 50 acres in the Craigie tract for $200. He married and settled on his land in 1815, coming with a neighbor with an ox-team and one horse, each family having one child. He died on his farm in 1853, aged 71 years. His son lives on the old homestead. Richard Peck, among the earliest settlers (1806), was a lieutenant in Col. Rumsey's regiment in the War of 1812; he was at Chestnut Ridge and Black Rock. The old commission signed by Gov. Tompkins is in the possession of his son, who lives in Stafford. Another son, Benjamin F., lives on the old homestead.

The Lincoln family were very prominent in the early settlement. Jedediah, who came in 1805, when last heard from was over 96 years of age. He was living in Illinois with a son. Peter Putnam located in the northwestern part of the town in 1805 or 1806.

Because of the valuable water privileges on the Little Tonawanda, in the southwest part of the town, there was greater activity there than elsewhere. This locality (now Linden) was first called Gad-Pouch, because it is supposed "gadding women" were more numerous than elsewhere.
The name "Linden" was first suggested by a clerk in the store at that place, and the first sign was put up over the mill, Judge Isaac Wilson being the postmaster and a justice. John Wilder, a pioneer of Attica, built many mills, among which was one, in 1810, for Judge Wilson at this place. This mill was enlarged in 1833 by Daniel Calkins. It was the first grist-mill that served the inhabitants of the northern part of Wyoming County, and a great portion of the towns of Darien, Alexander, and Bethany. About the year 1809 Calvin Barrows came in, and made the pioneers glad by fitting up a carding and woolen mill. He came from Massachusetts, and lived in the town 60 years. He built a log house in the same year (which was burned), and lived in it six years. He rebuilt about 1817 where Sexturs, a son, now lives. Mr. Barrows was a Master Mason and a member of Olive Branch Lodge, which met at Huggins's tavern after the troubles in Batavia.

One Coles built a saw-mill in Linden about 1808. There was a fall of 24 feet to the dam, and owing to insecure foundation this mill tumbled over that distance and hurt some of the operatives. Another saw mill was built, which was burned. Several fires have occurred in the place from time to time, among which have been the stone distillery (started by Nathaniel Eastman), which had also been used as a cooper shop by Collins; the old store built by Wilson & Dewey; the railroad depot in 1860; the flour-mill in 1879; and the W. H. Barrows house. After the stone distillery was destroyed a wooden one was built in 1825, and a stone one in 1838. Some of the owners of the old (Wilson) mill site have been George Perry (an old settler), Collins, Remer & Tuttle, Remer & Barrows, and W. H. Barrows. The latter also started a cabinet shop in 1837, continuing it for 15 years, when he kept a store for four years, and then moved to Attica.

Among the store-keepers were Judge Wilson, Horace Tripman, Webster (who also had an ashery), and Collins. One Gardner also had a store and ashery in 1820. The first tavern there was kept by Joseph Chamberlain, in a house built by Mr. Lusk. E. and Jeduthan Faunce in 1835 kept a tavern in the house owned by Myron Kemp.

The first settlers who arrived at Linden were Calvin Barrows, Samuel Jolls, Alexander Grimes, Jacob Grimes, Andrew Grimes, Rufus Munger, Jesse Fay, Matthew Alger, Sanford Bowers, Israel Everest, Nathan Blood, and a few others. A Mr. Towner was an early miller. At the time of the advent of the railroad, about 1850 or 1852, business was not very brisk in the place, there being only a grist-mill, cider and shingle-mill, and a cooper shop. In 1869 one Bunce had a tannery here, Durgy & Huggins and Faunce & Whaley had stores, W. E. Kemp a barrel factory, S. Metcalf a saw-mill, and Quale Brothers a flour and saw-mill. It is supposed Aaron Bailey, in 1828, taught the first school in Linden, but Matilda Wedge, in 1808, is credited with being the first teacher in the town.

Canada, a small hamlet on Black Creek, in the eastern part of the town, claims to have had a mill erected in 1808, by one Bennett, one of a family who came in 1805, and for some time the place was called "Bennett's Mills." There was a tavern here in early times. No business of importance was transacted at the locality at present.

Sylvester Lincoln, in 1805, had a tavern, said to be the first in town; the same one, it is presumed, which, in 1821, was kept by C. J. Lincoln, who was also postmaster and colonel of militia, and where the Masonic meetings of Olive Branch Lodge were frequently held after their removal from Batavia. B. R. Brown also had a tavern about 1825, and one L. Brown, in 1828, kept an inn on the new State road. Nathaniel Huggins also kept a tavern, built in 1828, and kept by him until his death in 1852, where the Masons met. This is now the residence of Thomas J. Harding. Mr. Huggins was a postmaster in 1832. W. H. Rumsey had a tavern in 1841. Nelson Blood had one in 1859, and very early Buell Brown kept an inn. R. A. Taylor, in 1864, kept the hotel at East Bethany, and Davis Gray kept the same place in 1869. Elisha Hurlburt opened a store in 1808, the same year Sylvester Lincoln opened his tavern, each in a log house.

The postoffice at Bethany was established in 1825 by Orange Allen. Phineas Smith was postmaster in 1826; E. C. Dibble in 1829; C. J. Lincoln in 1831; and Harvey Prindle later. The firm of Chipman & Lusk was in business in 1830, Owen & Prindle in 1844, and Carlos A. Huggins in 1869.

A prominent early settler was Richard Powers, a Mason, who died in 1849, aged 80 years. His son Blanchard was also an active and prominent man, especially in Masonic matters. The old lodge often met at his house.

The Genesee Manual Labor Seminary was chartered in 1832, with a capital of $20,000. Subscriptions to the amount of $5,516 enabled the organizers to erect the building. R. Whiting was the principal from 1834 to 1841, and Joseph Hurty until 1844.

The Genesee County alms-house is located in the south part of the town, on roads 40 and 41. It has room for 100 inmates, and is a well managed institution. The superintendents are C. Crosman, of Alexander; Dwight Dimock, of Pembroke; and H. O. Bostwick, of Batavia. Benjamin W. Hartwell, of Pavilion, is the keeper, and Dr. Ganson W. Croff the resident physician. Connected with the house is a farm of 200 acres in a fine state of cultivation, and is valued at $11,500. An inventory taken in 1889 showed a total value of $18,000. In 1890 there were 73 inmates, the estimated cost of keeping which was 15 cents per day, exclusive of the products of the farm. This includes salaries, excepting that of superintendent. Wheat, corn, oats, and pork are raised on the place. The value of the products raised in 1889 was $2,587. In 1832 James Thayer, aged 84 years, and Anny Danforth, aged 86, were married here.

TOWN OF BETHANY.

& W. Railroad, has 35 houses, one school, three stores, one wagon shop, one blacksmith shop, a grist-mill (built by George Perry in 1881), with three runs of stones, one saw-mill, with a capacity of 3,000 feet of lumber per day, one cooper shop, built by Daniel Merritt, with a capacity of 10,000 barrels, and one cider-mill, with a capacity of 4,000 barrels annually. The village is without church privileges.

East Bethany, the next village of importance, is located on the D., L. & W. Railroad, in the northeastern part of the town. There are 24 houses with about 108 inhabitants. It is a post village, has a Presbyterian Church, a school, one hotel, two stores, a harness shop, a blacksmith shop, and a cider-mill, the latter having a capacity of 400 barrels per year. There is now building (May, 1890) a fine school-house, which will cost about $1,500.

Bethany Center, also a post village, is south of the center of the town, and has a Presbyterian and Baptist church, two stores, a blacksmith shop, a town hall, a school, two dressmakers, about 25 houses, and 85 inhabitants.

Little Canada (formerly Bennett's), in the northeastern part of the town, has a Free Methodist Church, a school, a grist-mill, with a capacity of 150 bushels of grain per day, a saw-mill, with a capacity of 2,000 feet of lumber per day, and a wagon shop.

West Bethany (p. o.) is a hamlet in the west part of the town. It has a grist mill, located on road 29, built by Nathaniel Brown in 1811, and now owned by Joseph Crawford, having a capacity of 50 bushels of wheat and 200 bushels of feed per day. The village has also a grocery store, a Freewill Baptist Church, a blacksmith shop, and six houses.

Bethany was the only town in Genesee County but what received a donation from the Holland Land Co. of 100 acres of land for religious purposes. The earliest record we have of religious services is that of the Freewill Baptists, the Rev. Nathaniel Brown being instrumental in organizing a church in 1809. In 1839 they put up a wooden edifice. They now have 82 members in the society, which is presided over by Hiram G. Schoonover. Their property is valued at $1,000.

The Methodists held camp-meetings at "Bennett's," or Little Canada, as early as 1810, and Benjamin Barlow, a local preacher, held services in the town in 1811, as did also Father Waller and Brother Howe, who came from Wyoming County. They also built the church now owned by the Free Methodists. This society was organized by Jonathan K. Barlow, the pioneer physician, and held its meetings in the same building with the Presbyterians, which was afterwards used as an academy. A society was organized in 1820, and one January 7, 1832, but soon became extinct. A Bethany Union Church Society was organized in 1828.

At Little Canada a Free Methodist Society was organized and the church, formerly built by the regular Methodists, was purchased, but we cannot learn when. The church is small in membership, there being now only about 17 persons, with C. W. Bacon, pastor.
The first regular Baptist Church, located at Bethany Center, was organized May 7, 1820, with 26 members, and John Blain was its pastor. In 1826 a building was erected, and the same is still occupied by the society. They now have 58 members, and Rev. T. M. Scarff is the pastor. Their property is valued at $2,000. The Sunday-school, organized in 1829, now has about 75 members.

October 20, 1829, a Presbyterian Church was organized at Bethany Center by Messrs. Whiting, Watts, Bliss, and a few others. Rev. W. Whiting was the first pastor. They built a structure, of wood, in 1839. At present they have 50 members, and about 60 scholars in the Sunday-school.

On June 17, 1817, a Congregational church was organized at East Bethany by John Bliss, a missionary from Connecticut, with 11 members. Their first pastor was Rev. Reuben Hard, who came in 1823. The society built a brick edifice in 1824, costing about $3,000. The same year they adopted the Presbyterian form of government. In 1825 there were 23 members; in 1834, 58; in 1843, 65; and in 1846, 35. The ministers have been Revs. Wilcox, Kniffin, Miles, Smaller, Clark, Barris, and others. The membership is now only 16, and the Sunday-school has about 70 scholars. The Rev. W. M. Modestti is pastor.

A protestant Episcopal church was built about 1826 called Zion church. At the laying of the corner-stone, July 4th, Judge Mitchell delivered the oration, and Masonic ceremonies aided in making the occasion interesting. In 1845 Bishop Delancey visited the church, at which time Rev. M. Oaks was the minister. A Rev. Mr. Atwater was a minister at one time, but we fail to learn but little about the society.

The following are names of some of the early settlers of Bethany, with the date of settlement:

BYRON.

BYRON was formed from Bergen, April 4, 1820, and named in honor of Lord Byron. It lies in the north border of the county, and is bounded on the north by Orleans County, east by Bergen, south by Le Roy and Stafford, and west by Batavia and Elba. The surface is gently undulating, and the soil a fine gravelly and sandy loam. The streams are Black, Silver, and Bigelow creeks. On Black Creek, a short distance north of Byron, is found a remarkable sulphur spring, emitting carbureted hydrogen gas. In the southwest part of the town is found an acid spring, known as the "Sour Spring." This spring issues from an elevation four or five feet above the plain, and is about 200 feet long by 100 feet broad. Beck, in his Mineralogy, says: "The strength of the acid is increased by drought, and in some places it is quite concentrated and nearly dry in its combination with the charred, vegetable coat, which everywhere covers the hillock to a depth of from five to forty inches."

This town is a portion of the Connecticut tract (of the Morris Reserve) and the Pultney estate or tract. A portion of these tracts is also included in the town of Bergen. There are in all 200 original lots or subdivisions of these tracts in this town, and they average about 100 acres each.

Among the first happenings was the settlement of Benham Preston, on lot 197, in 1807 or 1808. A Mr. Hoskins and Elisha Taylor, from Otsego County, settled on lot 186, in 1808. Elisha Miller, from Pennsylvania, and Wheaton Carpenter, from Rhode Island, located on lot 2, in 1809. Nathan Holt came from Otsego County, and located in 1810. Asa Merrill emigrated from Oneida County, and located in 1811. The first child born was a son of Elisha Taylor, in 1809. The first marriage was that of Samuel Montgomery and Polly Parks, in 1811; and the first death that of Mr. Hoskins. Chester T. Holbrook taught the first school, in 1810 or 1811. Ira Newburg kept the first inn, in 1815, and Amos Hewitt the first store, in 1813. William Shepherd erected the first saw-mill, in 1813, and Asa Williams the first grist-mill, in 1814. It is claimed that the first tangible spirit manifestation on record, of what is now called modern spiritualism, was had in this township. A "Byron Library Society" was organized May 9, 1824, by the literary pioneers of that period. Miles G. White, with his father, came in 1828, and kept an hotel at Pumpkin Hill, or North Byron, for five years. He lived here 52 years. Samuel Parker built the first mill in town, about 1809.

We here note the names, with dates of settlement, of many of those who located in Byron prior to 1820, as follows:

In 1806, Samuel and Sherrard Parker. In 1807, Benoni Gaines and Benham Preston. In 1808, Wheaton Carpenter, Elijah Loomis, and Elisha Miller. In 1809, Asahel

North Byron is a hamlet situated one mile north of Byron Center, and was of some little importance before the railroad passed through, as there was business for an hotel in early times. It now contains only a few houses. For some time it went by the name of "Pumpkin Hill," so-named by Moses Gillian, from the fact that a tavern sign, at that place, in shape and color resembled a pumpkin.

South Byron is a post village in the southern part of the town, on the N. Y. C. & H. R. Railroad. It has a flourishing grain market, where Boynton, Prentice & Co. do an extensive produce business, two or three stores, one hotel, one church (Methodist Episcopal), a good school, and a population of about 300 inhabitants. Erastus Cash was the first postmaster. The place was for some time called "Brusselville," named from the fact that an early settler, Elijah Shumway, had a "brussel head."

Byron Center (Byron p. o.) is located near the center of the township, on Black Creek, and on the West Shore Railroad. This little village has mainly sprung into existence since the advent of the railroad. It is especially noted as the principal and largest pork market in Genesee County, and also as a leading grain market. The village contains a population of about 300, six or eight stores of all kinds, an iron foundry and manufactory of agricultural implements, two flouring-mills, one hotel, two church edifices (Presbyterian and German), a well sustained school, and the usual complement of mechanics and artisans.

McElver & Sons' agricultural works are located at Byron Center. Their machinery is driven by steam-power. The firm manufactures agricultural implements, and do a general job and repairing work in castings, etc.

Genesee mills, originally built by James Taggart, are located on Black Creek, about half a mile east of Byron Center. McKenzie & Bennett are the present proprietors. The creek, with steam as auxiliary, furnishes ample power to turn all the machinery. The mills are furnished with seven sets of rolls for flouring and five runs of stones, and have a capacity of 50 barrels of flour and 500 bushels of provender per day. These mills were built by Rowley H. Douglass in 1880, and furnished with new and improved machinery for stone mills only. Since then rollers have been added, and, thus equipped, McKenzie & Bennett now turn out work of superior quality. Mr. Bennett is a practical miller and gives his whole attention to the business.
BYRON.

Byron cheese factory, the first erected in the county, was built in 1867 by a stock company. It receives the milk from 224 cows, and manufactures cheese for the English market. The property is now owned by Erastus H. Norton, of Byron Center, with H. C. Norton as salesman, and Alfred Stevens, cheesemaker. The factory is located about three-quarters of a mile west and south of Byron Center.

In 1868 there were in business in the town of Byron the following persons: Lafayette Carpenter, a physician, miller, and farmer; Earl B. Lounsbury, a physician and surgeon; Seaver, Hall & Co., merchants; J. W. Seaver, postmaster; Holden T. Miller, supervisor and proprietor of a general store; C. Leonard, hotel and stage proprietor; Dr. A. C. Hall, an eclectic physician and surgeon, at South Byron; Cooper & McCracken, harness dealers; W. Coward, a dealer in boots and shoes; J. B. House, hotel-keeper; John Rambo, a justice of the peace and dealer in stoves; B. J. Spafford, store-keeper, and also postmaster; and Loren N. Green, at North Byron, proprietor of the flouring-mills.

John W. Goodliffe is a carpenter and joiner, builder of all kinds of wooden cisterns, and a cidemaker. He has a 30x50 three story building, where he makes 10 barrels per day. He has all the latest improvements for manufacturing refined cider and vinegar, and has also a feed-mill.

Religion.—The first religious services were held in 1809 by Rev. Royal Phelps, of the Presbyterian Church, from Cayuga County. The First Congregational Church of Byron was organized in 1818, by Rev. Herman Halsey, with 11 members. A church was built, of wood, in 1830, and later was enlarged by additions. Rev. Mr. Halsey was the stated supply until 1826. In 1830 there were 27 members; in 1831, 162; and up to this time Revs. W. P. Kendrick, Lot B. Sullivan, and Lewis Cheeseman were the different pastors. Rev. B. B. Gray then supplied the pulpit for three and one-half years, Abelyn Sedgwick for one year, Ebor Child for four years, F. Danforth for one year, and J. B. Preston from 1844 to 1846, when there were 186 members. The society was afterwards called Presbyterian, and still remains of that faith. The number of members now is 90. They have no pastor. The church property is valued at about $8,000. Harry C. Norton is the superintendent of the Sunday-school, which has about 150 members.

The First Methodist Episcopal Church was first established at Byron Center, but they have no organization at that place at present.

The Second Methodist Episcopal Church is located at South Byron. The first meeting was September 26, 1842, when John Cook and others were present. Alva Wright was the first pastor. The church was erected in 1853 at a cost of about $2,500; the present value of the property is $4,200. There are about 43 members, and Rev. Edward W. Harnel is the pastor. They have a Sunday-school of about 300 scholars.

A Baptist Church at Byron Center was organized in 1810, but was long since disbanded.
The Freewill Baptist Church at North Byron was organized in 1820 by Rev. Nathaniel Brown and Harmon Jenkins, and a church erected in 1833, of wood. They now have 100 members, and about 100 scholars in the Sunday school. Rev. A. B. Loomis is the pastor. Their church property is worth about $4,500.

The Concordia German Evangelical Lutheran Church, in the eastern part of the town, was organized September 25, 1889, by Rev. L. Gross. There are 33 members, and they have just erected a beautiful house of worship at a cost of $1,200.

For a number of years a Grange was in successful operation in Byron, but after a time the interest died out, and the organization was finally abandoned. In March, 1890, the matter was revived, and the 20th of that month the old lodge was reorganized with the following officers: W. S. Green, master; J. C. Walker, Overseer; J. G. Todd, treasurer; I. W. White, secretary; and J. G. Terry, chaplain.

Nearly every pioneer has his "bear stories," and were all these to be repeated here they would, like Mark Twain's misfortunes, "be somewhat monotonous." One, however, may be related. George Batcheller, about 40 years ago, went some distance into Tonawanda swamp with a neighbor, to assist in bringing out a bear which he had killed. On his way the nails of his boot-heel grated upon something which gave forth a metallic sound. On examination he found that some moss had been scraped from what proved to be a large bear-trap. It was lying with its jaws downward, nearly covered with muck, and the roots of trees had grown through the jaws and springs in all directions. One of these, a black ash root, was nearly as large as a man's wrist. The trap was but very little corroded. Some years afterwards Mr. Batcheller learned from a man who assisted the owner of the trap in his hunt that, 22 years previous to the finding of it, it was set in the usual way, with a clog attached, in this town (Byron); that a bear was caught in it; that they followed his trail through a light snow seven or eight miles to within 80 rods of where the trap was found; and that they here abandoned the pursuit because night was approaching, and the melting of the snow rendered the trail indistinct. Mr. Batcheller still has the trap in his possession.

Wheaton Carpenter was born in Scituate, R. I., in 1788. At mature age he went to Scranton, Pa., then a wilderness, and resided a few years, and married there Nancy Dickerson. In 1808 he, in company with Elisha Miller, came to Byron on foot, with knapsacks on their backs, in which they carried their provisions for the long and tiresome journey. Mr. Carpenter located a farm of 100 acres about one-half mile southwest of Byron Center. He then returned to Scranton, and two years later came with his wife and two infant daughters to the wilderness of Byron. In the meantime his claim was forfeited, and he procured another of 100 acres, 80 rods west of a log tavern kept by Ben Hall, on Black Creek, where he resided until the ensuing spring (1811), when a freshet swept away his pig, fowls, and all movable property, and left only his cow and horse. Thus warned off he never returned, and never again owned real estate in Byron. He participated in the War of 1812, and went with the militia to Buffalo when they were called out. He was a miller and resided in "Sodom," a location in Byron, and in the cold season of 1816 found his increased family destitute. On a Monday morning he wended his way to where A. W. Graves's flouring-mill is now located, and where was one of the most primitive grist-mills, constructed of logs and without an iron cog wheel in it; in fact nothing but wooden trundle-heads to drive the stones, which were made of a rock from an adjacent field. He turned the bolt with one hand and fed it with the other. This mill was built by one Williams and was the first in town. He engaged to run this complicated machine for half the toll, and at once went to work, remaining until Saturday, when he returned to his family with meal, who all this time knew nothing of his whereabouts. He found his wife roasting a few beans for her children's supper, the last edible morsel in the house. On Monday he removed his family to the vicinity of the mill, and fortunately placed them beyond want the remainder of their lives. He continued a miller for 40 years, in different parts of Genesee County, and died in Byron, at the house of his daughter, Mrs. Nancy Gaines, in the fall of 1876, aged 88 years. His son, M. D. L. Carpenter, born in 1827, resides one-fourth of a mile from North Byron.

Jacob Bushman, son of John, a native of Pennsylvania, was born in Cayuga County, April 1, 1795. He married Martha Halstead, and in 1823 came to Byron, settling on the Bushman farm, so-called, near South Byron. He first had 50 acres, which was finally increased to 250. He was a good financier, honest, and upright. They were members of the Christian Church, and gave liberally to its support. He held several town offices. Mr. Bushman's wife died May 17, 1843. They were parents of 13 children, nine of whom are now living, viz.: Mary, in Wisconsin; Henry; Lany, who married Henry S. Philleo, a farmer; Andrew, who married Rachel M. Jones; Harriet, who married John Brainard, and is now a widow; Angeline (Mrs. Humphrey); Winslow J., in Wisconsin; Byron, a mechanic; and Martha J. (Mrs. C. L. Benham), of Le Roy. Henry Bushman, born in Scipio, January 18, 1821, came to Byron with his parents when three years old. He was reared a farmer, was educated at the district schools, and October 1, 1846, married Sarah J. Mills, of Covington, N. Y., and settled in Perry, N. Y., where he resided two years. He returned to Byron to the Bushman homestead in 1854, where he resided until 1872, when he retired to his pleasant home in South Byron, where he now resides. He is an influential and respected citizen, and has served as assessor for nine years. The family are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mr. Bushman is an earnest Republican. Of their children Mary E. (Mrs. Charles Kellogg) resides with her husband on the homestead, and Nettie A. married J. F. Rose, a mechanic, of South Byron.
John Bean, a native of Vermont, came to Stafford in 1810, resided there a few years, and finally settled in Byron. He was an extensive trader, owned much live stock and real estate near South Byron, and was engaged in dealing in live stock for the Boston market. After the completion of the railroad he built a store house and dealt largely in grain and general merchandise. With all his large transactions he was regarded as being strictly honest, liberal to the poor, and a strict observer of the Sabbath. He died in 1883, aged 84 years. His son has been a station agent since 1858, and was also a merchant at one time.

Milton Allen is an old resident of Byron. He came in 1822, married Betsey Strong, and followed the masons' trade and farming. He has held several public offices, and aided in building up the town by his labors and influence for good. He is now living, aged 85 years.

James M. Bower, son of Francis and Catharine (Manahan) Bower, was born May 11, 1826, and was reared on his father's farm and educated in the common school. In 1850 he married, first, Parnell, daughter of Erastus Cash and settled on a farm about a mile east of Byron Center, where he resided to the close of his life, December 23, 1884. His wife died February 22, 1859, and October 8, 1863 he married Celinda Cash, a sister of his first wife, who survives him, and resides on the farm where he first settled. His first wife bore him one son, who died in early childhood. The children by the second marriage are twins, Albert C. and Arthur E., who are students at Cary Seminary, Oakfield. Mr. Bower was an enterprising, industrious, and progressive farmer, who gave close attention to his farm and made it better year by year. He was a man of sterling integrity, strictly honest, and highly respected, a thorough temperance man, a genial companion, and kind and generous to the poor and needy.

Pierpont E. Bull came from Stephentown in 1826, settling on the farm where his daughter, Rebecca W. Bull, now lives. He was a farmer and had two daughters, Rebecca W. and Mrs. Elizabeth M. Barker, of Clarendon, Orleans County. He died in Byron in 1868.

Richard G. Brown, born in Massachusetts in 1799, removed to Verona, N. Y., with his father's family as early as 1804, or earlier. In 1813 the family again moved westward, and settled in the woods near the Rock school house. His father built a log cabin, and resided in Byron until 1839, when the spirit of adventure took him to the far West again, and he settled in Oakland County, Mich., where he died in 1857, aged 82 years. Mr. Brown was reared a farmer, and had a limited common school education. In 1824 he married Laura, daughter of Samuel Searls, of Byron, and moved his bride and her effects to his log house in the woods, on lot 124, which he had previously built. In 1829 he sold his first "pitch," and removed to a log house, and a larger and better farm, on lot 110, where he resided until 1850, when he built a fine farm house which is now the home of his son, M. B. C. Brown. Here he resided the remainder of his business life. He sold the homestead to his son in 1877, and died at North Byron, February 2, 1885, aged nearly 86 years. He was a man of medium stature, active and hardy, and a great worker. Besides clearing his own farm he felled the timber, and cut it up in lengths for logging, on 100 acres for his neighbors. Mr Brown was a worthy member of the Methodist Church of Byron Center as long as it existed. Later united with the Free Baptist Church at North Byron, and gave to it his hearty support. He was a man who, when he had formed an opinion, seldom changed, but always strove to pursue the right.

William F. Brown, third child of Richard G. and Laura (Searls) Brown, was born in the log cabin on lot 110, in June, 1829, and was brought up at hard labor and educated in the common schools. December 18, 1851, he married Hannah S. Benton, of Byron, and settled on a part of lot 122. He has always been a farmer. In the spring of 1871 he removed to the farm of 170 acres, on lots 99 and 111, where he now resides. Mr. Brown is a pushing, enterprising, business manager and farmer. He has built a fine set of buildings on each of the farms that he has owned, and an especially elegant set at his present pleasant home. As a man he is courteous and affable, an obliging neighbor, and a kind, indulgent husband and father. He is a staunch Republican, but not an office-seeker. He has the confidence of his townsmen, and has consented to act as their assessor four years. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have had two children, Mary E. and Edwin B. Edwin B. married Mary E. Swan, is a farmer adjoining his father, and has two daughters. Mary E. died in 1879, at the early age of 16 years and six months.

Melville B. C. Brown, son of Richard G Brown, was also born in the log cabin on lot 110, November 7, 1833, and was educated in the common schools and early taught industrious habits. January 25, 1877, he married Mrs. Amy (Merrill) Brown, widow of his brother George C., and brought his wife to the homestead, which he was conducting. In April, 1877, he purchased the farm of his father, which has been his home from his birth. Mr. Brown is a good farmer, and gives his whole attention to the cultivation of his fine farm of 155 acres. He is an extensive reader, a close observer, and has acquired a fund of practical information. In influence and excellence of character he well sustains the high reputation of the Brown family of Byron. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are parents of one son, Searls G. Mr. Brown was raised a Democrat, voted for Millard Fillmore in 1856 and for Abraham Lincoln in 1860, and remained a thorough Republican until 1888, when his temperance principles induced him to join the ranks of the prohibitionists.

Abner Chase was born November 9, 1777. He married and settled in Oneida County, and about 1816 removed to Byron and settled in the woods where his grandson now lives. He first lived in a log house, and later he built a stone residence, which was taken down about 1856. The present framed house was then erected by his son, Al S. Chase. It is claimed that he owned the first team of horses in the neighborhood, and hauled wheat to Rochester when it brought only two shillings and sixpence per bushel. He was many years a magistrate and the trial justice, and held court in the kitchen of his log cabin and officiated at numerous weddings. He was a Mason until the Morgan excitement, when he left the order. Mr. Chase was a man highly respected and prominent in all town affairs. He died June 2, 1844, aged 66 years. His wife, Matilda C. Chase, died December 26, 1855, aged 77 years. They had four sons and three daughters, all deceased. His youngest child, Ai S., was reared on the home farm, married Mary A., daughter of Benjamin Bower, and always resided on the Chase homestead. He was an industrious, quiet man, and gave his whole attention to his farm and the care of his family. He never enjoyed robust health, but by good management and the aid of his oldest son he kept his farm in good condition. He died May 24, 1870, aged 54 years. His widow still survives and resides with her youngest child, H. B. Chase, on the homestead. They had born to them three daughters, all deceased, and two sons, Charles O. and Heber Burdett. Charles O. Chase is a farmer in Byron.

Asahel Cook, in the summer of 1809, started from his home in the town of Marcellus, Onondaga County, to go to the then "far West," to find for himself and family a new home. He came to Western New York, passing through what is now the city of Rochester, and selected a location in what is now the town of Byron. He bought a farm of 87 acres of the Holland Land Co., paying, or agreeing to pay, $4.50 per acre, the same price for which he could have purchased as he passed through Rochester, but considered that district too low and wet. There was only about one acre cleared on this lot, or on the territory of several hundred acres adjoining. He contracted, before returning home, with Elijah Loomis for the erection of a cheap building for a temporary home, and later for a more substantial log house. In the winter of 1810, with his wife and three sons, Elias, David, and Reuben, and two daughters, and all his effects, he moved by ox-team and sled to his new home, the eldest boy, Elias, being in his 11th year, and Reuben, the youngest, only six.

In the War of 1812 their nearness to the frontier, and their unprotected condition, rendered them naturally fearful and watchful, and when the report came that the Indians were on the "war path" and coming from Buffalo they were panic stricken, and with almost the entire neighborhood started for places of more security. He and his family, by ox-team and sled, went by Stafford, main road, as far as a hotel, between Le Roy and Caledonia, where they found soldiers quartered. They staid there until the next morning, when the good news came that they were in no immediate danger, and the third day found them again at home, there being about 18 inches of snow on the ground. Here, under these circumstances, in an almost unbroken forest, with few and scattered neighbors, he commenced the establishment of a Christian home, and the efforts toward a living or a fortune. Being a shoemaker by trade, as neighbors appeared he found employment and opportunity to earn something toward his support, and by industry and economy secured his home.
Mr. Cook and his wife became members of the First Congregational Church of the town, thus identifying themselves with the religious interests of the community. He was born in 1760, and died in 1834, aged 74 years. The three brothers, on reaching maturity, associated together in the manufacture of potash quite extensively, on the lot on which they lived, using the ashes they made in clearing their own property, and also gathering them from the country surrounding, finding a market for the potash in Batavia and at the canal. The two brothers, David and Reuben, finally located on lots adjoining the eldest, retaining the original lot and also adding another of about the same size.

Elias Cook started about the first—if not the first—nursery (mostly apple stock) grown in the county, from which many thrifty bearing trees are now standing in different parts of the county. He also, in 1862, commenced the planting of one of the largest apple orchards in the county, on the original farm which 50 years before was covered by dense forests. His second marriage was to Elizabeth Holmes, in 1833. Three children were born to them, two of whom are now living, viz.: Mrs. Dr. G. U. Gleason and Charles E. The latter still retains the homestead, on which he resides. Besides regular farming Mr. Cook is engaged quite extensively in the cultivation of standard fruits, having about 50 acres, 2,000 bearing apple trees, 2,000 dwarf and standard pears, and quince and other fruits. Mr. Cook is also the inventor of a fruit gatherer.

Irving D. Cook, son of David and Tabitha (Ballard) Cook, was born in Byron, May 5, 1829, in the house where he now resides, and where he has always lived. He was reared a farmer, and was educated in the common schools and the academy of Alexander. November 10, 1859, he married Julia A. Holmes, of Illinois. Mr. Cook's father died when he was but four years old, and his mother, a lady of great energy and a fine manager, kept her family together and educated them. He was her oldest son, and at the early age of 18 years the management of the farm was placed in his hands. When Mr. Cook was about 21 years of age he, in company with his brother, Marshall N., bought the interest of their sisters in the farm, and conducted it and another farm, which they had purchased in company, until the close of the war in 1865, when he bought his brother's interest in the homestead, and is now its sole owner. Mr. Cook is a thorough farmer and a close thinker. He has contributed to the New York Tribune, the Cultivator, the Rural New Yorker, and the Ohio Farmer. He is one of the reliable and trusted citizens of Byron, and has a large acquaintance with leading citizens and agriculturists in Genesee County, by whom he is highly respected. Mr. and Mrs. Cook are parents of five children, viz.: Edwin I., who has been in the employ of the U. S. postal service the past six years; Clara H., who married William S. Greene, a farmer in Byron; Ella F., a music teacher in Cottage Seminary, Clinton, N. Y.; Julia E., who resides with her parents; and Irving C. H., a student at Oberlin College, Ohio, where his brother and all of his sisters have been educated.

Capt. Marshall N. Cook, son of David, was born in Byron in 1833, and was educated in the common schools with a few terms in the academies. His youth was spent on the farm in Byron and at the old home until August, 1862, when he enlisted in Co. I, 129th N. Y. Inf., and went to the front as first lieutenant of his company. He was promoted captain June 3, 1864, led his command until the close of the war, and was mustered out of service and honorably discharged June 12, 1865. In the winter of 1862 and '63 the 129th Regiment was transferred from the infantry to the artillery service, and became the 8th N. Y. H. A., and remained in Baltimore until May 15, 1864, when the regiment joined the Army of the Potomac. Capt. Cook led his company in the battles of Spottsylvania, North Anna, Cold Harbor, and Hatcher's Run, was at the siege of Petersburg, followed the retreating army of Gen. Lee until his surrender, and was nine consecutive days under fire in a severe engagement at Clover Hill. Capt. Cook received a severe wound at the battle of Cold Harbor, and barely escaped with his life. At the same engagement his captain and seven men of his company were killed and 30 wounded. At the close of the war he returned to Byron, engaged in farming four years, was a general merchant the ensuing five years, was in Albany 14 months as assistant superintendent of tool boys, was a general agent and traveling salesman for agricultural implements, and has for the last two years given his attention to fruit growing and gardening on his fine place in South Byron, which he has owned the past 12 years. February 13, 1867, he married E. Maria Clark, by whom he has two daughters.

Capt. Nathan Cash, son of Daniel and Mary (Tracy) Cash, was born in Orange County, N. Y. His father was from Pittston, Pa., a survivor of the celebrated Wyoming massacre. He had volunteered to go to Connecticut, and was thus saved, as were also his family. Nathan Cash married Parnell Southworth, came to the Holland Purchase about 1812, and settled in the north part of Stafford and engaged in farming. Being a carpenter he erected his own buildings. He lived there until his death in 1856. His granddaughter, Mrs. Bennett Waterman, occupies the old homestead. He was a public-spirited man, was a promoter of schools and churches, and was trusted to offices of responsibility. A daughter, Mrs. Phoebe Bassett, lives in Stafford, aged 83 years. Erastus, a son, born in 1798, came with his parents to this town, and frequently had as high as 100 acres of wheat harvested with sickles and cradles. He married Achsah Deming, of Livingston County, whose father settled here in 1805. Mr. Cash settled in Stafford in 1826, and in 1836 located in South Byron, where his daughter Ella (Mrs. George G. Chick) now lives. He died in 1875, and his wife in 1887. Their daughter Anna married John H. Rapp, of Byron, and Celinda, widow of James M. Bower, lives in Byron. Mr. Cash, besides cultivating over 400 acres of land, was engaged in the manufacture of fertilizing plaster. In 1847 he built a large stone flouring-mill in South Byron, which was soon burnt. He was the first postmaster of South Byron, was a temperance man, and an anti-slavery Democrat, but joined the Republican party and supported all war measures. He was a man of great weight in all benevolent and worthy enterprises, and a member of the Presbyterian Church, as was also his family. Andrew, D. Cash, a son, married Sally F. Ward, and died in 1858, aged 32 years. She died in 1885. Parnell, a daughter of Andrew, married James Bower, and died in 1859.

William H. Deming was born November 6, 1804, in Berkshire County, Mass., and emigrated to Monroe County, N. Y., with his parents in 1812. He learned the trade of building fanning-mills of his brother-in-law. About 1827 or 1828 he married Sally Costelin, and settled in Byron Center, engaging in wagonmaking. He finally engaged in farming in connection with wagonmaking, and removed to the farm now owned by Mrs. George McDaniels, where he built the farm buildings. Here he spent the most of his business life. He again sold out, and removed to a farm north of Byron Center, where he resided until his death in May, 1889, aged 84 years. Mr. Deming was one of the prominent men in the society where he resided, and commanded the respect of all who knew him. He held the office of assessor several years, was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and for years was one of its trustees. Three of his six children are living, viz.: Henry D., Sophronia, and Sarah Helen. Henry D. married Delia A., daughter of Nat Spafford, who died in 1864. She bore him one son, William H., who resides with his father. In 1866 Mr. Deming married, second, Marion L. Hume, who bore him a daughter, Fanny Edith, and a son, Charles Hume, both of whom reside with their father. Mrs. Deming, second, died June 30, 1887. Mr. Deming has always given his attention to cultivating and improving his farm.

Andrew Dibble, born in Massachusetts, March 23, 1777, married Piercy Dodge, October 24, 1799, who was born May 20, 1783. He settled on a farm, where he resided until 1816, when he removed to Byron and located on a farm three-quarters of a mile east of Byron Center, where he resided until about 1833, when he built a comfortable house for the Andrew brothers, who were Thompsonian doctors who practiced on a contract for him by the year. Mr. Dibble learned their system of practice, received a diploma, practiced with and succeeded them, and continued in practice over 40 years. He died at the great age of 98 years, February 6, 1875. He possessed great physical vigor, energy, and courage, and led an active life. His wife died November 6, 1864, after a married life of 65 years. They had born to them 17 children, 11 of whom grew to maturity, and only Joseph D., born February 13, 1817, resides in Byron, on a part of the old homestead.

Silvanus Dillingham, of English descent, son of John, was born June 6, 1771. He was twice married, and was the father of 12 children. In 1824 he went "West" from Saratoga County, N. Y., and settled on a new farm in Caledonia, where he resided until his death, October 17, 1830, aged 59 years. He was a member of the Society of Friends, was a worthy citizen, and carried on the dual occupation of farmer and carpenter. His son, Stephen Dillingham, was but 15 years old when he settled in Caledonia. He remained with his father, and at his death he assumed the debts against the farm, which he paid off and gave a home to his mother and younger brothers and sisters. He married Mrs. Anna (Shotwell) Hoag, a few years after which he sold the homestead and settled on a farm in Elba. Several years later he sold a portion of the farm, including the buildings, and built a new set on the remaining 100 acres, where he resided until he died, April 9, 1881, aged over 72 years. Mr. Dillingham was an exemplary member of the Society of Friends. Mrs. Dillingham survived her husband about six months. Railroad, was active in public affairs, and represented his county in the legislature of 1838-39. Loreen, the oldest son of Andrew, was born in New Lebanon in 1822. While a young man he took charge of his father's farm and property, and resided here all his life. In 1852 he married Abigail, daughter of Hon. Levi Fisk. cylinder threshing machine, the first one being a cylinder of hard wood, with hickory teeth. The concave was only a four-inch scantling, with teeth of the same kind, and driven by a rope that passed over a grooved pulley attached to the cylinder. He continued improvements until he perfected his machines, and erected the Joseph Hall works in Rochester, and for 50 years his machine was the standard model for all implements of this kind built in the United States and Canada. Andrew J. Hall learned the trade of machinist in his father’s manufactory, and remained there until the latter’s death in 1865. In the spring of 1866 he removed to he emigrated to this town, bought the improvements of three acres of Joseph Barker, and took a contract for the farm where he spent the remainder of his life, and where his son Gordon now lives. He lived in a log cabin until 1826, when he built a frame house. He lived plain and wore clothes which were spun and woven by his wife. He gave his influence to build school-houses and churches, and was a member of the Presbyterian Church and did his share towards its support. His wife

Aaron Miller about 1759 moved from Weathersfield, Conn., to Pittsfield, Mass. He had a son, Aaron, who fought at Bunker Hill, German Flats, and Stillwater, and was at the siege of Yorktown. After leaving the army he became a Methodist preacher, a blacksmith, and an edge-tool maker. He was the father of Dewey Miller, whose narrative of his life, in his own words, is as follows:

"I was born October 8, 1787, at Pittsfield, Berkshire County, Mass. My father was born in Connecticut and was brought up in Pittsfield when there were no schools. His mother taught him to read in words of two syllables, which was his only schooling. He was a blacksmith by trade and a maker of edge tools. I helped him when quite young, and we made the hoes and some other tools which I afterwards used on my farm here in Byron. When I was between five and six years of age we came to Burlington, Otsego County, and after eight years removed to Brookfield, Madison County. It was from there, in 1811, that I started with an ox-team and sild. and after a two weeks' journey reached this town. I purchased from a man named Gillam land, which is now a part of the Warboys farm, for $50. While grinding my axe at Asa Merrill's a young man named Sanford, from Vermont, came along and I sold him my land for $50. I sold because I found that the land was not crossed by Black Creek, as I had supposed when I bought it. In March, 1812, I took up the land upon which I am now living.

"There are many things that occurred at about that time which I well remember. A man named Shepherd, living about where James Mills does now, wished me to go in with him and build a new mill. I refused, as I did not think it would pay. He built it himself, and the mill cleared expenses and paid for itself the first year. Our nearest grist-mill then was Churchville, and the nearest market Rochester, where we had to take two shillings sixpence per bushel for our wheat and $2.50 per hundred for pork. The cotton cloth which we brought home cost us 50 cents per yard, cotton yarn a dollar a pound, salt $5 a barrel, and other things in proportion. When I came here there were no roads marked out; only paths here and there. There was no church service about here. When I went back to Brookfield I attended the Methodist Conference, about 20 miles from father's. There I fell in with a circuit preacher named Loren Grant, who came here to preach for us. The first store that I can remember was in the building which Mr. Knapp now uses for a barn. In 1813 I fenced off a piece of land and planted a peach pit in every corner of the fence. I recollect a scare which we had here during the War of 1812. A neighbor who came from Batavia brought home the report that 1,500 Indians were at Black Rock, and would come down through here to butcher us all. The people gathered and took measures for defense. It was afterwards found that the 1,500 Indians were awaiting their revenue from the British government and had no intention of coming this way. I was married, August 1, 1813, to Miss Electa Sanford, of Pownell, Vt. I lived with her, with never a cross word, for seven years, seven months, and seven days. I had two children by this wife—Aaron, now a machinist in Brockport, and Lucy. One year after the death of my first wife I married her sister, Mrs. Merrill, by whom I had four children, three of whom—Albert, John, and Emily—are now living. The fourth, Electa, is dead. I lived four years with my daughter Electa, who married Benjamin Squires, of Wyoming County. My daughter Emily married Mr. Agard, who was then a clerk in Rochester, but removed soon after marriage to Rockford, Ill., where they now live. I was converted 90 years ago, and four years later joined the Methodist Church. After marrying my second wife I became a Freewill Baptist, in which church I have since remained. I have always been a Republican.

Dewey Miller died November 20, 1887, aged 100 years and one month, at the home of his son, A. D. Miller, who lives in the northeastern part of Byron.

Elisha Miller came to Byron (then included in the town of Bergen) on foot, with a knapsack on his back, from Providence, Lucerne County, Pa., in the spring of 1809, and selected a farm about two miles west of Byron Center. He cleared a field, built a log house, and in the fall returned to Pennsylvania. He married Martha Tripp, and in 1810 brought his bride to his cabin in the woods. On this farm these pioneers spent the remainder of their lives. For a long time they were guided in their short and necessary journeys by marked trees. They worked hard, lived prudent, and wore homespun, which Mrs. Miller spun and wove. In addition she wove for her neighbors. They owned a farm of 236 acres, and in 1817 they built a frame house, which is still in good preservation, and occupied. Their children were Hamilton, a farmer, who married Jennette Culver, settled on 50 acres adjoining his father, and died in December, 1881; Nancy, who married Lavinus A. Dibble, settled near her father, and died in November, 1853; and Wheaton S., born December 28, 1817, who was raised on his father's farm, obtained an academic education, and chose the profession of law, and prepared for admission to the bar, but on account of defective eyes declined to be admitted. He was a safe and able adviser in law matters, and often practiced in the lower courts. February 13, 1840, he married Emarett Southworth, of Bergen, daughter of Isaac and Rachel (Tone) Southworth, and settled on the Miller homestead, which is still owned by his heirs. Mr. Miller was a man of comprehensive business ability, and in addition to conducting his farm he was early a large and successful dealer in live stock and farmers' produce. Before the construction of the railroad he drove his cattle and hogs to Albany. He served his town as supervisor and magistrate, and also settled several large estates. He was a peacemaker and advised his neighbors to settle disputes rather than resort to law. At the time of his death he was the largest land owner in Byron. He died May 28, 1864, at the age of 46. In politics he was an old line Whig, and joined the Republican party at its organization. During the war he was enthusiastic in the support of the government. Mr. and Mrs. Miller were parents of 10 children, of whom nine are now living, and all reside in Genesee County, viz.: Holden T., cashier of the Bank of Batavia; Elisha H., of the firm of F. T. & E. H. Miller, insurance agents and produce and coal dealers; Edwin S., a farmer, and produce and coal dealer in Bergen; Hon. Francis T., of the firm F. T. & E. H. Miller, and an extensive farmer and member of the State legislature of 1890; Martha N. (Mrs. George W. Prentice), of South Byron; Arietta L. (Mrs. W. H. Adams), of Byron Center; Mary J. (Mrs. George G. Humphrey), of South Byron; Rachel E. (Mrs. Charles H. Coward), whose husband is a successful farmer near Byron Center; and Andrew T., assistant cashier of the Bank of Batavia. Elisha H. Miller, born January 3, 1844, married Lydia L., daughter of George W. Peckham, of Byron, and they have three children. Mr. Miller has served his town as supervisor four consecutive years, and was chairman of the board two years. He has also officiated as justice of the peace the last seven years. Hon. Francis T. Miller, born October 16, 1847, married Julia A., daughter of James D. Benham, by whom he has seven children, now living. He is deservedly popular with the people of Genesee County. He has been honored with the office of supervisor three terms, assessor three years, and is now the representative of his county in the State legislature. He and his four brothers, and three of his four brothers-in-law, are staunch Republicans, and all are doing their party good and active service.

In 1875 he removed to Wheatland, Monroe County, where he is now engaged in farming. His son, Maj. H. W. Merrill, was born on the Merrill homestead, September 25, 1854, was reared a farmer, and married Nettie Warboys, February 21, 1878. Ezra S. being but three years old at his father's death, he made his home with an uncle, Arzy. He had a limited education, taught school, and April 22, 1847, married Mary, daughter of Abner and Irene (Miller) Hitchcock. They settled on the farm he had bought, where his son Abner J. now lives, and where he resided until his death, August 25, 1881, aged 66 years. Mrs. Merrill died November 3, 1878. Mr. Merrill was a prominent man in his town, a Republican, but not an office-seeker. He was always a farmer, and was enterprising, economical, and industrious, and quite successful. He was a man of sterling integrity, and was highly respected. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill are Milan Daniel, a fruit grower and florist residing in South Haven, Mich., who married Mary I. Main, of Michigan; Ellen I., who lives with her brother on the homestead; and Abner J., who married Mary L. Munger, February 18, 1885, and who, soon after his father's death, bought the homestead of the heirs and lives on the place where he and his brother and sister were born, and where he has always resided.

He came on foot in 1812 to Stafford, secured 100 acres of land, built a cabin, cleared two acres, and planted it with corn, “Indian style.” He returned to Massachusetts, and came again in the fall with a pair of oxen, and found a good crop of corn ready to harvest. Here he remained and died in 1859, aged 88 years. Mrs. Prentice died in 1858. Their seventh child, Cyrus Prentice, was born in Massachusetts, June 20, 1812, came to Stafford in his mother’s arms, and has always resided in Genesee County near the old home. He had more days at work than days at school. In October, 1835, he married Dolly Clapp, of Stafford, daughter of Paul Clapp, a pioneer, and took his bride to the Prentice homestead, cleared off the indebtedness on the farm, built a comfortable house for his parents, and administered to their comfort the remainder of their long lives. Cyrus Prentice has been a successful financier, gaining an enviable reputation for economy, industry, and fair dealing. He added to his real estate until he owned 400 acres. In 1871 he moved to South Byron, where he still resides, having sold his homestead to his son George W., of the firm of Boynton, Prentice & Co. He has been an old line Whig, but now votes with the Republican party, and has held all the important town offices. Mrs. Prentice, a worthy member of the Methodist Church, died June 2, 1886. They reared seven children, six of whom are now living, viz.: Mary (Mrs. James Bean); Imogene (Mrs. M. D. Bean); Adelbert, a collegiate, who resides in South Byron; Marion (Mrs. Irving D. In the short time that he has been there he has gained the confidence of the people, and has, by his ability, industry, and close attention to his professional duties, built up a fair and successful practice. Although he graduated with honor he thinks it essential to be a close student, and strives to keep pace with the improvements and discoveries in medical science.

DARIEN.

DARIEN was formed from Pembroke, February 10, 1832, and lies in the southwest corner of the county. The surface is hilly in the south and rolling in the north. Murder Creek flows through the town from south to north, in the eastern part. Crooked and Eleven Mile creeks are the other principal streams. The soil in the north is a sandy and gravelly loam, and in the south a clayey loam underlaid by limestone. The Buffalo, New York & Erie Railroad extends through the town from east to west, a little south of the center. The N. Y. C. & H. R. Railroad extends through the northwest corner. The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad runs through the center of the town from east to west, and the Geneva & Buffalo road will soon have its line built in the northern part of the town. There are four postoffices.

DARIEN CENTER (formerly called King's Corners) is a post village situated three-quarters of a mile north of the Erie Railroad, which affords easy transit from the place, good facilities for transporting produce to market, and enabling the farmers to send milk daily to Buffalo. There are at this place four stores of various kinds, an hotel, a school-house, a Methodist Episcopal Church, the usual complement of mechanics, and in all about 50 dwellings.

DARIEN village, or Darien City, as it is sometimes called, the name given it by some eccentric individual when there were only a few houses built, is situated towards the southeast part of the town, on Murder Creek (so-called from the supposition that a murder had been committed near it at an early day), and near Griswold station (named from B. Griswold) on the Erie Railroad. The village contains a Methodist Episcopal Church, postoffice, school-house, blacksmith shop, saw and feed-mills, a wagon shop, and about 30 dwellings. Before the advent of the railroads it was a place of more active local trade and manufacturing than at present.

Sawens (p. o.), so named in honor of the Sawens family in the near neighborhood, is situated on Murder Creek, in the northeast part of the town. This little hamlet contains a general store where the postoffice is kept, a saw mill and cider-mill, blacksmith shop, and about 10 houses.

Fargo (p. o.), on the Delaware & Lackawanna Railroad, in the northwest part of the town, contains a general store, cheese factory, blacksmith shop, and about 10 dwellings.

The first town meeting was held at Stephen King's inn (this being the first tavern reported in the town), April 3, 1832, and the following officers chosen: Hugh Long, supervisor; Thomas Riddle, town clerk; Jonathan Durkee, James Sutherland, Adna Tenney, justices of the peace; William Thayer, William Williams, Thomas Miller, assessors; Chilson Mullet, Price Mattison, overseers of the poor; Lyman H. Seaver, Lewis Clark, William Kidder, commissioners of highways; Daniel Carter, Constantine Gilman, Newton Haws, commissioners of schools; Daniel Kendrick, collector. When the division of the county was made, in 1840, the citizens of Darien were not disposed to submit to the new measure without resistance. The following resolution was unanimously adopted at a meeting of the citizens held in 1840:

"That we, the legal voters of the town of Darien, do most earnestly remonstrate against any division of the county of Genesee, and that our representative in the Assembly be, and is hereby, requested to use his utmost endeavors to prevent any division of the said county."

Religion.—The earliest account we have of any religious services in Darien is by a Baptist minister, Elder William Throop, in 1820, who held services until about 1840. The First Congregational Society is on record as organizing May 9, 1823, at Darien Center, with 12 members, with Hugh Wallace as minister. In 1825 there were 18 members; in 1834, 13, with Rev. T. Baldwin, minister; in 1840, 76, with Rev. L. A. Skinner, minister; and in 1846, 40. They built a wooden building about 1839, which is still standing. The church edifice was sold about 1880 for a small sum, and there has been no preaching since 1860.

There is upon record a society of the first Methodist Episcopal Church organized March 18, 1833, but we can find no other information concerning it. The present church was organized in 1848, by J. W. Vaughan. Its first pastor was Rev. K. D. Netleton, and there were 35 members. There are two churches: one in Darien, built of wood in 1848, and one in Darien Center, built in 1874, having a combined membership of 84 members, under the pastoral charge of Rev. H. A. Slingerland. The valuation of the properties is $7,500.
The Advent Church of God was organized in North Darien, January 16, 1864, by Elder C. W. Low, with a membership of 40. The first pastor was A. C. Newell, and the church edifice was built in 1867. There are at present 50 members, with Elder George A. Streeter in charge. The house and grounds are valued at nearly $2,000. The Sunday-school has 40 scholars.

Laban H. Robinson’s feed and saw-mills are located at the village of Darien, on Murder Creek, which furnishes the motive power. These mills were built by Mr. Robinson in 1881, on the site of the mills built in 1854 by Stephen Douglas. His mills and a succeeding set were destroyed by fire. Mr. Robinson does custom grinding, and deals in feed and grain. He also does custom sawing. His saw-mill is furnished with a circular saw and has a capacity for sawing from 5,000 to 8,000 feet of lumber per day. He grinds about 5,000 bushels of grain annually.

Harlow Brothers (Henry L., Jefferson P., and Charles J.) were extensive manufacturers of carriages at Harlow’s Corners. The older brother, Henry L. Harlow, began business in a small way about 1844, and as his brothers became of legal age he admitted them to partnership. This firm had a wide reputation, and had not only a market in this State, but in Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, and California. In the busiest season they sometimes employed as many as 35 men. The business was continued in Darien and Lancaster about 40 years.

Zeno Griswola’s grist, saw, and cider-mills are located at the little hamlet of Sawens, on Murder Creek, which furnishes the power, with steam as auxiliary. He does custom grinding, sawing, and cider-making.

In the sketches and reminiscences following will be found a complete history of the town as made up from the lives of its earliest and most prominent pioneers and families. When settlements were made several families, or members of the same families, would locate in a neighborhood. Hence we have in Darien the Colby settlement, the Wait settlement, and many others, so that the neighborhoods, with their appropriate names, retain their early designations to the present time.

The first settlement was made near Darien City by Orange Carter, from Vermont, in 1803. Isaac Chaddock, from Vermont, settled near Darien City in 1804. The first birth was that of Harriet Carter, in 1805. Stephen Parker kept the first inn, in 1808, at Darien City, and Stephen King the first store, at Darien Center, in 1815. The first saw-mill was erected by Amos Humphrey, in 1809, on Eleven Mile Creek.

In addition to the mercantile and other business interests that are noted in the biographical sketches we here group the business that was done in the town in 1869. At Darien Morganstern & Garegan were carriagemakers, and Theodore Young was postmaster and merchant. M. D. Bartlett kept an hotel and was a carriagemaker at Darien City. Amos B. Humphrey had a grist mill. Kensie Brothers were grocers and proprietors of a cheese factory, R. O. Lewis had a grist and saw-mill, J. Nichols was a merchant, and H. N. Vickery was a physician at Darien Center.

The following is a list of many of the principal settlers prior to 1820, in what is now Darien and Pembroke:

Saxton Bailey came to Darien in 1806, with his son Joshua, and bought 600 acres of land where Charles C. Magry now lives. His family came in 1808. His son Daniel came in 1808, and served as a captain in the War of 1812. He was a Presbyterian, and built the church at the Center. Joshua Bailey was also an early settler. He was a farmer of much industry and accumulated a great deal of property. He sold his farm and started a school at the Center.

Benjamin C. Adams was a very early store-keeper at Darien City, and had the business all to himself for a number of years, or until about 1832.

Dexter Bordwell, son of John and Mary (Edson) Bordwell, of Orange County, Vt., was born March 24, 1801. With his father he came to Darien in 1810, residing with him until 22 years of age. The labors of clearing the farm were so great that all were obliged to assist. The first school-house, of logs, Mr. Bordwell assisted in erecting. At this school he was educated, and proved himself a master of the spelling book. He purchased, in 1825, the farm where his only son, Aaron Bordwell, now lives, and borrowed $1 to pay for making out the contract. He married Tirzah, daughter of Sullivan and Lucy Russ, in 1829, and by close economy, industry, and perseverance succeeded in paying for his place. He was an "old line Whig" and a staunch supporter of the Republican party. He died in 1885, and his wife in 1873. Their only daughter, an amiable lady of culture, came to her death by being thrown from a carriage, January 7, 1850. Aaron, the only son, was born October 26, 1836, received an academic education, and September 28, 1872, married Libbie Bordwell, of Alden, Ill., and settled on the old homestead. Their only son, Clarence H., was born March 11, 1880. Mr. Bordwell is engaged in breeding fine stock, having a large flock of Oxforddown sheep, reported to be the best in the State, and upon which he has obtained many first premiums at State and international shows. He is also a breeder of fine high grade Holstein cattle. Mr. Bordwell is a genial, courteous gentleman, a lover of home and its surroundings.

Cyrus Brown, son of John and Abigail (Wright) Brown, was born in New Ipswich, Hillsborough County, N. H., May 20, 1785. In his boyhood he removed with his father's family to Sharon, N. H. In December, 1810, he married Milla Lawrence, and settled with his father in Sharon. In 1817 he removed to Pembroke, this county, and settled on the farm (then unimproved) where he resided the remainder of his life. He was three times elected to the chief office of the town of Sharon, and he held the office of supervisor of Pembroke seven years. Mrs. Brown, daughter of Benjamin and Rebecca (Wood) Lawrence, was born in Jaffrey, Cheshire County, N. H., September 18, 1791. Mr. and Mrs. Brown had six sons and four daughters, and all but one lived to adult age. He died in 1846, and she in 1849.

Peleg Bowen, son of Peleg and Lenty Bowen, was born in Galway, Saratoga County, N. Y., May 26, 1790, and about 1811 came to Darien, then included in Batavia, and selected a home on the town line, where F. Timms now lives. He lived there till his death. He spent a year or two in inclosing and building, and married Eleanor Green. He was one of the sturdy pioneers who cleared out of the forest a good farm and made himself a comfortable home. In the War of 1812 he was a militiaman, and went for the defense of Buffalo when that city was attacked and burned. He was always a farmer, and a man of strict integrity, industrious, honest, a good neighbor, and a reliable citizen. He died in March, 1861. Mrs. Bowen died in December, 1858. They had eight children: David, a farmer residing in Alexander; Rufus, a retired farmer residing in the village of Attica; Olive (Mrs. J. Dunbar), whose husband is a farmer residing in Attica; Florania, who married William Major, and is now a widow residing in Amsterdam, N. Y.; and Richard, who is the only one residing in Darien. Betsey M. married F. Curtis, is a widow, and resides in Wisconsin; Myra married Fernando Burk, and is a widow living in Meridian, Cayuga County; and George P. is a merchant in Batavia. Richard was born December 18, 1828, and has a good practical education, which he received, not in the common schools, but by a course of reading and observation. In October, 1853, he married Susan Curtis, of Alexander. They had three children, of whom Ellen and Flora are living and reside, unmarried, in Attica. Mrs. Bowen died December 9, 1864, and March 8, 1866, Mr. Bowen married Janette M. Lathrop, by whom he has a son, Charles B., born June 3, 1868, and a daughter, Nettie E., born May 7, 1872. Mr. Bowen is a Democrat, but not an "offensive partisan." He is giving his attention to the cultivation of his large farm, and the breeding of pure blood Oxforddown sheep and imported and registered pure blood Durham cattle. He is well and favorably known throughout the county.

Francis J. Bauer, born in Wurtemberg, Germany, October 8, 1837, emigrated to America in 1853, and in 1865 married Elizabeth Bauer. They had four children: Edward C., Frank J., Helen M. (Mrs. Milo Langworthy), of Pembroke, and Ida H. In 1876 they settled on a farm at Darien Center, where they now reside.

Charles F. Chick, son of George and Jane (Percy) Chick, who came from England in 1852, was born in Buffalo at the Cold Springs, December 21, 1856. May 3, 1881, he married Carrie Welker, and in 1884 settled on the farm of 247 acres where he now resides, near the southeast corner of the town. Mr. Chick is an extensive dealer in half-breed Percheron horses and roadsters, mostly brought from Iowa. He also deals in cows from Canada, and in fertilizers, besides conducting his large farm and dairy of 35 cows.

Owen Curtis, a pioneer settler, was born in Warren, Conn., in 1789. He came to Genesee County in 1808, and selected a farm in the wilderness of Batavia, now Darien, on which he lived over 70 years. In 1815 he married Abigail Wait, of Washington County, and reared eight children. Mrs. Curtis died in 1848, and a few years after he married Mrs. Abel, who survived him. Mr. Curtis died in 1879, in his 90th year. He was not a man of forms and ceremonies, but lived within himself and minded his own business, conceding the same rights to others that he claimed and stubbornly maintained for himself. He was a man for home and peace, and made no effort for show or popularity. He was proverbial for his integrity, and was kind and neighborly. By fair dealing and prudence he accumulated a good property.

Orange Carter, born December 23, 1774, in Connecticut, married Betsy Rumsey, of Vermont, and settled on a farm in St. Albans. In 1806 he came to Darian (then Batavia), being the first settler in the north part of the town, near the Baptist Church. Harriet, his daughter, was the first child born in 1806. Mr. Carter had previously spent several yeart assisting the surveyors on the Purchase. He received the deed of his farm in 1805, and in February, 1806, with his family, occupying, until June, when his own cabin was completed, the log school-house at Stafford. His nearest neighbor in Alexander was three and one-half miles and the grist-mill six miles distant. Being robust, hearty, and courageous, pioneer life suited him. The next year his brother David came, and after that the settlement was increased by the arrival of Williams, Ackley, Clark, McCollister, Doane, Lathrop, and other families.

Mr. Carter was a volunteer in the War of 1812. In 1838 he sold his farm, and in 1840 went to Wisconsin with his sons Ackley, Orange, and William, living with the latter until his death in 1855, aged 81 years. Mrs. Carter was born in 1777, and died in 1847. They were the parents of 10 children, all of whom married. Daniel Carter, a son living in Corfu, is the only one remaining in the county. He was born in St. Albans, Vt., October 4, 1802, and married, first, Maria Matteson, by whom he had two children, both deceased. He married, second, Mrs. Martha Williams. Mr. Carter was always interested in the welfare of his town. He held the office of supervisor, and others. A gentleman of the old school, he is a man of sterling integrity and respected by all his acquaintances. He has always been a farmer, a great reader, well up on all the current topics, and a Democrat since 1840. He has resided in Corfu for 25 years, and has been street commissioner all the time but three years. In the exercise of his office he has given great satisfaction, giving the citizens an excellent roadway by using gravel from an acre of ground to the depth of eight feet. At the advanced age of 87 years he cultivates his own garden. He has been trustee of the Presbyterian Church for many years, and is a liberal contributor to its needs.

Brazilla Carter, born in Connecticut, married there, and in 1812 came to the Holland Purchase and settled in the woods in the town of Darien, then included in Pembroke, on the place where his grandson, Riley Carter, now lives. He built his log cabin in the field, near a spring, about 80 rods north of the highway. He came from Connecticut with an ox-sled and cart, loading the cart when he found sleighing, and vice versa when the ground was bare. He was six weeks on the road. Five of his children were born in Connecticut and two in Darien. He died on the farm where he first settled, at about the age of 86 years. His son William, born in Connecticut in 1804, came with his parents to Darien. When 21 years of age he took charge of the farm, cleared it up, paid for his first 100 acres, and later added another 100 of cleared land. He was a stalwart man, six feet in height, and weighed over 200 pounds; honest and industrious. Mr. Carter was a clear-headed man, of good judgment, and accumulated a good fortune. He died in April, 1880, aged 76 years, highly respected by a multitude of friends. He married Harriet Hannah, of Wyoming County, who bore him six children. She died and he married Hannah Finch, of Wyoming County, who bore him one child. His son Riley, before mentioned, bought the original 100 acres at the death of his father, and is now an enterprising and successful farmer on the old homestead. He married Frances Crossman, and they have a son and a daughter. Mr. Carter is a decided Democrat and is doing his party good service. He is now assessor.

Abner C., Reuben, and Daniel Colby, sons of Daniel, came from Canaan, N. H., and settled in Darien in 1812. Their brother Aaron came in 1816. All took contracts for land at $3 per acre, with 10 years for payment. Their farms were contiguous and the settlement was known as the Colby neighborhood. With no roads, the nearest mill at Batavia, and with wild animals abundant, these pioneers were able to clear off their land, and convert the forests into cultivated fields. All died where they first settled, and the same farms are still occupied by Colbys.

Abner C. Colby, born May 2, 1776, settled where his son, Levi H. Colby, now lives. November 9, 1816, he married Nancy (Steward) Cutler. He died August 1, 1856, aged 80 years, and his wife in 1862. Their children were Levi H., Abner C., Hiram, and George. Levi H., the eldest, was born on the homestead January 6, 1819. He purchased the homestead from the heirs, and December 25, 1846, married Susan A.
Root, by whom he had four children, three of whom died in childhood.
The survivor, Dexter D., was born August 14, 1852, and is a farmer in Michigan. Mrs Colby died June 12, 1859, and Mr. Colby married, March 29, 1860, Elizabeth D. Lincoln, by whom he had children as follows: John L., born December 27, 1860, who is a farmer in Michigan; Libbie G., born October 27, 1867; and Levi Henry, born November 8, 1869.
The last two live at home. Mr. Colby is a Republican in politics, devotes his time to his farm, and is a highly respected friend and neighbor.

Joshua Colby, son of Reuben, was born in New Hampshire in 1808, and married Elizabeth Town in 1827. In early life he carried on an ashery, collecting in one winter 3,000 bushels of ashes. He now lives on the Daniel Colby homestead.

Aaron H. Colby, son of Reuben, was born in New Hampshire in 1811, spent his boyhood in Darien, and went to the district school. He married Ellen Beardsley, and settled on the place where he now resides.
He is a mason as well as a farmer, but leads a retired life, residing with his son Darius H.

Horace H. Chapin, son of Ralph and Betsey (Otis) Chapin, was born in Massachusetts in 1813, and when three years of age came with his parents to Batavia. He began clerking in 1832, with Stephen King, and later became his partner. He was also in business with 'Squire Riddle for 10 years from 1841. He sold his store to Theodore Young in 1864, and has since cultivated his farm of 65 acres. Mr. Chapin is a Republican, and belongs and gives liberally to the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1836 he married Louisa C. Walker, and their daughter, Mrs. James Matteson, resides in Rochester. Mrs Chapin died in 1838, and in 1851 he married Sarah M. Church, by whom he has two children, Hattie E. (Mrs. Frank L Harris) and Ralph E., who married Florence Heal. Mr. Harris and Ralph E. Chapin are partners in business in Oakfield. In June, 1866, Mr. Chapin married his present wife, Selinda L.
Munger.

Jonathan Durkee, son of Thomas and Abiah (Smith) Durkee, was educated in the common schools and at Dartmouth College. He married, first, Chloe Gleason, January 3, 1798, and settled in Hanover, N. H., caring for his parents until their decease. He came to Darien in 1810, bought 400 acres of land where his daughter, Mary Ann Wilson, Frank Chapin and his son Albert F., now live. He put in two acres of wheat, returned to New Hampshire, and the next spring brought his wife and six children to share his pioneer life. He erected the set of buildings now standing.
Mr. Durkee died in 1856, aged 82 years, and his wife in 1841. They had 12 children. In 1843 he married Betsey Felton, who died about 1857.
He was known as major; was a prominent man in his town, and held the offices of supervisor, justice of the peace, and trial justice. His only daughter married Frank Chapin, August 30, 1838, and settled near her father. At his death Mr. Chapin bought the old homestead, residing there until his decease in 1887.

Albert F. Chapin, son of Frank and Mary Ann (Durkee) Chapin, was born in Darien, January 20, 1841, and was educated at the academy. At the age of 18 he was a clerk in Buffalo, became a partner, and was in trade 30 years. In 1884 he returned to the homestead, and is now a worthy citizen and an enterprising farmer. He married Sarah Bostwick, of New-arl, N. Y., September 18, 1872.

John J. Ellis, son of Chester and Elizabeth (Smith) Ellis, was born in Bath, Steuben County, August 24, 1854, received his education in the common schools and at the academy, and taught school when 17 years of age. He then went into the railroad office at Bath, and has been in the employ of the Erie Railroad since. In 1874 he was placed in charge of Darien station. He also deals in farm produce and agricultural implements. In politics he is a Republican, and has the confidence of his townsmen, who elected him supervisor in 1885-86. He is a man of excellent business ability. October 20, 1875, he married Matilda J. Spann, of Attica, a lady of culture and refinement.

James Kinsey was born in the town of Huntington, County Hereford, England, in 1783. He married Elizabeth Gwillen, and came to America with his family in 1832, landing in New York. He set out for Ohio, but on hearing that his destination was an unhealthy region he remained in the vicinity of Utica about two years, and in 1834 settled on a farm in Darien, where he lived till his death. His son, James Kinsey, Jr., was born in England, came to Darien with his father in 1834, and married Grizilda Freeman in 1847. He first settled on the homestead, but now owns an extensive farm one mile west of Darien Center. Mr. Kinsey and his brother Stephen have been the largest dealers in cattle, horses, sheep, and swine of any in their town, and among the largest in the county. Mr.
Kinsey is a staunch Democrat, and has been very popular with his townsmen. He was elected supervisor of his town in 1887, and re-elected in 1888, and has also served as magistrate. He is a man of influence, energy, and enterprise, and is widely known. He and his brother Stephen erected the first steam cheese factory in Genesee County, and aided with their influence and money the building of a steam saw-mill at the depot.
An overwhelming sorrow befell Mr. and Mrs. Kinsey at the burning of their home, February 11, 1861, when their sons Frank, aged nine years, and Stephen, aged seven, perished in the flames. Their surviving children are James H., born May 3, 1849, who is an extensive grain merchant at St. Croix, Wis.; Russell L., born June 8, 1858, a lawyer in Buffalo; and William E., born May 24, 1863, a dealer in farm produce in Darien.

Stephen Kinsey, son of James K., Sr., was born in England, July 7, 1827, came to Darien with his parents in 1834, and was educated in the common school of Darien Center. In February, 1869, he married Sophia Champany, by whom he has one child, a daughter, born October 28, 1882. Mr. Kinsey and his brother succeeded their father on the homestead, which Mr. Kinsey now owns. He, like his brother James, is a decided Democrat, and has served his town as highway commissioner and tax collector. Mrs. Kinsey was an expert cheesemaker in the aforementioned factory and took the first premium for cheese at the State fair held in Buffalo in 1866.

Alanson T. Fisher, son of Lillie, was born in Boonville, N. Y., September 20, 1800. His father came from Boonville to the Holland Purchase, in Alexander, in 1804, and settled on what is still known as the "Lillie Fisher farm." There he spent the remainder of his long life and died at the age of 98. He was a man of influence and highly respected, was a leader in the Masonic order, held the honorable position of Master of the lodge, and was buried with Masonic honors. Alanson T. Fisher, February 27, 1844, married Sophia Monroe, of Batavia, who was born November 4, 1815. He settled at Darien Center, where he remained until his death, March 6, 1886. Mr. Fisher was a man of great financial ability, and his great diversity of business (stage driver and proprietor, hotel-keeper, merchant, dealer in live stock, and town officer) was managed with consummate skill and success. He was clear-headed, far-sighted, and amassed the largest fortune of any one in Darien. As a man he was honorable, a fair dealer, a reliable citizen, and a kind neighbor. Charles M., only son of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, was born November 28, 1845, married Alice M. Granniss, August 1, 1866, and their children are Monroe L., who married Clara Harrington, and Carlton G.

Owen Frink, son of Israel, was born in Peru, Mass., March 31, 1807. In August, 1814, he came with his father to Alexander and located where his grandson, Wilbur Frink, now lives, and where he resided till his death, November 22, 1866. He was also a carpenter and a skillful joiner, and helped in constructing some of the fine buildings in Rochester and Batavia. Owen, his only son, was educated in the common schools, and was always a farmer. He married Sally, daughter of Nicholas Van De Bogart, in 1828, and resided on the homestead till his death, September 17, 1872, at the age of 65. His wife died May 12, 1867, aged 58 years. Mr. Frink was an honest and fair dealing man. As a neighbor he was proverbially accommodating, and the poor and needy had his aid and sympathy. Mr. and Mrs. Frink were parents of five sons, all of whom lived to mature age. Wilson, their oldest son living, was born January 31, 1831, and remained on the homestead with his parents until he was of age. He married Eliza Edson, of Darien, and settled as a farmer in Marilla, Erie County, where they resided for 24 years. They still own the place. For the last six years they have been farming in Darien. They have had two sons, John, born December 3, 1862, who died May 28, 1885; and Earl, born February 28, 1869, who is studying telegraphy, and resides with his parents.

John Griswold, son of Lott K., was born in Bennington, N. Y., and was early taught industrious habits on his father's farm, and had only a common school education. November 17, 1846, he married Rachel Osborne, and settled on a farm in the south part of Darien. In 1870 he removed to the place where he now resides, near the village of Darien. He has always been a farmer. He cast his first vote with the Whig party, and in 1856 voted for John C. Fremont for President. Since then he has served the Republican party. Like his brother he commenced poor and has earned what he has, both in property and reputation. He has filled acceptably the office of overseer of the poor 11 years, and now, at about the age of 70, has an excellent character for integrity and fair dealing. He has three sons and one daughter.

The Griswold family in America descended from Sir Humphrey Griswold, of Malvern Hall, England. The first in this country of whom we have any record were Edward and Matthew, brothers, who came from England about 1645, and settled in Connecticut, Edward at Windsor and Matthew at Lyme. Edward afterward moved to Killingworth. Matthew was the first magistrate of Saybrook colony, and married Anna, daughter of Henry Wolcott. The seat or manor of the Griswolds at Lyme was a large feudal grant of some eight miles square, bounded on the west by the Connecticut River, and on the south by Long Island Sound. The buildings were situated upon the height of land overlooking the Sound. The name of the place was "Black Hall." This grant was given to Matthew in 1645.—[From genealogical sketch furnished by Benajah Griswold, of Darien.]

Lott K. Griswold, son of Benajah and Hannah (Kilham) Griswold, was born in Enfield, Hartford County, Conn., July 23, 1792, and, as near as can be ascertained, was a descendant of Matthew. The family removed to Sangerfield, Oneida County, where the father, Benajah, died. About 1811 or 1812 they settled in Byron. In 1815 Lott K. Griswold married Phebe Tucker, and settled on a wood land farm; but, to avoid fever and ague, he removed to Bennington and commenced anew by cutting the first tree on his "pitch." He moved to his location with a pair of three-year-old steers attached to a cart that carried his goods, and a single cow two years old. This property and a single shilling was his entire fortune. His habitation was a low log cabin covered with boughs; one window without glass, but covered with oiled paper; and not a sawed board in the whole structure. The floor was made of split basswood and hewn with an axe; the door was of the same material, and held together with pegs, swung on wooden hinges. In this primitive abode this pioneer family resided nine years. The nearest mill was at Batavia, 17 miles distant. Mr. Griswold remained on this farm to see it transformed into a good home, which, in 1852, he sold to his oldest son, Benajah, and removed to Darien and engaged again in farming. He died January 9, 1870, in his 78th year, on the farm of 22 acres, where his son John now lives. Mrs. Griswold died June 28, 1874. Their children were born as follows: Benajah, February 14, 1816; Mary, January 19, 1818; John, January 17, 1820; Harriet, October 2, 1821; Sophia, March 17, 1827; Nancy, January 30, 1831; William, August 30, 1833; and Julia, December 26, 1836.

Benajah Griswold, son of Lott K. and Phebe (Tucker) Griswold, spent his boyhood on his father's farm and in attendance at the common school. When he attained his majority he engaged in teaching district school for seven winter seasons, working for the farmers the remainder of each year, until he married Polly Seaver, January 1, 1840, and engaged in farming. In 1852 he purchased his father's farm of 75 acres, which he added to from time to time until it contained 242 acres. In 1860 he sold it and removed to his present house near the depot, which, in honor of him, and for his generosity in giving the railroad company the grounds, bears his name. Mr. Griswold began his political life a Democrat; and so remained until after the formation of the Republican party in 1856, when he cast his lot with it, and has done it good service ever since. He has held the offices of superintendent of the poor for Genesee County nine consecutive years, has been supervisor of his town five years, and early in life was many years town superintendent of schools. He commenced his active life with no capital, except his correct habits of strict honesty, sterling integrity, and continued persevering industry. He has acquired a competency, and has the respect and confidence of a large circle of acquaintances. Mr. and Mrs. Griswold had three children. Eugene, born February 22, 1841, married Laura Cowan, who died in January, 1888. He was a soldier from 1862 till the close of the war in 1865, and is a farmer and resides with his father. His son Charles C., born February 9, 1867, is conducting his grandfather's farm. De Witt Clinton, born October 30, 1847, married Lizzie, daughter of Dr. Evans, with whom he studied medicine, and is now a druggist at Shullsburg, Wis. Flora (Mrs. George W. Peck) resides in Prattsburg, Steuben County, N. Y. Mr. Peck is a dealer in hardware.

Henry W. Harmon, son of Asaph and Mary A. (Curtis) Harmon, and grandson of Owen Curtis, an early pioneer, was born in Darien, January 21, 1859, was reared on the farm, educated in the common schools, and began an academic course at Batavia, but ill health prevented its completion. He then went to the Pennsylvania oil regions, but soon returned, and went to Dakota in 1882 and engaged in the real estate business. In 1883 he was appointed postmaster at Harold, Dakota, which office he held two years, and was county commissioner of Campbell County one year. In 1885–86 he went South, visited the Arkansas Hot Springs and the New Orleans Exposition, and returned to Darien in June, 1887. In April, 1889, he was appointed station agent and telegraph operator at the D., L. & W. Railroad office in Darien. He married, July 21, 1889, Ellen L. Burr, of Darien.
Davis Huntley, of Lyme, Conn., settled in Darien about 1817. He was a millwright and carpenter, and built many structures in the town. He died in 1843. His sons were E. M. and Allen J., the latter a carpenter.

Dexter Humphrey, an early settler, lived near the gulf, was a conscientious and noble Christian gentleman, and had two sons, Linus and Wallace. William Humphrey, his brother, came at the same time, and reared a large family. Amos Humphrey, a settler in 1807 on a tract of 350 acres where Hiram Tullar now lives, erected the first saw-mill on Eleven Mile Creek, in 1809. He was justice of the peace for some time.

Aaron P. Hutchinson, son of Aaron, came in 1815 from Vermont with his parents. He found it serious business tiding over the next year, 1816, so memorable as the "cold season." He recollects going to school in a log shanty, roofed with bark, and taking the teacher's dinner, consisting of hulled corn and milk.

Samuel C. Higgins was born in Elizabeth, N. J., September 9, 1809, and received an academic education. In 1830 he came to Rochester and followed the occupations of cordwainer and weighmaster. October 16, 1831, he married Mary Godby, of Massachusetts. In 1844 the family came to the northwest part of Darien, to the farm where they now reside. Mr. Higgins, though an octogenarian, has devoted himself to his farm, and even now assists his son Robert S. on the place. Mrs. Higgins died November 13, 1885. They were the parents of five children, of whom three sons and one daughter are now living, viz.: J. Morris, who married Jenette Schuyler, of Attica, is a well-to-do farmer in Macon, Ill., and has three children; Mary J. (Mrs. Harvey Richards), also of Macon, Ill.; Luke C., who married Louie Weed, and is a graduate of the Buffalo Medical College, now practicing in Naples, Ill.; and Robert S., who married Jessie L. Nott, in January, 1878, has two sons, and is a farmer on the homestead with his aged father.

Alva Jefferson, a pioneer in 1812, was a very prominent man 60 years ago. He was a farmer and a mechanic, and was of the firm of Horton & Jefferson in Darien City. When he gave up business he settled on a farm on the Buffalo road. He built a store in 1832, was a member of the Assembly, and a firm friend of Gov. Seward. He had two sons and two daughters.

Among the early settlers of Darien was Ichabod Jefferson, who arrived in 1812, settling in the south part of the town. For a few years before his death, in 1848, he made his home with his daughter Betsey, the wife of Elijah Robinson. Mr. Robinson was a blacksmith, and came from Vermont to Darien in 1822. He died in 1889, and his wife in 1884. They resided in the village. Alva, a son, is a blacksmith occupying the shop of his father.

Stephen King was the earliest merchant at Darien Center, and was a well-to-do, substantial, energetic, and successful business man. He also owned a farm, built a brick house upon it, and kept a good hotel, and was at one time a partner of Thomas Riddle and Alanson Fisher. He married a daughter of Lillie Fisher, of Alexander.
Elijah Lamb came about 1815 from Canada, and settled where his son John E now resides. He brought with him a team of horses, but had to sell one in order to make payment on his purchase of land. He made his own household furniture, worked hard at cleaning off the land, planted orchards, and was soon able to put up good buildings. He built a tannery, and tanned on shares the few hides he obtained from the farmers. From the flax raised on the place, and the wool from the sheep, Mrs. Lamb clothed the family. He was one of the prosperous citizens of the town when he died in 1869.

David Harroun, son of David and Elizabeth (Anderson) Harroun, was born in Brattleboro, Vt., in 1771. He married Margery Wilder, and settled in Hebron, Washington County. About 1819 he came with his family and settled on the north line of the town of Darien, then included in the town of Pembroke. This family encountered the hardships incident to a life in the woods, and in a few years they had replaced the log cabin with a comfortable house and had transformed their wood land into cultivated fields. Mrs. Harroun was a woman of great energy and industry. She spun and wove cloth, not only to clothe her own family, but also for her neighbors. They resided where they first settled till they died. Mr. Harroun died in 1857, aged 86 years, and Mrs. Harroun aged 93 years. They were parents of 11 children, all of whom lived to adult age. Their son James A. was born in Hebron, N. Y., January 3, 1813, received a limited education, and married Harriet Crawford, of Darien. He succeeded his father on the homestead, where he had been the manager after he was 18 years of age, in consequence of his father's disability from rheumatism, and administered to the wants of his parents till their deaths. Mr. Harroun has always been a farmer, Mrs. Harroun died in 1876. They had three children, only one of whom. George W., lived to maturity, and died February 6, 1889, aged 49 years. Mr. Harroun has been a member of the Presbyterian Church since 1830, and is a staunch Republican.

Elisha H. Lathrop, son of Samuel and Lucy Lathrop, of New London County, Conn., was born September 15, 1800. His education was received in district schools, and by strict attention to his studies he was subsequently qualified to teach, which he did. At the age of 16 he and a brother, three years younger, managed their father's farm of 60 acres. He had a strong constitution, and at an early age could swing a scythe with the best of men. In 1819 he moved with his father's family to Genesee County, and settled on the eastern line of the town of Darien, then Pembroke. Here he remained till 22 years of age, when he began business for himself. In April, 1830, he purchased the farm of 100 acres upon which he now resides, paying $1,200 for the same. The same year and month he married Marcia Moulton, of Alexander, by whom he had three children, two of whom are dead, and perhaps all, as one has not been heard from since 1872, when he was in the mining regions of the far West. Mrs. Lathrop died February 1, 1858, and June 22, 1860, Mr. Lathrop married Euseba, daughter of Abram and Fanny Sharick, of Darien, who bore him five children, three of whom are living. Mr. Lathrop began life poor, but by industry and good management succeeded in obtaining a competency, and owned one of the finest farms in the town. He cast his first vote for Andrew Jackson, and always voted with the Democratic party. He held various offices within the gift of his townsmen. Mr. Lathrop died January 15, 1879, retaining his mental faculties in a remarkable degree to the last. He was highly prized by his neighbors and considered a man of good judgment. Mrs. Euseba Lathrop was born February 6, 1828, in Columbia County, Pa., came with her father's family to Genesee County in 1844, and settled on the farm adjoining Mr. Lathrop's. James C. Lathrop, son of Elisha H., was born August 19, 1861, was educated in the common schools with a few terms in the academy at Batavia, and married Minnie Usher, of Pulaski, N. Y., February 24, 1887. Andrew J., his brother, born February 19, 1865, received a similar education, and they now jointly conduct the homestead farm. Fanny A. married, October 2, 1888, E. C. Dearstyn, who is a telegraph operator at Newark, N. Y.

Anson Lathrop, son of Samuel and Lucy (Pendleton) Lathrop, was born November 23, 1803, in Bozrah, Conn., and removed to Darien with his parents in 1819. His father was a mechanic and farmer. Mr. Lathrop remained with his parents until he was 21. He settled on the farm where he now resides a year or two before his marriage, and has always been a farmer. In June, 1834, he married Elizabeth Bartram, whose father was a sea captain. She died February 24, 1880. Their children were Samuel, born March 28, 1835, who enlisted in the war, was taken prisoner at Knoxville, and died of starvation in a rebel prison in North Carolina; Henry, born February 15, 1837, who also enlisted in the army in Pennsylvania, and participated in the battles of Gettysburg and the Wilderness, in the latter of which he received a wound in his left lung, and died at Fredericksburg 13 days after; Burr B., born June 3, 1843, who was drafted at the age of 18, entered a company from the town of Mexico, Oswego County, and died in the service, but how or just when we cannot now ascertain; Edmund P. G., born March 28, 1847, a farmer, who died on the homestead at the age of 17; Janette M., born August 24, 1840, who married Richard Bowen, a farmer, and resides near her father; Caroline C., born November 15, 1841, who married A. McCall Stickney and resides at Fargo station; Charles, born November 1, 1849, who died October 2, 1866; and George W., born January 28, 1851, who died September 20, 1852.

Ebenezer Losee was born in Saratoga County, N. Y., June 8, 1797. About 1820 he came to Darien, and began to improve the farm of 50 acres where Daniel McVean now lives. January 3, 1826, he married Diana Dean, of Pompey, N. Y., where Mr. Losee was raised. She died in March, 1865. He soon added to his farm until he had 200 acres.
About 1833 he bought the farm where his son, Richard M. Losee, lives, and where he died March 20, 1880. By his perseverance and hard work he had at one time in his possession 400 acres. He was supervisor of the town at one time. He had four children: Almon D., who died at the age of seven years; Hannah J., who died at the age of 18; Frank E., born July 11, 1837, who married Sarah Dirstine, May 25, 1865, who was born July 3, 1843, and their children are Fred R., and Marie Louise; and Richard M. Frank E. is a farmer living one mile east of Darien village.

Richard M. Losee was born June 29, 1834, and received an academic education, but chose to be a farmer, which vocation he has always followed. January 1, 1857, he married Helen L. Lincoln, of Pembroke. He gives his attention to the breeding of and dealing in full blooded registered American Merino sheep, through New Mexico and Colorado. He is a decided Democrat, but such is his popularity he has been elected twice to the office of supervisor in a Republican town. He is a man of good financial ability and well off. His children are Frank D., a farmer, born October 25, 1857, who married Mary Grant, and lives adjacent his father; Nellie H., born December 11, 1859, who married Andrew Meinweiser, a farmer, who conducts the Losee homestead; Clara A., born June 26, 1863, who married Eugene W. Harrington, station agent at Alden; and Royal R., born October 27, 1870, who is now in the telegraph office of the superintendent of the D., L. & W. Railroad at Buffalo.

Philip W. Morgan, of Canada, born September 23, 1841, came to Buffalo when young, and resided there 12 years. His father came to Darien and located on the farm where Mr. Morgan now lives. In 1861 he enlisted in Co. I, 100th N. Y. Vols., serving three years and a half, and received an honorable discharge. He was in the battle of Fair Oaks, was captured and sent to Libby prison, thence to Salisbury and Belle Isle, being confined in all four months, when he was exchanged. He was at Fort Wagner during the siege, and from there was sent home on recruiting service for four months, in 1863. He joined his regiment the next spring, was in the engagement at Drury's Bluff, was captured and taken to Libby, thence to Dansville, Andersonville, and Florence prisons, when he was paroled. His seven months' sufferings while a prisoner were mitigated in part, and his life spared, by his shrewdness as a trader, and his aptness in gaining the confidence of his guards. An imitation chain, made of bogus gold dollars, when polished up furnished him additional food supplies, the last dollar bringing him in a porker of 90 pounds. His imprisonment caused him to be in service six months beyond his term, and he returned home with poor health. December 26, 1865, he married Sarah Dyer, of Darien. The next three years were spent in the Pennsylvania oil regions. His wife died November 4, 1869, being the mother of his sons Walter E., a mechanic in Buffalo, and Endell N., who lives at home. Mr. Morgan spent three years in Kansas, and then returned to Darien. January 14, 1873, he married Ella Burns, of Pembroke, and she is the mother of his son George M., and daughters Winnie and Jennie, who live at home. Mr. Morgan has been highway commission and collector of taxes.

Col. Abraham Matteson, son of Abraham and Lydia (Hopkins) Matteson, was born in Bennington Vt., in 1781. He married Betsey Woodard, of the same town, and came to Onondaga County, thence to Darien with an ox-team with a horse ahead, in 1808, and settled in the woods north of Darien, where he built a log cabin. Having little means he took the land on contract. He was a private in the War of 1812, and was mustered out as colonel. He was prominent in civil affairs, was a member of Assembly, a magistrate for 16 years, and held other offices. He died in 1831. Mrs. Matteson died in 1870. They had nine children.
The father, Abraham, Sr., came to Darien soon after his son, and resided near him. He died in 1819. His wife died in 1829. Norman, fourth son of Abraham, was born in Darien, May 21, 1810, and has always lived in the county. He had a common school education, married Sarah Ann Smith, and has always been a farmer. In addition he has been for about 15 years an extensive dealer in cattle and hogs, shipping from his vicinity and Chicago to Albany, New York, and Boston. He has been supervisor two terms. Their only son was accidentally killed by a pistol-shot at the age of 26 years.

David Nay was for many years a resident of Darien. He was a poor boy, and worked hard as a farmer. He taught school winters, and married into the North family, of Alexander. He was the first superintendent of common schools. His son Bruce was with Gen. Butler at New Orleans, and received the thanks of President Lincoln for his bravery in some hazardous undertakings.

Joseph Peters, one of the first settlers, in 1808, purchased land on the Buffalo road, west of the village, and was a hard working man. He was twice elected to the Assembly, and was influential in the interests of the Agricultural Society. His son, T. C. Peters, was educated for the law, but followed farming, and has been a prominent and influential man in the western part of the State.

The Riddle family of Genesee County are of Irish and Scotch descent.
Thomas Riddle, of Ireland, came to New England when a child, married Rebecca Moulton, of Massachusetts, and died in 1807. John Riddle, his oldest son, born in Massachusetts in 1761, married Olive Blodgett, and came to Alexander in 1807. He was a justice of the peace and supervisor many years. He died in 1849, aged 88 years. Thomas Riddle, third son of John, was born in Vermont in 1804, married Elois A. Johnson in 1834, and settled in Darien. In early life he followed mercantile pursuits; was postmaster, town clerk, and justice of the peace for 28 years. He was a man highly respected in his community, and died at his home in Darien, September 3, 1889.

Henry Saulsbury’s father emigrated from Holland and settled in Schodack, Rensselaer County, N. Y., where Henry was born in 1790, as near as can be ascertained. He married in Connecticut, and removed to Darien (then included in Batavia) in 1810, where he remained to the close of his life. Mrs. Saulsbury survived him. Mr. Saulsbury, besides carrying on his farm of 114 acres, was engaged in buying cattle and sheep for the Buffalo market. He was a Whig until the organization of the Republican party, which he at once joined. He held the offices of highway commissioner, overseer of the poor, and town clerk. In religion he was a Methodist, and many years was a consistent member of that church. Mr. and Mrs. Saulsbury reared eight children, all of whom resided in their native town, and four are living, viz.: Samantha (Mrs. Tuttle), David, Sylvia, and Sarah (Mrs. Samuel Lathrop), of Batavia. David Saulsbury was born in Darien, December 12, 1815, and spent his youth on his father's farm and in attendance at the district school. After his ninth year he only had the winter season for schooling. February 11, 1846, he married Mariah H. Adams, of Darien, and settled on lot 9, in the southeast part of the town, which he sold in the spring of 1889. In 1869 he removed to his present location in the village of Darien. He has always been a farmer, although he has sometimes been engaged in selling specialties, and was one season, like his father, a drover. Mr. Saulsbury left the Democrats in Buchanan's administration and joined the Republican party. Mrs. Saulsbury died in April, 1856, and in October following Mr. Saulsbury married Phebe A. Hickox, who died in October, 1863. His first wife was the mother of two sons: Nelson L., born January 11, 1847, who married Alice Shaw, and is a grower of small fruit in Batavia; and Charles F., born August 4, 1850, who married Sarah Grant, and resides with his father. He has three daughters.

Arunah Sawens, born in Massachusetts in 1784, married Sarah Mahen in Washington County, N. Y., and a few years later removed to the Holland Purchase and worked at shoemaking in Le Roy. He located in Darien, where his son Hiram now lives, and cleared quite a portion of the farm before removing his family to it in 1818. He died January 20, 1835. He was an enterprising man, and accumulated property rapidly. Mrs. Sawens died July 20, 1843. The postoffice there is named "Sawens" in honor of this family. They had 10 children, five of whom are now living. Hiram Sawens was born in the house where he now lives, June 28, 1825. He was educated in the common school of his district, and December 31, 1847, married Euphemia Sutherland. They have an only daughter, Florence H. Sawens, who resides with her parents. Mr. Sawens has always been a farmer. He is a man of sterling integrity, industrious, honest, upright. In politics he is a Republican, and has the confidence of the voters of his town and county who have elected him to the offices of county superintendent of the poor six years, town assessor six years, and collector one year. He is now over 60 years of age, and has so carefully conducted all his business relations that he has never been sued nor sued any man. His son William, born on the homestead April 17, 1827, received a common school education, and December 15, 1847, married Atassa Foster. He inherited and purchased the west 110 acres of the original farm, and built a new set of buildings. Here he has always resided as a farmer. They have four children living: Flora A. (Mrs. Asher Graves), of Kansas; Mary I., wife of Charles Johns, of Nebraska; Hattie E. (Mrs. Henry J. Cleveland), of Illinois; and Dora, the youngest, who lives at home.

Eben P. Strong was born in Warren, Conn., January 28, 1794. He served in the War of 1812 and went from his native town with a detachment of soldiers to Sackets Harbor. After his discharge in 1813 he came to Darien, then a part of Pembroke, and located a farm of 160 acres, and obtained for it a contract, or "article," from the Holland Purchase land office. January 16, 1822, he married Margaret Johns, who was born in Lancashire, Eng., January 11, 1799. He immediately removed his bride to his humble home. He was highly respected as a man of sterling integrity, honest, and industrious. He died on the place where he first settled, March 23, 1843. Mrs. Strong survived him until October 7, 1888.

John Simonds, born in Williamstown, Mass., in 1779, was well educated, and taught school several seasons. He then read law one year, but abandoned that profession for surveying, which was more to his taste, as he had a natural gift and desire for the study of mathematics. He began surveying in Jefferson County, N. Y., and was at one time six weeks in the woods without seeing a house. In 1807 he married Sabra Cole, and in 1814 moved to the Genesee country with his wife and three children. He purchased a small farm in Leicester, Livingston County, which he cultivated until 1824, when he moved to Genesee County and located on a farm in North Alexander. This was the commencement of his prosperity, which was largely due to the industry and economy of his family. He was quite negligent in looking after the odds and ends of his business affairs, being too credulous for his own interest. He was a man of sterling integrity, a firm believer in the teachings of the scriptures, but not a member of any sect. His children obtained as good an education as his means would allow. He resided in Alexander until his death, September 4, 1862. His wife survived him 10 years, and died at the home of her oldest daughter, Mrs. Warner, in Dane County, Wis., with whom she resided. She was the mother of 11 children.

Benjamin C. Simonds, son of John and Sabra (Cole) Simonds, was born in Geneseo, Livingston County, N. Y., April 7, 1817. He came to Alexander in 1824 with his parents, spent his boyhood on his father's farm, and attended the common schools and academy in Alexander. At the age of 18 he began teaching district school and followed it six winters. In 1839 and '40, he traveled three times over the State of Ohio, and made in all a journey of more than 10,000 miles with a pair of horses and carriage. He returned home and in 1843 married Almira H. Wait, of North Darien, and soon after purchased 100 acres of his father's farm. In 1854 Mrs. Simonds's father, Russel Wait, was killed by the cars, and Mr. Simonds purchased his farm in North Darien, where he removed and now resides. Mr. Simonds has been a great reader. Early in life he was a thorough temperance worker. In the anti-slavery movement he was a pioneer worker, when it cost a man his popularity and sometimes the respect of his best friends. He remained with the Liberty party until the organization of the Republican party, when he became a Republican, and so remained till the Prohibition party was organized, when he at once gave it his hearty support. In 1841 he united with the Baptist Church, with which he remained until 1849. After several years' careful investigation of the scriptures he and Mrs. Simonds became convinced that immortality is conditional and obtained only through Christ at the resurrection. Mr. Simonds has been instrumental in organizing a church which is in accord with his views. With his influence and his means he has for 40 years labored to sustain it. He is a natural leader of men, of great intelligence, decidedly radical, and has many sharp points and keen edges, but is not aggressive. He is always able to give a good reason for the faith within him, and is also a noted peacemaker.

John Sutherland came from Onondaga County to the Holland Purchase in 1812, and settled in Darien on the farm where J. Beck now lives, and where he lived until his death, and was buried there. He was a practical surveyor as well as a farmer, and took a prominent part in the affairs of his town. He reared four sons: John, James, Amaziah, and David. John resided with his father, unmarried. James married and settled in the village of Darien, was for a long time a magistrate, conducted a harness shop, and reared seven children. About 1843 he removed with his family to Green County, Wis. Amaziah was always a farmer, not a politician, but he possessed the confidence of his towns- men, and served as overseer of the poor 10 or 12 years. He married Lucy Horr about 1823, and settled on the homestead, where he resided until 1833, when he removed to a farm across the road, and later sold the homestead. He died March 7, 1882, and Mrs. Sutherland September 27, 1877, both at the home of their son James H. They had three sons and three daughters, viz.: William, James H., Mary, Adaline, George, and Helen. David went to Florida, and while returning died at Lancaster, Pa. William, son of Amaziah, married Cytheria Dimock, settled in Darien, and died in June, 1863.

James H. Sutherland was born on the homestead December 16, 1827, was educated in the common schools, and at the age of 19 began teaching, which he continued four winter seasons. He was engaged in general mercantile business at Darien village from 1852 to 1867, when he became station agent at Griswold depot, and was also engaged in the coal, grain, and lumber trade. In the spring of 1887 he resigned his position as station agent, and is now continuing his other business with the aid of his son-in-law, Giles Ranger. He married Clarissa Winslow, of Halifax, Vt., and died in 1836, aged 50 years. His wife died 15 years later.

April 20, 1843, he married Clarissa, daughter of James and Esther Bentley, of Steuben County. In 1846 he exchanged his interest in the homestead with his brother Tyler, and settled where his nephew, John W. Sumner, now lives. He built a saw-mill, and was a lumberman and farmer until 1864, when he moved to Corfu, where he died June 7, 1887, and where Mrs. Sumner still resides. He married Phila Freeman, of Darien, in 1839, and settled on the farm where he was born and always resided. He is a progressive farmer, honest and upright, and at the age of 77 is mentally and physically well preserved, and with the aid of his son, Dallas A. Sumner, still conducts his fine farm of 150 acres. Their children are John W., a farmer adjoining his father, who married Clara Kimball, and his three sons; Lewis, a farmer, who married Anne Barney, and has three daughters; Wilder E., who resides in Corfu and deals in produce, and who married Augusta Kinsey and has one daughter, Phila (Mrs. A. Mr. Pettibone is joint owner with Mr. Sumner in the farm whereon they live. Mr. and Mrs. Pettibone have one son. Mr. Sumner has been elected supervisor two terms, assessor 19 years, and has been constable and collector. His son Horace, born on the homestead, married Almira Marsh, of Alexander, settled in Darien, and now lives in Batavia.

In February, 1814, the pioneers were disturbed by the report that the Indians in the employ of the British were on their way from the lake region to burn and destroy this infant settlement. Dea. William B. Garfield, cousin of the late President Garfield, with his family, and Mr. Vaughan with his, all loaded into an old sled hitched to a pair of horses, retreated two and a half miles in the night, and broke the sled near the cabin of their neighbor, Mr. Peck. They remained there and soon got news from Batavia that the Indians were not on the "war path." The party returned to their deserted houses. They suffered all the privations incident to pioneer life. In 1829 he built his pleasant and comfortable residence, which is now in a good state of preservation; from time to time he has built nearly all the farm buildings now standing on the place.

Mr. Vaughan had an original and clear intellect, was somewhat eccentric, a great reader, and was proverbially kind and generous to the poor and needy. In 1816 he and his wife united with the Baptist Church. The meetings were held at the school-house located on his farm, and his house was familiarly called the "Baptist tavern." Sometimes they had a pastor, but in the absence of a minister Mr. Vaughan, assisted by others, conducted the services. He was foremost in influence and in contributing to the financial interest of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan were always in sympathy with their neighbors when any were sick, and went miles to attend them and administer to their comfort. Mr. Vaughan died December 17, 1857, aged 73, and Mrs. Vaughan August 6, 1876. They had nine children, of whom only Mrs. A. A. Williams, of Attica, and Mrs. J. R. Langworthy, who resides on the old homestead, are now living.

Zina Waite, a native of Washington County, N. Y., was born in March, 1800. In 1823 he married Rebecca Buchanan, and in 1826 came to Darien, where he lived, and died March 2, 1843. Mrs. Wait died in 1868. He was a large farmer, having at one time 325 acres. He was elected supervisor three terms, and held other town offices. He was an old line Whig, and a delegate to the convention that nominated Harrison in 1840. They had a son, Horace, who married Almira Wyman, of Pembroke, and who was keeper of the county poor-house 10 years. Cyrus Waite, son of Zina, was born on the Waite homestead, April 6, 1831, was educated in the district school and in the Wyoming and Genesee Seminary, and married, in 1856, Amarettta, daughter of John Lincoln, of Darien. She was born in May, 1831. He settled on the homestead, which is still owned by him, where he resided until 1880, when he removed to Corfu village, where he now resides. Inheriting much of the native energy and spirit of his father Mr. Waite, besides attending to his farm, conducts an extensive business in wool, in which he has been successful. He takes an active interest in municipal affairs, is a promoter of the cause of education, and aids in the furtherance of religious matters.
He has been supervisor two terms and a magistrate four years. Their only son, Charles, is in mercantile business in Buffalo. Mrs. Waite died January 6, 1885, lamented by a large circle of acquaintances.

Russel Wait was born in Cambridge, Washington County, N. Y., in 1787.
He came to Genesee County in 1810, and located on a farm in Darien, then included in Batavia. In 1811 he married Mercy Booth, of his native town, and they resided on the farm in Darien until his death in 1854, the result of an injury received by being run over by the cars. He was strong and healthy, and a hard worker. He was noted for his honesty and fair dealing, was generous to the poor and needy, and was especially liberal to the Baptist Church, of which he was a member. His first wife was the mother of his 15 children, and died in 1835. He married, second, Mrs. Polly Aplin, who died in 1842. For his third wife he married Mrs. Clark, who survived until January 1, 1879. Four sons and six dughters survived their father, all of whom were married.

Michael Warner was born in Alsace, France, emigrated to America in 1830, lived in Orangeville and Attica, and died in 1885, at the home of his son Peter, in Darien, where he lived for 18 years. He was a farmer, and married Barbara Broadbrooks, who died in March, 1885. They were the parents of seven children. Peter was born in Orangeville, February 26, 1838. In February, 1867, he married Mina Giese, of Darien, and in 1868 settled on the farm where he now resides. Mr. Warner is an enterprising and industrious farmer. A Republican in politics, he has been honored by his townsmen with the office of highway commissioner for four years, and is still holding the same. He is a kind, worthy, and intelligent citizen. The family consists of eight children, all of whom are living with their parents.

Theodore Young, son of Jacob, was born in Germany, January 14, 1841, and came to America with his parents in 1852, living with them until 14 years old, working on the farm summers and attending school winters. He was engaged as clerk in a grocery store for three years, after which he spent a short time at school. From 1858 to 1862 he clerked for H. H.
Chapin, of Darien, when he was a partner until 1864, after which he purchased Mr. Chapin’s interest, and has since conducted the business alone.
By his management he has more than doubled the former business of the firm. By economy, industry, and perseverance Mr. Young has secured a competency. February 3, 1870, he married Fanny E. Fisk, who was born in Akron, N. Y., September 25, 1847. She has been of great assistance to him in his social and business relations. Their children are Leonard E., Arthur L., Delevan C., and Floyd T.

Mrs. Aurelia (Lapping) Lee came from Willington, Conn., to Darien in 1824, and married David J. Lee the same year. He was the son of Quartus Lee, a pioneer of Connecticut, who came to Darien in 1815. Mrs. Lee reared three adopted children, of whom Mrs. Theodore Young was the youngest. Says Mrs. Lee: "She was a good friend, and a true mother." Mrs. Lee is now 82 years of age, and one of the few old settlers left. Mr. Lee died in 1866.

ELBA.

ELBA was erected from the town of Batavia, March 14, 1820, and at that time included the present town of Oakfield, covering an area of 38,000 acres. The early settlement of Elba will, to a considerable extent, also include that of Oakfield, as it was not until April 11, 1842, that that town was erected and Elba assumed its present area of 22,631 acres. The act of March 14, 1820, was:

"That all that part of the town of Batavia known as the 13th township in the first and second ranges, including that part of the Tonawanda Reservation lying east of the division line between the second and third ranges, and north of the division line between the 12th and 13th tiers of townships in the Holland Company’s Purchase, be and is hereby erected into a separate town by the name of Elba."

Another section of the act provided for the election of town officers at the tavern of Nehemiah Ingersoll, on the Oak Orchard road, one and a half miles south of the village, on the 14th of April, 1820: and that the supervisor and overseers of the poor of Batavia act as a board of canvassers for the election, all of which was done according to the act.

It has been found, by improving the soil, that the early predictions of its productiveness have not failed. The surface is undulating, with gently rising slopes without obstruction to easy cultivation. The composition of the soil is a mixture of clay and loam with perceptible calcareous properties. Various crops are successfully raised, and wheat has been formerly its staple crop. Limestone deeply underlies the soil, but pebbles of it are everywhere perceptible.

The never-failing supply of pure water is an indispensable characteristic of this healthy town. The principal source of the Oak Orchard Creek is an outlet of an ever-flowing spring, near what has long been known as "Dunham’s Corners," called the "Hackley spring." It passes northeast through the center of the town to the northeast corner, thence west through the north part; and this is the general direction of the tributaries that combine to swell Oak Orchard Creek. Spring Creek is formed from springs in the southeast corner of the town, and flows northeasterly into the town of Byron. These streams furnish pure spring water to the inhabitants and ample power for the flouring and custom mills of George W. Mather. The "Scott spring," strongly impregnated with sulphur, rises a mile away, which, with its accumulations, furnishes power for a woolen-mill and saw-mill located on the "Transit" (owned by Mason Fuller), and uniting with Spring Creek gives ample power for the "Transit flouring mills." To the abundant supply of pure water from springs, and the wells so easily sunk in every part, is attributed the healthfulness of this beautiful town. A strip of the average width of one-half mile is occupied along the north edge by the Tonawanda Swamp.

ELBA (p. o.) village is located a short distance south of the center of the town, and is most beautifully situated. It was called "Pine Hill" at an early day, and by many "The Pinery"; and it is written by some historians that Joseph Ellicott contracted with Isaac Sutherland to cut a road from where he had located his land office, Batavia, to "The Pinery," in 1802. The term "rural retreat" cannot be more applicable than to this. A sufficiently dense farming population has vigorously made and sustained one of the enterprising villages of Western New York. Other sister villages have had natural advantages, as well as artificial, to aid their advance; but this has had only the confiding support of a wealthy farming community, and the personal, well-applied energy of those who are engaged in its mercantile and mechanical pursuits, to bring it to its present important position. The advent of the West Shore Railroad has given the village an impetus for more rapid prosperity, and its permanence is assured by the background of rich and fertile farm lands of an area of over 40 square miles. The village has a population of about 500, settled in lucrative business and in homes of their own. The school and church advantages compare with sister villages of greater pretensions; a commodious school building for primary and advanced departments accommodates the public, and a private seminary, established by Miss Mary Hollister in 1883, is receiving a support that promises a permanent and useful institution. Its places of business are, mainly, three dry goods stores, one hardware store, a drug store, two wagon shops, three blacksmiths, one millinery store, barber shop, meat market, a well kept hotel, and no saloons. There are located here two of the largest stave and heading factories in the country, producing large quantities annually; also saw-mills and feed-mills with their peculiar advantages.

The land from which the village plat was taken was originally the farming lands of Asa Babcock, John Willis, Charles Woodworth, and Thomas Davis. Messrs. Babcock and Willis settled their lands in 1817, and the remaining portions were purchased of their descendants. For use on public occasions there are two well provided public halls, namely, Willit and Shepard's. The business of the place is provided with telephonic and telegraphic communication with all principal villages and cities.

An organization, of which the citizens may well be proud, is represented by the cornet band. Organizing in 1874, they have built on the public park a stand or pagoda. Unlike many others, attempting to sustain like voluntary efforts to amuse the public, this remains popular and in a flourishing condition.

At the earliest effort of concentrating the business of the town at this point a postoffice was established, called "Elba," with Mason Turner first postmaster. Previous a wide spread settlement had to endure the burdens of obtaining their mail from Batavia. A daily mail arrives and departs. The only other postoffice in town is East Elba, established in 1857, from which is received two mails a week.

Early settlers.—John Young and wife came from Virginia in 1804, on horseback, and after innumerable dangers and hardships settled on the eastern part of the premises now owned by Albert Parker, south of Elba village. He received the first deed of farming lands issued by the Holland Land Co., July 11, 1803, in what is now Elba. For a bed they obtained a large cotton bag of Mr. Brisbane, at the "Transit store house," which, filled with the down of the cat-tail flag, certainly afforded them a downy bed, if not one of ease.

John Roraback settled at "Pine Hill," now Elba village, in 1804, and was the weaver for the entire section for many years. Thomas Turner settled on the premises now occupied by Mrs. Wilford, and Ephraim Husted settled on the adjoining lot, both of which were afterwards purchased by Mr. Wilford. Bannan Clark came upon the place latterly owned by Orlando Town, who also was an early settler, and is now owned by Edwin Parker, in the north part of the town. Ephraim Wortman early located upon the farm now owned by William Maltby. A story is told of Mr. Wortman that will bear repetition here. He went to the War of 1812 under Capt. White (who was killed at the burning of Buffalo), and poor Wortman had endured pioneer hardship so practically that, when he arrived in fort where there seemed such plenty, he suggested to the captain, "so much being on hand they might lunch 'tween meals."

Samuel, John, Jesse, and James Drake came about 1811. John settled in the southwest part of the town, on the farm now owned by Aaron Drake, and Norman Drake resides on the premises taken up by his father, James. Lemuel Foster settled on the farm afterwards owned by his son Eden, who also came to the town early. Eleazar Southworth settled in 1808 on the farm now owned by Albert Parker; Asa Sawtell located the farm now owned by Watson Bradley; and Sherrard Parker settled a short distance north of the present village. Daniel Mills, in 1808, located on the farm now owned by his son-in-law, Horace B. Norton, in the southeast part of the town. Mr. Mills was the first Sunday-school superintendent of the first Sabbath-school established in the town. Joel Mills, a brother of Daniel, settled on the premises now owned by his son Daniel D. There were also George Mills and John Mills, and the "Mills neighborhood" remains as a memento of this worthy family, of whom much could be said. The primitive residence of the pioneers, with its old fire-place, yet remains, and is preserved on the premises to remind the present generation that its proverbial hospitality is yet extant in the family. Locklin Norton settled near the "Mills neighborhood," and the death of his wife the first year was a serious event of that day. Isaac Higley settled in the eastern part of the town in 1808, and John Taylor located in the southeast part of the town in 1814, and was long noted for his enterprise and model farming.

Borden Wilcox became a resident in 1812, and we will mention the settlers of his neighborhood as he said he found them: Dudley Sawyer, Dea. Seymour, Enos Kellogg, and Sylvanus Humphrey. Mr. Wilcox also mentions Chester Scott, who came about 1817. He was a valuable man for the new settlement. Mr. Scott taught the first school in the town, assisted Comfort Smith in perfecting the first grist mill, becoming the owner, and completing the carding works started by Solomon Smith, and rebuilding an old log distillery to enable the pioneers to realize some cash for their grain. The raising of the mill, Mr. Wilcox said, was a memorable event for the town, and took the settlers for miles around to a jubilee. Col. Kellogg mounted the highest part of the frame, with the bottle, as was the custom of the day, and announced "another addition to the population of Pleasant Valley." The usefulness and enterprise of Capt. Scott is gratefully remembered by the elder and middle-aged citizens of the county as well as the town. He carried on the distillery for 10 years, and then moved to Batavia. Whisky in those days was only 15 cents per gallon for new.

Andrew B. Jones purchased 20 acres on the Transit line, early, and a saw-mill of Horace Gibbs (also an early pioneer), in which was a set of native stones for grinding feed. He at once erected a distillery, in 1820 rebuilt the saw-mill, in 1822 built the mill known as the "Transit mill," and in 1836 completed a flouring-mill below. Mr. Jones proved himself a benefactor to the new and prosperous country. Nathaniel Ford, in 1820, located in the north part of the town, leaving descendants to perpetuate the name.

The settlers of the northwest portion of the town are not definitely known, but Ambrose Douglass gives a list of those who had settled prior to 1822, the time he became acquainted with the locality, viz.: John Wilson, Washington Gardner, Elisha Buck, James Fuller, Abraham Sleeper, Smith Lane, Israel Hoag, Miles Britton, Wanton Aldrich, James Harris, Richard and Isaac Shotwell, and Robert Irwin.

Patrick O'Fling settled in the town very early, and he, with three sons and a son-in-law, enlisted in the War of 1812. At Fort George, in 1813, Gen. Dearborn, then in command, was attracted by the soldier-like bearing of the old man, and asked him where he had seen service, to which he replied, "in the Revolution under Captain Dearborn." This led to a recognition by the General, who afterwards took much interest in this family of soldiers.

Besides those mentioned previously as pioneers in the town of Elba, we find from Turner's History of the early days of the Holland Purchase, and from other reliable sources, that the following were settlers at an early date: Archibald Whitten, David Kingsley, Thomas Parker, Nathaniel Johnson, Hiram Smith, Col. Samuel Hall, Horace Carr, Benjamin Chase, Elisha Kellogg, Dudley Sawyer, Samuel Cumings, Nathan Miner, Silas Torrey, Edmund Burgess, Joel and Horace Jerome, Joseph Mills, Aaron White, Sylvanus Eldridge, Stephen Harmon, Mason Turner, Samuel Laing, Col. E. J. Pettibone, Asa Babcock, John Willis (an early tavern-keeper, the second in town), Mark Turner, Nelson Parker, Phineas and Loren Barr, John Lamberton, Isaac Barber, Ira Howe, Phineas and John Howe, Simeon Hosmer, Peter H. Knickerbocker, Cornelius Barr, I. Barlow, Richard Edgerton (1806), Nathaniel Ford (1820), S. Eldridge, Thomas Griffin (1820), Reuben Perry (1810), Daniel Woodward (a physician), and C. Woodworth, the greater portion of whom have left worthy descendants to perpetuate their memories and enjoy the fruits of their enterprise.

The first birth in the town was that of Betsey White in 1802, and the first death was David Kingsley in 1804. Stephen Harmon opened the first inn in 1815, and Samuel Laing the first store in 1819, at the place called Pine Hill. The first saw-mill and grist mill were on Spring Creek, erected by Horace Gibbs and Comfort Smith, in 1810, as mentioned previously; and the first school was taught by Mason Turner in 1811, on “Gifford Hill,” at the house of J. W. Gardner. Daniel Woodward was the first physician who settled in the town, and the first justice of the peace appointed for the newly organized town was Charles Woodworth. Dr. James A. Billings was an early physician who located at Dawes Corners, where he died. His brother was at Pine Hill.

The first town meeting held, as was provided by the act, was March 14, 1820, at which the board of canvassers declared the following persons elected: supervisor, Lemuel Foster; town clerk and collector, Mason Turner; assessors, George Mills, Charles Woodworth, and John Underhill; overseers of the poor, Erastus Wolcott and Isaac Benedict; commissioners of highways, Jeremiah Wilford, Mark Turner, and Dudley Sawyer; commissioners of schools, Lemuel Foster, Jeremiah Wilford, and Isaac Higley; constables, Eleazur D. Davis, Ichabod Hinckley, Jr., and Jessemin Drake; school inspectors, E. D. Davis, Samuel White, and Martin Wilson; poundmaster, Nehemiah Ingersoll.

The number of votes cast in the town was 166. It would be well for the reader to remember that in 1820, at this election, there were only the 166 voters, and the territory embraced was all that comprises the present towns of Elba and Oakfield. The number given in by the proper board for jury duty, as “fit and eligible” at the time, was 118. Eighteen road districts were organized in the spring of 1820, and the respective pathmasters appointed. In 1821 it was enacted by the town that every pathmaster destroy Canada thistles, tory weeds, and burdocks on his district three times during the year—a commendable law, and far in advance of the State at large at the present day.
Shubael Dunham, Isaac Benedict, Lemuel Foster, Simeon Hosmer, and Nathaniel Ingersoll were constituted a committee to draft "by-laws for the town." The school committee formed seven full school districts and five joint with surrounding towns.

The development of the town was more rapid as the facilities of surrounding towns and its own were improved, and on the 11th of April, 1842, it was found necessary to form Oakfield from the territory, thus leaving the present town of Elba about six miles square.

Religious organizations.—About 1820 there was a strong feeling in favor of a sect called "Friends," and those prevailed upon the Farmington quarterly meeting to authorize a meeting for "preparation and worship" in the town of Elba. There were 48 members, heads of families, in this town, and more in adjoining towns. During January, 1821, the "Hartland monthly" was established, the members residing in Elba, Hartland, and Royalton. The visiting committee appointed by the quarterly meeting was: Elijah Pond, Ira Lapham, Jonathan Ramsdale, Joseph Jones, William Cromwell, and Abraham Gifford. The first house of worship was erected in 1820, of logs. The society prospered, obtained four acres of land of Joseph Ellicott, erected a substantial stone church, and numbered 138 members in 1838. The property of the organization is located about one mile north of Elba village and includes a cemetery. The society is still in a prosperous condition and has stated meetings. The present pastor is Charles W. Sweet.

East Elba Methodist Episcopal Church, located in the southeast part of the town, commenced its existence by the association of a few fervent friends of that faith at private dwellings, for worship, as early as 1810, by Elder Grant, John Howe, and Brother Seth. A local preacher, with his wife and mother, settled in the town in 1811. At the same time Joseph Walter, an exhorter, with his wife and sister and two brothers—Zalmon and Fayette Luttington—with their families, came in, which enabled the formation of a class of 11 by Rev. Ralph Lanning, and Joseph Walter was appointed leader. The first pastor was Marmaduke Pierce. The first house of worship was built in 1814. The Sunday-school was organized in 1827, and the same year an effort was made to erect a church edifice to accommodate the increasing numbers, and Levi Barnes, John Taylor, Phineas Howe, William Knapp, Isaac Barber, and Locklin Norton were made trustees of the society. Pledges were obtained sufficient to erect the church on the present site, which was dedicated in 1830. The building is plain and substantial, free from decoration outside or in, and without a dome—a memento of the simplicity of the earlier Methodists. The present membership is 64, and Rev. Edward L. Graves is the minister in charge. The church will seat about 300, and the property is valued at $2,500.

The society called the Second Baptist Church of Elba, consisting of 16 members, was formed September 13, 1822, and the first church was erected in 1824. They received the donation of land from the Holland Land Company, according to the rule of that company. The Rev. John Miner was the first pastor. The lot upon which the first edifice was erected was conveyed to the society in 1837 by Perez Billings, the consideration being $100; another deed was given April 13, 1849, by Stephen Selleck. The first church was burned in 1837, and rebuilt in 1849-50. The present membership is 70, and Rev. D. D. Bailey is in charge.

The Presbyterian Church of Elba was organized as a Congregational Church, October 8, 1822, Solomon Hibbard being its first pastor and influential in its organization. There were 16 members. In 1840 it had about 50 members, in 1843, 76, and in 1846 about 80. The first church was built of wood in 1822. Rev. E. H. Stratton was pastor in 1835, R. Whiting in 1838, and G. S. Corwin in 1842. The society adopted the Presbyterian form of government. In 1875 they built a commodious edifice, costing $7,000, and seating 300 persons, which, with parsonage and grounds, is now valued at $10,000. This church possesses the only bell in the town. The membership is about 75 and 125 attend the Sabbath-school.

The Methodist Protestant Church, located on Chapel street, was organized in 1833 by Rev. Isaac Foster, with about 25 members, and a church building was erected of wood in 1834. A new edifice was built in 1878, also of wood, and capable of seating 300 persons. This and the grounds are valued at about $4,300. The membership is about 55, with 13 officers and teachers in the Sunday-school. Rev. A. Smith is pastor.

The weak condition of both the Methodist and Congregational societies, named above, was such, at that early day, that it was necessary to join interests in the erection of an edifice. In 1829, by an agreement adopted by both, each society had a joint ownership in the edifice erected, and to alternately have worship; but not many years elapsed before the Congregational Society gained strength sufficiently to become the sole proprietors. Both societies are now self-sustaining and enjoy modern built places of worship.

A German Evangelical Church has lately been erected through the energy of Rev. Mr. Lange.

The Elba cornet band on January 1, 1889, consisted of 13 pieces. The active members were Charles W. Moore, Benjamin F. Moore, Edward J. Strauts, and Robert Calkins. They meet weekly for practice, and in the season discourse music from the band stand in the public park.

Elba Tent, No. 25, K. O. T. M.—The senior commander of this order is William H. Hunn, and Dr. J. M. Lewis is physician.

Elba Lodge, No. 357, I. O. G. T., was organized in June, 1883, and is a worthy organization managed by the young people of the community.

Cemeteries.—The well provided resting-places for the dead should not be passed as least worthy of notice. The first ground, one acre, was conveyed for a nominal consideration by Asa Babcock. The new cemetery, located at the west bounds of the village, was originated by the public enterprises of the late Sherrard Parker, in 1870. It contains two and one-fourth acres, located on a sand and gravel deposit, appropriate for interment, and desirable as a picturesque location.

In 1868 the following were some of the industries in operation: Phineas Barr, Jr., was proprietor of a saw mill and shop; Edward Bateman kept the Pine Hill Hotel; E. Murphy operated a stave and barrel factory; Jonas S. Billings was a prominent physician and surgeon; French & Co. had a stave and heading-mill, and were cooper; Thomas Griffin had a saw-mill; Hall & Grimes were proprietors of the Spring Creek woolen-mill; Maltby & Barton were in the grocery and provision business; W. C. Raymond was postmaster and kept a general store; Southwick & Staples were stave manufacturers; Israel W. Warner was a physician and surgeon; and E. M. Witney was proprietor of the flouring-mills. At East Elba A. Crocker was postmaster, and James Bray and Frank Kurtz had woolen-mills. Dr. Francis Smiley was a prominent physician of the town about 50 years ago. He died at the age of 86 years.

Some of the present active business men of the village of Elba are Lanckton Harris & Co., dealers in lumber, produce, coal, etc., with an office on South Main street; John H. Dorman, a dealer in produce and agricultural implements, with an office also on South Main street; and William A. Hundredmark, a general merchant.

Phineas Barr, grandfather of William J., was born January 10, 1794, in Deerfield, Mass. He served in the War of 1812, while his father (Cornelius) came and located their new home (about 1811) in Elba. Upon his discharge Phineas joined his parents. He married and had five children, one of whom, Julius J., was born January 15, 1826, and is a farmer. He married, April 9, 1861, Mary A., daughter of Freeman D. Lake, of Batavia, and they have had three children, viz.: one deceased; Freeman P.; and William J., who was born January 12, 1862, received a common school education and attended boarding school in Batavia, and taught several terms. He went to the Normal School in Owego, from which he graduated in 1885. He has devoted his entire attention to teaching and educational interests, and has achieved an honorable position among the educators of the State. In the fall of 1887 he was elected school commissioner of the county for three years.

Daniel Booth was born in Charlemont, Mass. In 1759 he married Lucinda Allis, and they were parents of 10 children, of whom but two survive, namely: Martha M. and Joel A. The latter was born in Massachusetts, September 29, 1808, and when about 20 years of age came to Nunda, N. Y. He married, first, Emeret E. Jackman, of Livonia, by whom he had eight children, of whom two are deceased, and six are living, viz.: Cyrus M., Eliza, Emily E., George A., Charles W., and Frank S. For his second wife he married, January 24, 1858, Mrs. Laura T. (Colburn) Hannah, and reared two children, Parlemon J. and Lola G. Mr. and Mrs. Booth have lived on road 56 for 31 years.
William Butcher was born in Cambridgeshire, Eng., March 3, 1829, came to Clarendon, Orleans County, in 1850, and afterwards to Elba. September 26, 1856, he married Eunice L. Van Dusen, of Elba. She was born in Byron. They have two children, viz.: Laura, born May 5, 1857, who married Thomas Barber; and Mattie A., born May 1, 1866. The family resides on road 16.

Carl Berk and Fred, his son, were born in Germany, the latter November 1, 1850. Fred received a common school education, came to America in 1865, and May 5, 1871, he married Rachel Shoultz, formerly of Germany. Their children were twins, one of whom is deceased, and the other, Annie, married Albert Burr, April 5, 1887. They have one son, George, born May 12, 1888. Mr. and Mrs. Berk live on road 9.

Thomas Bradway was born in Massachusetts, in 1782, and was twice married, first, to Miss Moulton, who bore him children Lester, William, and Louisa. His second wife was Rebecca Riddle, of Massachusetts, who came to Alexander in 1809, by whom he had nine children, viz.: Rebecca, Emily, Minerva, Polly, James M., George W., Lavina, Alvira, and Warren. George W. Bradway, born in Alexander, January 25, 1819, received a fair education for the times, and was a woolen manufacturer by occupation. In 1847 he came to Byron Center. October 11, 1843, he married Polly Rose, who was born in Monroe County in 1817. They have four children, viz.: a son who died aged 13 years, and Frederick, Emily, and Ella D. Frederick married twice, first, Catharine Fonda, of Batavia, and second, Bertha Gould, of Elba. Emily married Charles Adams, of North Java, N. Y., and Ella D. married John W. Roach, of Byron.

Robert Caple was born near Bristol, Somersetshire, Eng., September 26, 1819, and came to Onondaga County, N. Y., in 1836. Two years later he returned to England, and remained there 10 years. May 23, 1840, he married Sarah Saynsbury, and a few years after returned to this country with his wife and four children. The history of the Raymond family dates back to the third century, and we find them among the Romans, the Germans, English, Scotch, Irish, and Americans. Ferguson, an authority on names, says "that the name Raymond is derived from the old German name Raginmund." This was in the eighth century. The modern German name is Raimund. There was a long line of Counts of Toulouse of Southern France called Raymonds. The present form of the name was, in all probability, from the above mentioned counts, and translated as follows: Rai (a beam of light) and monde (i.e. world). Coming down the pages of history we find one Simeon Raymond, 9th, great-great-grandfather to William H.; and Walter H., who was born at Old Well, Norwalk, Connecticut, in 1711. History: "The first known of the Southworths in the United States was a mistress Alice Southworth, a widow with three children, who came from England in the good ship Mayflower and landed at Plymouth Rock, Mass. She was a lady preëminent for her many good qualities, and afterwards became the wife of Governor William Bradford, of Colonial fame. From her children sprang the Southworths, Southards, and Southers, some of whom went West and South."]

LE ROY.

LE ROY.—The narrator of to-day labors under the disadvantage of being unable to derive materials from original sources of its first settlement, the actors in the scene having passed away, and from their descendants or tradition local facts are mainly to be derived. Historical societies, patient and industrious antiquarians, and county historians have indeed rescued many interesting events from oblivion, but much has perished and will from neglect now be lost. But from what has been preserved, particularly from the careful and industrious researches of the late Mr. Turner, a fair picture of the life of the pioneer settler upon the Holland Purchase may be obtained, which in all the salient features were throughout substantially the same. Western New York, it is seen, was peopled by a hardy race,—strong of limb and stout of heart, with that patience in toil, power of endurance, enterprise, thrift, and moral stamina which make men fit to found a State.

This is a centennial period, so far as to mark the beginning of emigration and the settlement of this fair country of the Genesee. The first main cause history distinctly traces. It was to the campaign of Maj.-Gen. Sullivan against the Iroquois that we chiefly owe the opening to the world at large of this magnificent domain, and the complete subjugation of the war-like tribe that had here their home. Previous to the war of the Revolution white settlements did not advance beyond the lower Mohawk Valley. At its close and the declaration of peace in 1783 the spirit of emigration revived and became almost universal. No field was more inviting than the rich, alluvial soil, broad plains, and picturesque scenes which had been revealed to the army of General Sullivan in the conquest of the Senecas. How complete this was, a brief extract from a dispatch of Sullivan's to General Washington will show, as well as furnish a glimpse of the fertility of the country, even under savage and barbarous rule. Under date of October 17, 1779, he writes, announcing his victory:

"Forty of their towns have been reduced to ashes, some of them large and commodious, that of Genesee alone containing 128 houses. Their crops have been entirely destroyed, which by estimation it was said would have produced 160,000 bushels of corn, besides large quantities of vegetables of several kinds. Their whole country has been overrun and laid waste, and they themselves were compelled to take precipitate flight to Niagara."

Suffice it to say that this subjugation of the Seneca-Iroquois was final, and was the last rising they ever made against the white man. But to us it was something more than a victory and punishment of the red man for his atrocities during the war of the Revolution. To the invading army it opened, as it were, a new world, and became at once an inspiration and revelation. In the tide of emigration which flowed thither, after peace was declared, it proved the truth that "peace has its victories not less renowned than war." It was the beginning of that onward march and progress which has ever since continued, and in its grand results the marvel of the age we live in. But to note this advance and change, which has developed into an empire of itself, is outside of our present purpose.

In this army of General Sullivan's was a soldier who, captivated with the beauty and fertility of the country through which the army passed, resolved as early as practicable to select from thence a spot for his future home. It was Capt John Ganson. He was born in Bennington, Vt., in 1750, and entered the army of the Revolution at the beginning of the war; was wounded in the battle of Bunker Hill by the loss of a finger, which was shot off in that battle; received the commission of captain; served honorably through the war, and retired at its close to his home in Bennington. It was only to make preparation for his final removal. In 1789 or '90 he started with two of his sons, James and John, of the respective ages of 12 and 14 years, on a prospecting tour to these western wilds. They continued their journey until they reached the Genesee River, late in the autumn, two miles below what is now the village of Avon, where he made a purchase for a future home, and returned to Bennington for the remainder of his family. Not wishing to expose his boys to the hardships of another journey he made an arrangement with a friendly Seneca to receive and take care of them in his absence, which he supposed would not be long delayed. In this he was disappointed. On his return to Bennington he found his wife prostrated by a serious illness, which, after lingering for several months, proved fatal, and it was late in the following spring before he, with his family and effects, was on his way westward, for his new possession. We have a pen and ink portrait of a portion of the country as it then was. It purports to be from the pen of an English traveler, but presumably written by Colonel William, the then agent for the "Pultney & Hornby tract"; but as it gives a glimpse of what this part of Western New York then was we extract a passage. He had left New York on this route, and writes:
On the evening of the third day's journey from Whitestown (a village of a few straggling huts) we were agreeably surprised to find ourselves on the east side of Seneca Lake. We forded the outlet of the lake and arrived safe at Geneva—only consisting of a few log houses. From Geneva to Canandaigua the road is only an Indian path, a little improved the first five miles over gentle swellings of land, interspersed with bottoms seemingly very rich. The remainder of the road to Canandaigua, the county town, for six miles, was the greatest part of the distance through a rich, heavy timbered land. On this road there were only two families settled. Canandaigua consisted of only two small frame houses, and a few huts surrounded by thick woods. From Canandaigua to the Genesee River, twenty-six miles, it is almost totally uninhabited, only few families residing on the road. The country is beautiful and very open. In many places the openings are free of any timber, appearing to contain 200 or 300 acres beautifully variegated with hill and dale. Enclosing any one of them with a proportionable quantity of timbered land an enclosure might be made not inferior to an English park.

Such was the outlook of the face of the country when Captain Ganson passed over it, and on his arrival at the Genesee River (1790) there was scarce a white settler to greet him. As he stood before the door of the Indian's wigwam, in whose charge he had left his boys, what was his surprise to witness their perfect transformation. In everything but color they were veritable natives. In manners, language, unkempt locks,—not to omit vermin,—their pale-face origin was barely discernible. But their greeting with the returned parent, whom they had supposed lost, from his long absence, was not the less cordial, and they were quite content to abandon the Indian life, which they had expected to be permanent. This early experience of the Gansons with the Senecas was not without its future use in their intercourse with the tribe, who in large numbers still made this part their camping-ground and "council fires." They were always after on a friendly footing with the tribe, and from their knowledge of the language were often called upon as interpreters. The following from a daughter of Captain Ganson, who married, first, a Mr. Forsyth and afterwards a Mr. Warren, and settled and died on the Ridge road in the county of Niagara, contains a brief note of the early life of her father:

"After my father moved from Avon to the west side of the river (now Le Roy), and opened a public house, other settlers came in. The Indians were frequent visitors at my father's. I used to see them often; the chiefs Red Jacket, Hot Bread, Jack Berry, and Little Beard. Sometimes the Indians were turbulent—they would become a terror to the new settlement. My father was a stout athletic man, and had great influence over them, and would quell them in their worst drunken frolics."

When settled upon the Genesee the Gansons put up the first grist-mill erected upon the river. It was made of logs, the stones of the native rock, and was mainly useful in grinding corn. It was a primitive structure, and in but a limited way could supply the necessities of the settlers. It was quite a common practice to break the first crop of corn in a mortar. A cotemporary settler of the period (1790) speaks of his carrying his buckwheat (brought from Connecticut) 20 miles on horseback to Ganson's mill. But this distance was comparatively small. "Going to mill" was the great family event, when days were consumed in the journey, and was like the fitting out of an expedition. Of the one erected at a later period, at the mill site in Mumford, John McKay, Esq., in speaking of it, says:

"I came to Caledonia in 1803. There was then but two houses at the springs. I purchased two hundred acres of land, including the Big spring and the mill site. Captain Williamson had built a small grist-mill, with one run of stones, to accommodate the Scotch settlers about eighteen months before I came.... My customers for some time were from the settled portions of the Holland Purchase; they came from as far as Buffalo when they could not cross the river to Canada on account of the ice. In fact, at times from all the region west of me."

The want of mills was a privation from which they were soon relieved by the above mill erected at Mumford and one by Stoddard & Platt, in 1803, at Le Roy, and soon after one by the Holland Land Co. at Batavia. The primitive milling of the Gansons having soon been abandoned, they decided, in 1797, upon a removal on the west side of the river. Charles Wilbur had preceded them in 1793, and opened the first farm west of the Genesee and erected a small log dwelling for a tavern. This Captain Ganson purchased. It was the beginning of what was afterwards known as the "Ganson settlement," which was to develop and expand into the present village of Le Roy. The farm purchased and occupied by the Gansons, ever since known by that name, is the same now owned and cultivated (but in somewhat shorn proportions) by Henry H. Olmsted, at the east boundary of the village. Hinds Chamberlin, about the same time, commenced his improvements upon what was subsequently known as the Sheldon farm, which he later sold to Asher Bates, who came in from Canandaigua. Chamberlin then opened the farm east in the village, which is owned by the estate of Widow Osborn, and on which he lived until his decease. Of Deacon Chamberlin we would add a few particulars, as he was literally the first pioneer and an enterprising and useful settler, and prominent in all works of improvement. He opened the first road (previously nothing but an Indian trail) from the river to Ganson's tavern, under Richard M. Stoddard as road commissioner, but made at the expense of the Holland Land Co. If not the first white man who saw, he was the first who bore record of, the Oatka, and the beauty and future promise of this locality. It was in midsummer of 1792 that with two companions he started on an exploring tour westward, and they made their first halting-place on the banks of the Oatka, at or about the site of the present Episcopal Church. It was a beautiful Indian camping-ground. The stream was clear; full and flowing over a rapid of 60 feet in extent and a fall of 11 feet. The practical mind of the Deacon foresaw and did not forget its value and importance as a future water-power. Whether, in their bivouacking, "buttermilk" formed a part of the luxury of the haversack tradition does not affirm, but is not a construction improbable, for the name was attached to the falls from the earliest period, but of which it has since been ruthlessly robbed and applied to the "big fall" two miles below. As unromantic as this sobriquet is it should at least historically be restored to where it belongs. The Seneca name for the falls was not quite so pronounceable—Te-car-no-wan-no, signifying "many rapids." There is, it may be remarked, everything in a name. It is to us a source of pride that to the beautiful Oatka has been given back its Indian name, which signifies "opening," from the "oak opening" at its junction with the Genesee in place of "Allan's" Creek. It took its name from Allan becoming the owner of a large tract upon the stream.

Ebenezer Allan was a noted character in his day, and one not uncommon in border life, and would in some particulars answer to that of "border ruffian." A brief digression may be pardoned in speaking of him, since his name in common parlance is still a prefix to our beautiful and more euphonious Oatka, and is now found upon our title records. He was a bold, bad man, of much energy and force of character, and at one time the owner of the Genesee Falls at Rochester, where he erected the first grist mill, with 100 acres embracing the heart of the city, and in other sections was a large property holder. He was familiarly called "Injun Allan," doubtless from the fact that he had married two squaws, —Millie and Lucy,—the first bearing six children and the latter two daughters. Mr. McKay, before mentioned, of Caledonia, said of him:

"I knew Allan well. He was about 50 years of age when I first came to the Genesee River. He was tall and straight, light complexion, genteel in appearance, and of good address."

He enlarged his domestic household by marrying at intervals two white women, probably to console himself for the earlier mesalliance; the one by captivating the daughter of a passing emigrant, the other a widow, whom it was said and believed he made such by "making way" with an inconvenient husband. How far this blending of domestic colors tended to harmonize the picture is not left upon record.

A word, however, may be added of this à la Mormon household, the first of the kind upon the Genesee,—of the two half-breed daughters who were destined to a higher career. In 1791, from the law and custom of the Senecas in regard to the division of the avails of their land sales and land, they deeded to Allan four square miles lying upon the Genesee and covering the present village of Mt. Morris, on the condition in the deed of trust that out of the proceeds he should cause the girls to be instructed in reading, writing, and sewing, and other useful arts, according to the custom of the white people. Allan took pride in carrying out to more than the letter this trust. He placed his girls in Philadelphia in the best schools the city afforded, and took pains that they should be wanting in no accomplishment money could supply. On attaining womanhood they returned, it is said, highly educated, and in manners and refinement, as well as in beauty of person, commanded admiration from all with whom they came in contact. This may be inferred from the fact that, soon after their "coming out," Allan, having an offer of 3,000 acres from Governor Sinclair of the province, removed with them to Canada, where he died in 1814. He took with him but one wife, and that a white one, where his daughters shortly formed marriage alliances from the best soci ety, and their descendants are now found among the first families of the province. So that at the last, in his devotion to his daughters, it may be said of this graceful but graceless corsair,

"That linked with one virtue was a thousand crimes."

But to return from the digression. Deacon Chamberlin extended his travel west, following the Indian trail, over unbridged streams and miry swamps, and finding en route but a solitary settler until he reached Buffalo (then Erie). It had not yet received the name of New Amsterdam, which it was later christened by Joseph Ellicott. Here, too, there was but a solitary white man,—Cornelius Winne, a Hudson River Dutchman,—who, in 1789, had been tempted into their wilds to open trade with the Indians that, since the treaty for the sale of their lands to Phelps & Gorham, congregated here in large numbers. His log store was on the site of the present Mansion House in the city, and his goods consisted of rum, whisky, knives, trinkets, etc. Here he entertained Chamberlin, if being in close quarters, in a house filled with drunken Indians, could be called "entertainment." It was afterwards confessed by him to be "rather a poor night's rest." His adventures on this trip, which was as far as Presque Isle (now Erie), it is not our purpose to relate, only so far as to show the general condition of this virgin soil before the white man peopled it, when as such he was the object of great curiosity both to squaw and Indian, who in straggling bands peopled the route. His return to the Genesee followed, finding no country more inviting for improvement and tillage than the one he had left behind, a characteristic which it retains to this day.

But what a world of change it was permitted the Deacon in the space of a single life to witness! A transformation more wonderful than any of Aladdin's creation on every spot on which his eye had rested! Upon the spot where in this first adventure he had traveled, where the Iroquois were its undisturbed lords, he was to see a city to spring up and spread in ever increasing magnitude, and destined to rank in the near future with the great capitals of the western world. And over all the broad domain, which he had traversed by an Indian trail, he was to see arise populous villages, smiling fields, and homes indicating prosperity, plenty, and content. An empire "born in a day!"

Deacon Chamberlin died in Le Roy, in 1848, at the advanced age of 85, "like a shock of corn fully ripe," as was aptly said at his funeral. He was one of the organizers of the first Baptist Church in Le Roy, and for this purpose granted a lot from his farm at the east of the village, on which the building was erected. As population increased, and business centered near the Oatka, the church location was considered too remote, and it was removed to its present site on Church street, on the convincing and analogous argument of its then pastor, that "if one would catch rabbits he must set his trap where rabbits run." Mr. Chamberlin left a family of three sons and one daughter, none of whom now survive. Stewart, the eldest, was for many years the leading grocer in the village.
He built the present Central Hall, and contributed otherwise largely to village improvements. The children that survive him are George, Henry, and Spencer, and Mary, the wife of Mr. Cole, all residents of Chicago.

The Ganson settlement.—Upon the opening of new roads, and the completion of the surveys of the Holland Land Co. under Joseph Elliott, in 1802, the whole section became alive with immigrants. It was during this period that the Ganson settlement received many accessions. The "Ganson tavern," its chief landmark, required to be enlarged, the log tavern razed to the ground, and a frame building erected in its place as a necessity from the increased travel. John Ganson, Jr., was its proprietor, and under him the hostelry became one of the most noted for the accommodation of the traveler between Albany and the lakes, a reputation which it retained for the whole period it was used as a public house.

It is not within our limit, neither is it our purpose, to give detailed items of personal history. For this a volume would not suffice, and save in exceptional instances of interest, and where the descendants are among us, a brief mention is all that so condensed a history will permit. It must suffice to group names as far as they can be recalled, and this will probably be chiefly conspicuous for its omissions. But by far the greater number, all, indeed, of those first-comers, will be found reposing in honored graves in our own or in contiguous cemeteries. The first of these, opened about 1801, was on a lot donated for this purpose by Capt. Jotham Curtis, one of the early settlers and a tavern-keeper, on his farm two miles east of the village, and where a Mr. Wiley, the first person whose death is recorded, was buried, subsequently sold to Capt. Daniel Buel, and since known as the Buel farm. This for many years was the sole burying-ground. The Episcopal and Presbyterian yards were opened on the organization of their respective societies. And it is at quite a modern period that a company was formed for laying out the Machpelah Cemetery, which has become one of the most beautiful in the country, and to which many of the remains of these pioneers have been removed. It is from these moss-covered stones in the old and new grounds that their names may be found, with a brief record of their birth, their age, their death. But this is not all. They live in their fruits. The smiling plenty of to-day attests to their sturdy virtues, their patient and hardy toil.

"Oft did the harvest to their sickle yield;
The furrow oft the sturdy glebe has broke.
How jocund did they drive their team afield!
How bow'd the woods beneath their sturdy stroke!"

The first bridge over the Oatka was built in 1802. It was a memorable event. James Ganson was the contractor, and Charles Wilbur and Jotham Curtis the commissioners. Two hundred dollars in addition to $50 voted by the town had been raised for its construction. Laborers and a derrick, etc., had been obtained from Canandaigua, and a general "bee" raised for the work of laying the timbers over the stream, made of split chestnut logs. A shanty for the men, and for providing entertainment for the occasion, was erected on the bank of the Oatka, and the great work was commenced and finished in five days. Mrs. James Ganson, in her old age, informed the writer that she was the hostess that made provision for the entertainment, which was abundant in substantials, and not wanting in doughnuts and gingerbread, and of the liquids "old rye" was not without a fair representation. It was before the day of temperance agitation. The second grand occasion at this spot was when the first dam for the grist mill was finished, and the hour had come for the gate to be raised. For this honor, among the crowd of maids and matrons assembled to witness it, Mrs. Stoddard, Mrs. Wolcott, and Mrs. James Ganson were selected, and when they had lifted the gate and the waters rushed through a shout went up from the waiting crowd, upon so memorable an event, which was the first triumph over the waters of the Oatka, and all joined in the festivities which followed.

It is not to be supposed that the new settlement was without its recreations and amusements. From the earliest period of its history general training was the great annual event, that brought from far and near all the settlers to enjoy its display and partake of its festivities. The first was held on the Ganson farm in 1801. At the meeting to organize the first company, after choosing Joseph Hewitt, captain; Daniel Davis, lieutenant; James Ganson, ensign; and eight subalterns, there were but 10 men left for privates. But the general training took in the wide circuit of all the outlying settlements. It was held sometimes on the Ganson and Davis farms, and sometimes on the bank of the Oatka. It usually closed with a sham fight and often with a real one, particularly among the Indians, who were always out in "full feather" to imbibe the "fire water" and enjoy the sights. In the proper season for such gatherings "paring bees" for both sexes and raisings for the men was the hospitable custom, and good cheer and social enjoyment abounded. But terpsichore was by no means neglected. The fiddler of the period was Chapman Hawley, who made his first settlement on what is now the Vary farm, east of the village, and discoursed the music of the dance to the waiting and expectant company assembled for the purpose. This was usually in the ball room of the old Ganson tavern, the present residence, as has been stated, of Mr. Olmsted, where it can still be seen in its primitive state. If its walls could but speak what festive times would they reveal!

Northampton was the first name given to the township, and it embraced all of the territory west of the Genesee River. It has often been called by the early pioneers the town of "two rivers," from the fact of its being bounded on the east by the Genesee River and on the west by the Niagara. It had Lake Ontario for its northern boundry, and extended south to the Pennsylvania line. It is this broad extent of Northampton that gives interest to the infant settlement, of which this is but an imperfect outline. Its history begins when Buffalo was not, when Rochester was not, and when no intervening homestead had been planted in all of the territory. In 1789 a few adventurers had crossed the Genesee River and settled upon its border. Peter Shaefer opened a farm at the mouth of the Oatka, bought of Ebenezer Allan before mentioned. He was soon followed by Isaac Scott, the beginner of Scottsville, and from whom it took its name. A Mr. Schoonover settled near the mouth of Dugan's Creek. Gilbert Berry was the first to establish a ferry over the Genesee at the site of the present bridge, and built a log house, where he opened trade with the Indian village of Canawaugus.

The first town meeting of this "empire" township was held at Big Springs (Caledonia), on April 4, 1797. The following were its officers: Gad Wadsworth, presided; Josiah Fish, supervisor; Eli Granger, town clerk; Peter Sheaffer, road commissioner and poormaster; Isaac Scott, fence viewer; and Hinds Chamberlin, constable. At a town meeting at the same place the following year $50 was voted for building the bridge over the Oatka, at a point which thus early was termed the "Buttermilk Falls," and the name here first appeared upon record. It was not until 1800 that the first tax was levied, for literally there was nothing previous subject to taxation. The roll contained 142 names, and of these 85 were assessed less than 50 cents each. The burden of the taxes was laid upon non-residents, there being but $200 assessed upon the settlers. Of these John Ganson, Sr., paid the largest, $2.10, and his son James the smallest, two cents, on a personality of $12. The "blovted capitalist" had not yet found his way in these parts. The total tax raised was $8,387. Contrast this with the millions now annually assessed and collected from the cities and counties which cover the territory.

In 1800 a census was taken (which was the first) by Gen. Amos Hall, the United States deputy marshal, under the census law of 1790. In the list is found the names of all the settlers from a mile west of Seneca Lake. The list shows from what small beginnings this large and populous district has sprung. The census enumeration was made soon after the act, and in it the only name found belonging to this section is that of John Ganson. The total of males in the enumeration was 728; females, 340; free blacks, 7; slaves, 9; total, 1,084.

In 1802 the county of Genesee was erected from the county of Ontario, and Batavia made the county seat. The office of the Holland Land Co. (which had completed its surveys) was also established there. By the same act which erected the county Northampton was divided, and this part took the name of Southampton.

Southampton.—The first meeting of the new township was held in March, 1802. Although shorn of its grand proportions it still embraced all there now is of Caledonia, Wheatland, and the territory south to the Pennsylvania line. At this meeting Christopher Layburn was chosen supervisor. Among the names of officers chosen from the Ganson settlement we find there James and John Ganson, Hinds Chamberlin, and Ezra Platt. Coming down as late as 1808 we find the following as justices of the peace in the new township: Richard M. Stoddard, Joseph Hewitt, Ezra Platt, John and James Ganson, who served early; and later Amos Hall, Robert Nesbitt, Samuel Davis, Jeremiah Hascall, Asher Bates, S. Bates, David Davis, and G. H. and J. Fox.
Ezra Platt came into the settlement from Canandaigua in 1801-02. It was about the same period that Richard M. Stoddard accompanied him. He had married the daughter of Dudley Saltonstall. In May, 1801, Joseph Ellicott, acting as the special agent of Messrs. Le Roy and Bayard, employed Mr. Stoddard to survey the Triangular tract, giving minute directions, especially as to the laying off of 500 acres at "Buttermilk Falls." This same tract of 500 acres, was in 1802 bought by Platt and Stoddard, which is now all covered by the village of Le Roy. The interest of Saltonstall in the purchase was sold to Ezra Platt, and Stoddard and Platt formed a copartnership and erected on the Oatka the first grist-mill west of the Genesee River. Mr. Platt was a popular and influential man in the rising community, and took a leading part in its improvement. He donated to the public the land for the park, christened by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Hanson Cox "Trigon," from its triangular shape, and built at his own expense a frame school-house on the site of the present Methodist parsonage. He was a lay-reader in the Sunday services held in the school-house before a church was organized. In his church relations he was an Episcopalian, and the first Episcopalian baptism was of a child of his, by the Rev. Davenport Phelps, who was the first officiating minister of this church this side of the Genesee River.

Judge Platt was the first to receive the appointment of judge in the new Genesee County, from Governor Tompkins, and appointed with him were Judges John H. Jones and Benjamin Ellicott. Ezra Platt's original commission for judge is now in the possession of Walter H. Smith, a lawyer, of Le Roy. He died at an early age, in 1811, and left three sons, Elijah, Ezra, and George, and one daughter, the consort of Stephen A. Wolcott, all deceased. Mr. Wolcott came into the settlement from Geneva in 1802, and settled upon the present site of Ingham University. He was a builder, the first cabinetmaker, and put up a frame house for Samuel B. Walley—the oldest frame now standing in the village of Le Roy. It was removed by Mr. Austin, the first miller in Le Roy, to its present site, and now is the west wing of A. O. Comstock's residence on Trigon Park, in the village. Mr. Wolcott died in 1857 and left one son and three daughters, of whom but two survive, Mrs. Clarenda Buel, from whose reminiscences many facts herein narrated are obtained, and Miss Anne Wolcott. Both reside on the old homestead.

Richard M. Stoddard, in 1802, opened the first land office. He was the local agent of the "Triangle" tract. He erected the first building on the west side of the Oatka. It was built of logs, and its site was on the corner of Main and Mill streets, the site of Steuber's furniture store. He also erected a frame building on the site of the present Wiss House. Rufus Robertson and Samuel Deveaux occupied it first as a store, and afterwards Robertson as a public house. The house was enlarged by a Mr. Walbridge, and called the Globe and Eagle Hotel, so-called from the brazen sign of an eagle standing on a globe. Many now remember this glittering and conspicuous sign, which was the first to arrest attention in an approach to the village. Among the early landlords succeeding Walbridge was Elisha Stanley, who was as noted as a good landlord as later in life as a good churchman. His nephew, John H. Stanley, was its landlord on the occasion of the first great State convention of the Anti Masons, held in Le Roy in 1827. It was presided over by Gen. William Wadsworth, and it was the beginning of the great party which spread over the State and Nation, and to which further allusion will be made. On this occasion there were three stands erected for the display of oratory, on which Solomon Southwick, afterwards nominated as the Anti-Masonic candidate for governor, held forth on the evils of Masonry in a speech of three hours.

Richard M. Stoddard was elected the first sheriff of Genesee County, and a wide jurisdiction was his for the service of a writ, and from which to summon a jury. As an illustration of the experience of the pioneer, from his Indian surroundings, an incident may be related of the Stoddard family while living upon the bank of the Oatka. Mrs. Stoddard, the wife of Richard, remembered as a woman of culture as well as of courage and resolution, was awakened at midnight by the sudden entrance into her house of a party of intoxicated Indians. Her husband at the time was absent at his mill. They entered her kitchen, made a large fire, and commenced a pow-wow as if they were masters of the premises. Mrs. Stoddard, who was in bed in another room, managed to get a little girl out of the window, who ran to the mill and gave the alarm. As Mr. Stoddard came into the house the Indians attacked him and a severe fight ensued. Mr. Stoddard was, however, the victor, and succeeded in expelling the intruders. Turner, in speaking of Stoddard, says that he was fearless and determined, and had seen much of frontier life, and few were better adapted to the work of settling a new country and becoming its chief executive officer. Notwithstanding the above conflict he was much esteemed by the Indians, and was often consulted by the chiefs. Mrs. Stoddard, too, redeems the Indian character from the disgrace of the drunken frolic by bearing witness to their interest and kindness in cases of sickness, particularly where it was required to administer the Indian "sweat." She related an occasion when her family were sick with a prevailing influenza. They dug holes in the ground, put in hot stones, over which they poured hot water, then placed the patients where they would receive the steam, and covering them with blankets suffered them to remain until the "sweating," of which there can be but little doubt was certain to effect the cure.

Mr. Stoddard continued his work of improvement and built a tavern on the site of the present Eagle Hotel. He died in 1810, and was greatly missed in the rising community for his public spirit and enterprise. His widow, with her son Thomas B., a lawyer, who is remembered by early residents now living, removed to Irving, Chautauqua County, where they resided until their decease. The only other surviving child at the time was a daughter, who married Hon. John B. Skinner, then a resident of Middlebury, and one of the most distinguished at the bar as an advocate and lawyer. He subsequently removed to Buffalo. He and his wife are since both deceased, and their remains rest in Forest Lawn of that city.

Graham Newell was the first lawyer settled in the place, and he succeeded Mr. Stoddard in the land office, his residence and office being the same as at present occupied by F. C. Lathrop.

Daniel Davis was among the earliest of the pioneers. He, soon after his arrival, married Naomi Le Barron, who had emigrated to the settlement with the family of Philemon Nettleton from Killingworth, Conn., and it was the first marriage in the settlement, if not the first this side of the Genesee, and their daughter Naomi was the first child born in the settlement (1797). The marriage ceremony was performed by Charles Wilbur, the first justice of the peace. His commission was granted by Gov. Clinton, who, in the first State constitution, had the appointing power. Davis opened a farm two miles east of the Gansons. He had a passion for military life. As we have before remarked, in the first military organization, in 1801, on the Ganson place, he was chosen lieutenant. His military taste was destined to be displayed on a wider field. On the first declaration of war in 1812 he was among the first to enlist, and entering upon the field he was rapidly promoted for his coolness and bravery, until he obtained the rank of brigadier-general. It was in this capacity he acted in the command of the force at the sortie of Fort Erie, September 14, 1814. It was one of the bravest and most desperate encounters of the war. His coolness and courage were here especially conspicuous. He led in advance of his division with sword in hand; and when warned not to ascend the parapet, did so, and was instantly and fatally shot in the neck and fell in the arms of his aid-de-camp. He was borne from the field and thence to his home for burial, where his remains now rest in the old cemetery east of the village. Thus ended a brilliant and promising career, at the early age of 37. His widow subsequently removed to Ypsilanti, Mich., where she survived him many years, and died there in a good old age.

In the same ground are also found the remains of several who, in this desperate encounter on the 'frontier, offered their lives for their country. They deserve to be held in honored remembrance.—Capt. Daniel Buel, Nathan E. Wilcox, Aaron Scribner, Nathaniel King John Sweatland, Darius Spring, Orange Judd, Orrin Datus Olds, William Olds. To these might be added others who lost their lives in the war by exposure: Ensign Platt, Pierson, Hubbard, Todd, and Porter Buell.

The honor of precedence in the first marriage in the Ganson settlement has to be divided with Gardner Carver and Lydia Davis, who, on the same occasion as the above, were joined in matrimony by the same justice.

Among a few of these earliest pioneers, of whom some will be further mentioned under the head of the different professions, was Asher Bates, who came from Canandaigua and settled here in 1801, on the farm opened by Hinds Chamberlin, known as the Sheldon farm. He died in 1810, and his widow became the wife of Dr. Sheldon. His son Asher, Jr., was a lawyer and became the attorney-general of the Sandwich Islands, and afterwards a judge in San Francisco, where some of his descendants are still living. Friend Hall was among the earliest comers, and opened the Murphy farm. Gilbert Hall had preceded him, in 1799, and opened a farm known as the Phelps farm adjoining the Buel place. At this period Mrs. Hall related that, in removing to her new home, but two white settlers were found at Big Spring. She said her heart failed her when she reached her rude cabin at the close of the day; she had not even a door with which to protect her from the Indian intruders, with which the country was filled. She was, however, hospitably entertained by the first comer, Charles Wilbur. She died in 1825. Jabez Fox was among these early settlers, on what is known as the Cornell Williams place. And about the same time James Davis, Jr., came into the settlement. Among these early beginners on West Main street was Lyman Prindle, who built a dwelling on the present site of Dr. Barret's house; on West Main street, in 1802, Richard Waite came in from Canandaigua and built and settled upon the Brewster place, now owned by F. C. Lathrop. He was an exemplary Christian, and after the erection of his cabin opened it for Sunday worship whenever a supply could be found for its occupancy. He was the father of the late Daniel D. Waite, the sometime editor of the Advocate at Batavia, and his son, Elder Waite, has for a long time had charge of a Methodist Church at Alexander. Richard Waite died there in 1857. Capt. James Austin came into the place in the capacity of a miller, and removed the Walley house from the bank of the creek to the present site of A. O. Comstock's dwelling, and opened a public house. Thaddeus Keyes, the first tanner, settled at about the same time, on Trigon Park. Ebenezer Fox soon followed and opened here the first singing school, where it is said the first tune learned was "Concord." Aaron Scribner was an early resident, on what was afterwards the Hurlbut place. Among these early settlers was Samuel Davis, who owned and opened the Abial Robertson farm east of the village, and where his tragic end occurred at a later period, and which many of our older residents will recall. He opened a tavern—as was almost every dwelling upon the road—for the accommodation of the incoming emigrant. This tragedy was upon the person of the landlord himself, who was killed in a brawl by Elijah Gray, Sr., and James, his son. Both were tried and convicted of the murder, the former sentenced for life (afterwards commuted), and the latter suffered the extreme penalty of the law, and was hung in Batavia, the last public execution witnessed in the county. This occurred in 1829. The remains of the murdered man were buried in a lot upon his own farm. One other trial for murder had preceded it in the county as early as 1807. It was that of the murder of William Orr by James McLean, who was tried before Daniel
D. Tompkins, then the presiding judge, when McLean was convicted and expired his offence upon the gallows.

There was at a somewhat later period another influx of immigrants. Jeremiah Hascall emigrated from Connecticut, and settled here in 1805, upon the farm east of the village, now known as "Dreamland," and owned and occupied by S. C. Wells. He had four sons, Jeremiah, Amasa, John, and Augustus P. (noticed more at length in "Bench and Bar"), and two daughters. Gen. Milo Hascall, now of Indiana, was a son of Amasa, a graduate of West Point, and a distinguished officer in the late war. Herbert, a son of Augustus P., was also a graduate of West Point, and gallantly served in the civil war.

Major Simon Pierson, subsequently an officer in the War of 1812, came in 1808 and settled near Fort Hill, where he explored and exhumed the mysteries of the fort, which brought to light many Indian relics, found often below the largest trees, showing that it was of remote antiquity when "live" Indians occupied it as a fort. He died in 1864. He was in direct line of descent from Rev. Abraham Pierson, the first president of Yale College. Many of these relics are in the possession of Mr. Huftelen, a fancy florist of the town, and of F. C. Lathrop. The first blacksmith was Mr. Brown, opposite the Sheldon farm. There was, a little later, the advent of John Gilbert, also a blacksmith and axemaker, who settled upon the hill on West Main street. His son became in after life a distinguished portrait painter, whose work ranked high with artists, and who was settled in Rochester. It was with this blacksmith that the late Thomas C. Ladd came to serve as an apprentice, and learned his trade and settled here. His hospital for disabled and broken-down vehicles was a conspicuous ornament for the east end of the village. But notwithstanding those standing monuments of "incapables" he was a good and faithful poormaster, and served the public and the poor in that capacity for many years to the satisfaction of both. George W. Blodgett was the pioneer saddler and harnessmaker, and settled the tract now occupied by his daughter, Mrs. J. R. Anderson. Levi Farnham established the first clothing business, and Thaddeus Keyes was the first tanner. Capt. Isaac Marsh built the first saw-mill. His son removed to Rochester and acquired eminence as a physician, especially as an oculist. In 1806 William Whiting came from Canandaigua and located on Main street, on the tract now occupied by a block of stores and the present Lampson House. About the same period Isaac Perry bought on the hill, which he sold to Jason Munn. John Hay was a pioneer stone mason, and evidences of his labor exist in the present stone structures (stuccoed): one, the first building west of the Oatka north side of Main street, formerly occupied by John Champion, Sr., and one by Daniel Foster as a shoe store. He also built the first Episcopal Church. William Olmsted emigrated from Williamstown, Mass., in 1806. He married a widow Pierson, whose maiden name was Cynthia Franklin, said to have been related to the philosopher and patriot, Benjamin Franklin. Her first marriage was to John Pierson, who came in 1806 with what was called the Bergen colony, consisting of the Wards, Wilcoxes, Kelsey, Halls, Parmeles, and others. John Pierson died in 1812 from exposure on the frontier at the beginning of the war. The widow afterwards married Col. William Olmsted and died on his farm near Fort Hill, in her 89th year. His only surviving children are John R., a lawyer of this village, who married Elizabeth, the daughter of Oliver Allen, of Mumford; and Charles and Egbert, residents upon the old homestead.

There was quite an accession of immigrants to the settlement from 1808 to the close of the war, but which space will allow of but casual mention. The names of many of them, during the earlier as well as the later period, will be found on another page. They will be found to cover what was then a single township; but since the division a portion of the names will appear in what is now the towns of Pavilion, Bergen, and Stafford.

There was soon after the close of the war among the settlers in the town Dea. Clark Selden, upon the farm still occupied by his descendants. His sons that survived him were Edmond (since deceased), Stephen M., and Richard L. The latter has been conspicuous as a useful and efficient officer in the town in various capacities. He served for a time with great acceptability in the office of school commissioner, and for repeated terms has been elected as its supervisor, where he served with ability and with the single aim of the interest of the town.

Libbeus Graves at about this time opened the farm afterwards sold by him to Isaac Crocker, three miles south and now in Pavilion. Mr. Crocker was from Colchester, Conn., and was a first-class farmer and highly esteemed as a citizen. His son J. Lyman Crocker, who survives him, is an antiquarian, and zealous and industrious in preserving the records and traditions of our early settlement, and to whom the present writer is much indebted.

In general it may be remarked of the early settlers, although in scattered communities and miles apart, they were all neighbors, and in social intercourse all on the same footing, and were never wanting in acts of mutual kindness and hospitality. While the luxuries of modern life were few, the comforts were not wanting, and the average happiness of the rising community, it may be reasonably supposed, would compare favorably with the older portions of the East. It was, however, no asylum for drones or tramps (of which even the name was then unknown) to doze, and repose, and depredate.

The experience of Captain Daniel Ward, on his first advent to the settlement in 1810, was so similar to that of most of the earlier settlers of the period that it might, as an illustration, be briefly stated. Mr. Ward with his family came from Keene, N. H. His journey, with all his household effects, was with an ox team. His point of location was on the farm, about 140 acres (three miles southeast of the village); on which he continued to reside until his decease in 1856, and which in his hands was converted from a wilderness into one of the finest farms in the county. What it was when he reached it is described by a descendant:

"The South Woods, so-called, was an almost impenetrable forest, and it was with great difficulty that a loaded team could be driven through it; starting in the morning from Davis's tavern, in the settlement, they made slow progress, often stopping to clear logs out of the road, or pry up a wagon out of the mud, and they came to the end of their journey at 10 o'clock at night, consuming the whole day in traversing a distance of three miles, which was characteristic of the condition of the paths (so-called roads) at that time. Here the only improvement upon the place was a log house, without roof or floor, and one acre chopped ready for logging. In this skeleton of a house was spent the first night, the stars of heaven looking down upon them, their only canopy. The captain's first income was from the ashes sold from their log heap, and was 75 cents, as he often said, 'the best and most prized of any money that I ever had.' It may be remarked that at this period the only products that brought in money were black salts and potash, which were transported to Eastern markets via Lake Ontario, the St. Lawrence, and Montreal. Capt. Ward was a man of the strictest integrity, was highly esteemed for his Christian virtues, and lived to enjoy an ample reward for his perseverance and toil, not only by the acquisition of a competence, but the satisfaction of converting the wilderness into one of the finest and most productive farms in the country."

Capt. Ward died on his place in 1856 at the age of 74 years.

Capt. John Ganson, Sr., died in 1813, at the home of his son John, Jr., at the age of 63 years, leaving three sons and a daughter before mentioned. The following quaint epitaph was at the time engraved upon his tombstone (transported from Albany), now in Maplewood Cemetery, where his remains have been removed:

"In trackless climes he bent his weary way,
Where perils prowled, and wild beasts lurked for prey;
By perseverance and industrious toil
Laid low the forests and made the desert smile,
Till low in death he laid his weary head—
Beloved while living, and revered now dead."

His grandson, Dr. Holton Ganson, by a provision in his will, caused a beautiful monument to be erected to his memory in the Machpelah Cemetery. James, the eldest of the Captain's sons, figured conspicuously in the early settlement. He married Luseba Scott, a daughter of the Isaac Scott before mentioned, and by her he was the father of nine children, six sons (John S., Joseph, Hiram, Corneal, Cornelius, and William) and three daughters. The widow survived to her 85th year. She removed to Buffalo, and died at the home of her eldest son, John S. Ganson, a prominent banker of that city. The sons were active business men in their respective callings, and none of his children now survive.

In 1819 he built and kept the present Eagle (on the site of the old Hotel on Main street, from brick furnished by Uni Hurlburt, the first brickmaker. The tavern on this site had been previously kept by Auntie Wemple, who afterwards kept a boarding house in the dwelling occupied by A. O. Comstock. He also built a tavern on the corner of Main and North streets, now the residence of Mrs. R. L. Sampson, and sold it to Mr Hosmer, of Avon. He was during his life a prominent and active politician, and became conspicuous as one of the defendants in the Masonic trials for the abduction of Morgan, in 1826, in which trial he was acquitted. He subsequently removed to Jackson, Mich., and died at an advanced age.

John Ganson, Jr., the keeper of the Ganson tavern, married, in 1808, Lucy, a daughter of David Anderson, who had the year previous come into the settlement from Northampton, Mass., and who made his first home in Middlebury. He afterwards settled here on what was known as the Deming farm. Deacon Anderson was of Scotch descent, of the true "Kirk and Covenant stamp," and brought his influence and example to tell largely upon the new community. He conducted the first religisous services held in Middlebury,—then in a barn,—and the settlers for miles around would gather in to hear the good Deacon exhort, and sing, and pray. He was one of the nine who, in 1812, organized the First Presbyterian Church Society in this village. The Deacon was the father of the late Dea. Seneca Anderson, of Le Roy, who was the father of the Rev. Dr. Galusha Anderson, who holds a distinguished place in the Baptist denomination. Deacon Anderson subsequently removed to Chautauqua County, where he died at an advanced age, always respected for his exemplary Christian character and great moral worth. John Ganson, Jr., died in 1819, at the age of 43, leaving a widow and three sons, Holton, James, and John, whom she survived to see arrive at men's estate and occupy honorable places in the world. The widow married, in 1821, Israel Rathbone, a former resident and merchant of Lewiston, N. Y. Dr. Holton Ganson became a leading practitioner in Batavia, of whom a fuller notice will be found under the head of physicians of the county. James M. Ganson was, until his decease, the president of one of the leading banks of Buffalo. He died in that city in 1883.

Of the youngest son, John, it will not be out of place to speak more at length, as he in after life became a public man of position and influence in the State. At the age of 17 he entered Harvard University, where he graduated at the age of 22, and commenced his law studies in the law office of Mark H. Sibley, in Canandaigua. Soon after his admission to the bar he removed to Buffalo and entered upon the practice of the law, and rose rapidly in his profession, and as an industrious, conscientious, and able lawyer attained the first rank among his compeers Mr. Ganson was elected State Senator in 1861 and again in 1873. He was elected to the 68th Congress in 1863, where he became conspicuous among the few who placed their country before party. Although a Democrat he supported with ability every war measure of President Lincolin's, even his Emancipation Proclamation, and in all of his votes was for a vigorous prosecution of the war until the Rebellion was suppressed and the Union restored. At the time of his death he had been promi-nently named as the Democratic candidate for governor, a nomination which he would doubtless have received, possibly followed by higher honors, had he lived. Mr. Ganson died suddenly in September, 1874, from a paralytic stroke which he received while trying a case in the court-house at Buffalo. His wife, the daughter of the Hon. Mark H.
Sibley, of Canandaigua, and a daughter Emily survived him.
The only remaining son of John Ganson, Jr., was Benjamin, who took part in the War of 1812. On his decease he left a son Chandler, also a daughter who married the late Col. J. W. Shedd, neither of whom now survive. The only living representative here of Captain Ganson, Sr., is a daughter, Mrs. Luseba Ballard, the mother of Randolph Ballard, Esq., a lawyer in the village.

Game, etc.—The country abounded in game. The deer was at their very doors. The more dreaded bear was a frequent but not so welcome a visitor. It is related that on an occasion soon after the removal of Joseph Annin from East to West Main street, to his store (burnt in the great fire of 1834), that a bear with two cubs made an unceremonious call. A clerk seized a musket, pursued the intruders, and brought back with him a cub which he had shot down in the encounter. It is not recorded whether these grizzly customers returned for another charge.

More destructive and a greater enemy to the settler was the large number of wolves which abounded. Their hides were quite a source of income to the hunter. A bounty of $1 per hide was first offered, which was increased until it reached, in 1810, $10 per hide, such was the havoc of the wolves among the herds. Among the pestilential intruders, into even the cabins and cellars of the settlers, was the rattle snake. An innocuous instance is given of one of the intruders which shows that, as venomous as it is, it has the power to charm. It was in the family of Mr. Douglass, whose little daughter, accustomed to go out in the field to play, was on one occasion forbidden by her mother, but who yielded to the importunity of the child, who said she had a kitten she wished to play with. The mother's curiosity induced her to watch the child, when to her alarm and horror she saw a "rattler" partaking of milk from the same dish with the daughter. The little one was cautiously called away and the species of a "pet kitten" quietly disposed of.

The following is a list, as accurate as we are able to make it, of the early settlers of Le Roy, up to 1820:

TOWN OF LE ROY.

Le Roy village was incorporated in May, 1834. The first meeting was held to take action on incorporation at the Eagle Hotel, Theodore Dwight, proprietor; Hinds Chamberlin presided, Seth M. Gates was acting clerk. They adjourned to July 12th, when an election was held and the following trustees chosen: Joshua Lathrop, John Lent, Rufus Robertson, Theodore Dwight, and Dennis Blakely. S. M. Gates was chosen clerk, H. J. Redfield, treasurer. The trustees for 1830 are Isaac G. Mason, George M. Howe, Reuben Glass, Frank E. Goding, and Thomas B. Tuttle. S. D. Gilbert is clerk, and John Wiss, treasurer.

Postoffices.—A word may be added of the early postoffices and postmasters. Previous to 1804 there was no mail service in the settlement, and no postoffice nearer than Canandaigua, and letters and papers were sent and delivered by private hands. Asher Bates was the first postmaster. R. M. Stoddard succeeded in 1808; James Ganson in 1809; and he by Samuel Deveaux, who held the office until 1815. Mr. Deveaux was in trade with Rufus Robertson. Their place of business was on the corner of Main and Lake streets. He removed from here in 1815 to Niagara Falls, where he accumulated a large estate, the whole of which he devised for the foundation and support of the present Deveaux College, at the Falls, under the trusteeship of the Episcopal Church of the diocese. Hon. H. J. Redfield was his successor, and held it until his removal to Batavia.
The Erie Canal.—This was finally accomplished and the first boat launched on the first day of October, 1825. It was a memorable day for the State and Nation. It was literally “a dayspring from on high” which had visited the people, giving life and light to a vast country virtually shut out from commercial intercourse with Eastern markets. Before this great event from 25 to 35 cents per bushel was all that wheat would command to the producer here, and transportation to Eastern markets was so slow and costly that it was practically excluded. The ordinary mode was, as has been said, by “big teams,” made up from five to seven horses, and a night and day line, which in the round trip occupied from three to four weeks. The old State road, built in 1820, was the principal thoroughfare. The teamsters were a hardy race, and camped and lived in their “schooners,” and knew the route as “seamen know the sea.” No wonder that the opening of the Erie Canal was an auspicious day for this secluded garden of the West. It was a literal “boom.” The cannon on the morn of its opening, beginning at Black Rock, commenced the boom, which, planted along the line, continued the joyful sound until its last echo was lost at the ocean tide, which evermore was to be enriched by the commerce which it brought to its bosom. It was during this revival season from 1826 on, and for a few years following, that many business firms were established in the place, of which but brief notices can here be made. A half a century ago there were in active business the following, in their several branches, in Le Roy, and others are necessarily omitted.

Merchants.—Of the early merchants R. M. Stoddard was the first to introduce a few goods, but no regular store was opened in the settlement until 1806. George F. Tiffany was the first regular merchant. He commenced trade on the east side of the Oatka, near or on the present university grounds. Philo Pierson was also an early merchant, on the corner of Main and North streets. He died in 1820, leaving five children. His widow afterwards married Capt. Hatch, one of the first wardens of St. Mark’s Church. Daniel, his second son, married a daughter of Joshua Lathrop, and moved to Cincinnati, where he died about 1888. He was a very prominent lumber merchant, noted for great business capacity and integrity. His widow still resides there. About the same time a store was opened by David Enmons. It was but a short time after that Capt. Theodore Joy settled and entered into trade, and became the most noted of the early merchants. It was the day of “big teams,” and was the only mode of land transportation between the East and this outlying West. Turner says of him that thus early his teams were known on the whole route to Albany. He built here the first brick store, a part of the present dwelling of the late C. B. Thomson, on the corner of East Main and Church streets. He subsequently removed to Albany, where he became prominent in the transportation business, and was succeeded by Lay & Co. (Hart & Lay), whose large and conspicuous sign upon the side of the building remained long after it was disused as a store. M. & B. Murphy built a store near the corner of East Main and Wolcott.
streets, and became among the early merchants. James Annin came into the town from West Bloomfield in 1811, and commenced trade near the same locality, but these latter merchants removed their business to the west side of Main street when it was discovered that business was to abandon the east and center upon the west side of the Oatka. Mr. Annin continued in the mercantile trade until his decease. His place of business was on the north side of West Main street, on the site of the present store of S. Loucks. He was a veritable Isaak Walton in his skill and taste in capturing the trout of the "Big Springs." Those who have belief in heredity will find it illustrated in his descendants, particularly in that skillful angler, his son James, and in his grandson James, Jr., who holds domain and dispenses the "beauties" to grateful guests at the world-noted springs. The game was not quite so abundant and tame as in 1803 if we credit what Mr. McKay says of them:

"They [the trout] were frequently so tame we caught them with our hands as they lay under the cedar trees. There would be occasionally one weighing three pounds."

Mr. Annin died in 1835, and of the children who survive are William L., George, Joseph, James, and Catharine, wife of the late Mr. Bryant, of Washington, D. C. William L. was the first child born in Le Roy after its incorporation. Lewis M. Gates and William Bradley (Gates & Bradley) were the last to continue business on the east side of Main street. It was in the brick store, corner of Wolcott and Main streets, which at a later period was abandoned and converted at first into a land office, next into schools, and last into a blacksmith shop, which was finally demolished to open a more extensive western vista from the university grounds. Thomas Tufts came into the settlement to reside in 1810, as land agent for the Craigie tract. He built and opened a store and a tavern on West Main street, nearly opposite the Lent place. He also built a dwelling house near by, now occupied by Mr. Walker. He continued in business for several years, and on his decease left but one son, Thomas, who now survives.

It would be an imperfect sketch of Le Roy if no mention was made of that intermediate class of merchants and business men, who occupied conspicuous places and made Le Roy what it is, between the pioneer and the present period of its history. The beginning of its prosperity, like that of this whole Western domain, takes its date from the completion of the Erie Canal.

won on his retirement the reputation of an honorable and capable merchant. Following later was Adam Pratt and William P. Rathbone. The only survivors of the above, still residents here, are A. O. Comstock and Charles Morgan. Samuel F. Comstock might be added, as at one time he was partner with his brother A. Otis. Among later firms was one esblished by the late Jonathan M. Foreman, who came in 1854. He was partner of Henry Starr. The business was then carried on by F. W.
Foreman (a son) and Washington Tryon (now of Toledo), and afterwards by Foreman & Rider. Mr. Foreman, Sr., died in January, 1890, at the age of 86. He was a prominent and useful citizen, and held many offices of public trust, which he discharged with ability and integrity. For 16 years he was justice of the peace, and also held other offices.

Grocers.—S. Chamberlin,—afterwards Chamberlin & Henry Starr,— Ralph Lord, Elijah Gray, and F. W. & G. W. Drake.

Hardware.—Bacon & Mitchell, succeeded by Frank W. Drake, who became the successful railroad millionaire, now of Corning, N. Y.; E.
Walker & Co., succeeded by J. G. Bixby and A. G. Carpenter; and Dar-dling & Grannis.

Harness and saddlers.—Newman & Dodge (succeeded by Jacob Newman) and B. R. Crane.

Shoemaker.—Capt. Daniel Foster.

Leather.—Shedd & Ganson (J. W. Shedd and Chandler Ganson).

Jewelers.—Horatio Stanley and Russel & Sampson.

Carriagemakers.—A. S. Upham and Thomas Ladd.

Plows, etc.—Azor Curtis and Webb & Cowan.

Cabinetware.—Howard Bosworth, Loring Pratt, and Steuber Brothers.

Landlords.—Isaac Dwight, succeeded by Powell Carpenter, in the Eagle; J. H. Stanley and Elisha Stanley, and later Lyman Ballard, in the Globe and Eagle.

Druggist —J. G. Barbor.

Of the above names, who contributed largely to build up the business of the town during this intermediate period, many had marked characteristics, but in the limits here assigned but a few only can be noted.

Miles P. Lampson was born in New Haven, Vt., came to Le Roy when a young man, and engaged, first, as a school teacher and afterwards as clerk in the store of Thomas Tufts. He early entered into mercantile business with Capt. John Lent, and afterwards was associated with Samuel Skinner (a lawyer of the village), which from the beginning was a successful firm. Mr. Lampson possessed those natural qualities which commanded success. He was of sound judgment, industrious and persevering, prudent and frugal, and of strict integrity and honor in all of his business intercourse. He was at the same time sagacious in embracing opportunities for the increase of his estate, and in this he was successful.
Retiring from the mercantile business he organized the first bank in Le Roy, in 1838 (the Genesee County Bank), of which he was the first cashier, soon after its president, and its sole financial officer. A full account of this bank will be found under its proper head. His connection with the bank under its different forms continued during the remainder of his life, as president, and under his chief control and management, with the satisfaction that no losses of moment ever occurred; and in the change of the same to the "First National" the capital was all restored to the stockholders. Mr. Lampson died in March, 1869, at the age of 75, leaving a widow, since deceased, and three sons, only two of whom, William and Miles, still live.

Capt. John Lent was a man of less education, but of natural abilities of a superior order and of great force of character. He came into the village from Easton, Washington County, in 1813, and commenced keeping a public house, built by Thomas Tufts, the present homestead of the Lent estate, and engaged at once in land and other enterprises with such sagacity and judgment as soon to accumulate a handsome estate for the period. He was somewhat eccentric, and although eminently social in his nature cared little for the amenities or usages of society, but more for accumulation, of which he was proficient in whatever enterprise he engaged. He prided himself upon his just dealing, and that his "word was always as good as his bond." He died, and was buried in a private vault on his own grounds, in 1861, at the age of 78, and left a son John, since deceased, whose widow is now the consort of Gen C. F. Bissell, who resides on the old homestead at the west end of the village.

Lathrop S. Bacon, during his entire business career, was always termed a "live" man, from his activity and enterprise. He was born in Hamilton, N. Y., in 1810, and from thence removed with his father, Rufus Bacon, to Le Roy, in 1830, and entered at once into the business of general merchandise. This was soon known, for he gave extensive publicity to his business and soon commanded a large trade from surrounding and even distant towns. He literally gave a "boom" to the business of the village, which did not subside until his final retirement. He was subsequently associated with John P. Mitchell, and later with J. G.
Bixby, under the firm name of L. S. Bacon & Co. In 1840 he commenced the establishment of a stove foundry in the village, which he continued to extend and enlarge until it became the most extensive industry in the county. The cook stove known as the Clinton Elevated, and the self-regulating sheet-iron parlor stove, were of his invention, and they became leading and popular and commanded a large sale in this and the Western States. Mr. Mitchell became associated with him in the manu-ufacture, and later D. R. Bacon, under the firm name of L. S. Bacon & Co. The sudden death of his two children, by a camphine lamp ex-losion, rendered his residence in Le Roy distasteful, and he removed to Rochester, where he built up the present iron works in Ontario, and in 1850 closed his connection with the foundry at Le Roy by a sale to Harry Backus, and the business for a few years longer was carried on by the firm name of Backus & Bacon, when in 1854 it was closed, and this industry here has not since been revived. L. S. Bacon was for a time president of the Eagle Bank in Rochester, but he soon left for England to establish the manufacture of India rubber goods, which business proved a marked success. Owing to the misuse of the firm's name by a partner, after Mr. Bacon's retirement, he suffered a financial reverse, from which he did not fully recover. He retired and spent the closing period of his life in Florence, Italy, where he became prostrated by a stroke of paralysis, which, being repeated by a second attack, permanently disabled him both in mind and body. He returned to this country with his wife and retired to Michigan, where he died in his 68th year; and in all his relations of life he was held in high regard for his superior qualities of head and heart. His wife did not long survive him, and they both rest by the side of their children in Machpelah Cemetery.

Chauncey L. Olmsted, a partner of A. O. Comstock in the days of the most lively boom in the trade of the villages, of which they were not behind in giving it an impetus, on his retirement from the firm became noted for his enterprise and business energy. He established and built up the planing and lumber business now owned and conducted by Murdoch Brothers, on Mill street. Two disastrous fires of his mill and works did not quell his energy. They were rebuilt on an extended scale and became the largest of the class in the county. The works were continued under his brother William, while he engaged largely in the lumber trade West. Mr. Olmsted took a lively interest in all of the improvements of the town, toward which he always was a liberal contributor, whether in church or schools. Of the latter he showed his generous intentions by making for them liberal provision, of which the subsequent change in times rendered it unavailable. At his decease he left a widow, and a son, Albert C., now a resident of Batavia, and a daughter, Mary, who still survive him.

There was Dea. Samuel Comstock, who removed with his family from Colchester, Conn., in 1834, and engaged in the mercantile business with his son Otis A. Their enterprise soon secured a large trade, and it soon became one of the leading business firms of the community. The Deacon was an honorable competitor and justly merited the sobriquet always accorded to him of the "honest deacon." He was always scrupulously just, and foremost in every good and benevolent work. He was the organizer and founder of the Congregational Church in the village, subsequently merged in the Presbyterian, and was a deacon until his decease, at the age of 79. His children that survive him are Otis A., Samuel F., and a daughter Elizabeth.

As the Hon. Alonzo S. Upham filled a conspicuous place in the village, and subsequently in the State, a brief reference to him will not be out of place. It was in 1832 that he removed from Onondaga County, where he had recently married Mary, daughter of Deacon Monroe, and commenced here the business of carriagemaking on a scale hitherto unknown in this section. He soon obtained a wide reputation through the county as a skilled and tasteful workman, and with a fine address became a popular citizen. He early was identified with the Whig party, and was during its life an ardent supporter of Henry Clay. When the Whig became merged into the Republican party he followed its fortunes, and his first political honor was in his election to the Assembly by that party in 1847, and again in 1848, where, by his address, he soon ingratiated himself into the favor of the Weed-Seward branch of the party, and became one of their trusted leaders. This was increased upon his nomination and election to the State Senate in 1850, and again in 1854, when he was a recognized leader of the party in the State, and influential in its counsels. He was an adroit politician and skilled in the management of caucuses and conventions. In his later senatorial career he became an important and efficient aid in carrying measures favorable to the interests of the N. Y. C. & H. R. Railroad, by which he received from the company his reward in obtaining contracts for building cars for the road. This led to the establishment and construction of the stone buildings for his works in the village, since converted into the present malt-houses. Failing in an election for a third term in the Senate, in consequence of the popular prejudice against railroad influence in legislation, the further construction of cars for the road was withdrawn, and in consequence the business and the works collapsed. Mr. Upham thus became financially embarrassed, from which he failed to recover. In his prosperity he was noted for his geniality, his open-handed liberality, and his devotion to his friends, as well as his public spirit and diffuse hospitality. He obtained a situation in the custom-house in New York, where he remained until his decease.

Physicians.—We pass to a brief notice of the first physicians. Dr. William Coe was the first settled practitioner. He came in 1803. He was not so wholly engrossed in professional duties but that he could devote a portion of his time, particularly evenings, in teaching some of the higher branches of instruction. Dr. Ella Smith came in soon after and settled on the now Blodgett farm. Dr. Frederick Fitch commenced practice in 1808. He was of an eccentric character, and fond of military display. On an occasion of general training, wishing to display his skill in sword exercise, he wounded himself in the leg, which resulted in requiring an amputation of the limb. He was a skillful practitioner, and he built the house where Jacob Newman formerly and now Rev. Mr. Bowden resides. He formed a copartnership with Dr. Sheldon in the practice in the village, and subsequently removed to Ypsilanti, Mich., where he died. His son, Newell Fitch, remained, but subsequently removed to Logansport, Ind., and had in his adopted State a distinguished career. He took for his wife, before his departure, Hattie Satterlee, of this village. He was elected U. S. Senator from Indiana, served also in the war of the Rebellion, and attained the rank of major-general. Their son married a daughter of Gen. W. T. Sherman. Dr. Chauncey P. Smith came into the place early in 1810.

Dr. William Sheldon removed from Rupert, Bennington County, Vt., and traveled on horseback until he reached the Ganson tavern, where he stopped for the night, designing to pursue his journey westward in the morning. His last dollar was exhausted. During the night a sickness occurred in the family which he was called upon to treat, and by their importunity was prevailed upon to remain and settle here, and enter upon his practice. The following year he married the widow of Asher Bates, and soon became a successful practitioner. When in 1812 the war with Great Britian was declared he entered into the service and received the commission of captain of a volunteer company, and left for the frontier for service. He was made aid-de-camp of Gen. Daniel Davis, his fellow townsman, and was by his side, as before stated, in the gallant sortie at Fort Erie. The Doctor himself, in the skirmish at Black Rock, was wounded and taken prisoner, and carried to Montreal, where he was kept six months in prison, and his treatment was not such as to mollify his feeling toward the redcoats, which was decidedly anti-English during his life-time. He served during the whole war and was in seven different engagements. On the organization of the town of Le Roy Dr. Sheldon was chosen the first supervisor, and again in 1818. He was appointed by Governor Tompkins sheriff of the new county of Genesee, and was subsequently reappointed, an evidence of his ability and fidelity. He died at the age of 85, and left three sons, Lucius, William, and Horatio, all of whom are still living.

The name of S. O. Almy, associated in practice with Dr. Alfred Wilcox, calls up one of the most genial, kind-hearted, as well as capable, physicians of the medical profession. He had a large practice until his retirement, temporarily to Cincinnati, from which place he returned under a mental cloud. His host of friends were saddened from his prostration by a paralytic stroke, from which he never recovered, but lived many years, his mind and body both shattered by its effects, until his decease a few years ago. Among the cotemporary practitioners, and a little later, there were Bliss and Pratt, and Tozier, and the Barretts, and Dr. Smith, of whom full notice appears under the county head of the profession.

Lawyers.—Of the early members of the legal profession the name of Graham Newell has been mentioned as the first practitioner. Hon. Heman J. Redfield early opened a law office in Le Roy, on the corner of East Main and North streets, and continued in the practice here until his removal to Batavia, in 1835, as law counsel of the Holland Land Co. He was an active and prominent politician of the Democratic faith, and in 1823, '24, and '25 was a State Senator from the old Eighth District. His popularity was temporarily impaired by his vote on the electoral law of the State, giving to the people the election of their electors, and by his vote for the postponement of the law became one of the immortal 17 senators. He, however, continued to be a leading member of his party, and in 1853 was appointed by President Pierce collector of the port of New York. Samuel B. Skinner, Seth M. Gates (who later and after his election to Congress formed a law partnership with D. R. Bacon under
In 1807 the name of the town was changed to Caledonia, which it retained until 1811, when it received the name of Bellona, so-called from the goddess of war, and not inappropriately, as every able-bodied man had, with musket on shoulder, gone to the war, leaving the women-folk alone to tend the farms, and to guard and protect the homes.

The War of 1812.—It is at this day impossible to conceive the panic which pervaded this whole border region on the news of the declaration of war in the summer of 1812. It was first feared that the Senecas would side with the British as they had in the war of the Revolution. This was allayed by the influence and eloquence of Red Jacket and Cornplanter, first by a promise of neutrality, followed by an alliance of the tribe with the American forces, and who afterwards rendered to our arms important and effectual aid. But the special dread was of an invasion from Canada, where the British were in large force upon the border. But the invasion never came. The fear of it was equally great on the Canada side. This singular apprehension of mutual invasion was at once our safeguard and protection. And it was one of these instances, often recorded in the history of wars both great and small, where "one was afraid and the other durst n't." But there was enough of war excitement to keep alive the sharpest watchfulness and interest in what was transpiring on the border where the hostile forces were arrayed face to face. This was greatly intensified by the ill-timed and censurable surrender of Fort Niagara and the burning of Newark, now the village of Niagara Falls, by General McClure, of the New York militia. Its retaliation was at once followed by the successful attack upon Black Rock and the burning of the village of Buffalo by the British force. It was a wanton and cowardly act, for it was committed in violation of a flag of truce, after General Riel, the commandant of the English, had accepted the surrender and promised protection to the feeble colony. But the destruction was complete, only one house, that of Mrs. Jones, remained standing. This occurred in midwinter, December 31, 1813, and the defenceless inhabitants, including delicate women and young children, were driven into the snow-bound forests to find home and shelter in the outlying settlements of the interior. These were cheerfully given, and the rites of hospitality to the houseless sufferers were in no place more cheerfully accorded than to those who reached Le Roy.

Never was hospitality more general or more needed. It was extended to the Tuscaroras, whose cabins had not escaped the British torch. They came to the Ganson settlement, where they were provided with camping-ground, on what is now Lime Rock, three miles east, and were supplied with provisions by the settlers and in part by the commissary of the public stores.

But it was not always adverse news. The settlement had its days of rejoicing. The achievements and success of Commodore Perry upon the lakes created a thrill of joy. This was greatly enhanced when the signal success of our arms at the battle of Lundy's Lane, sometimes called the Niagara Falls battle and Chippewa, under the command of General Brown and the late Gen. Winfield Scott, was here proclaimed. It was here General Scott won his spurs. He received a wound in the battle, from which he never fully recovered, and was borne in a litter to the Ganson tavern, where all turned out to do him honor, and those who came never forgot his manly form and martial bearing, characteristics which distinguished him through life.

The war of the Rebellion belongs to general history, and is too modern for any extended notice in this sketch of our early annals. It should not be entirely passed over, as Le Roy was made conspicuous by its being designated as a point for a recruiting camp by the military authority of the State. In March, 1861, Governor Morgan ordered its organization here, and it was opened for this purpose under the designation of Camp Upham, in one of his abandoned car shops. Immediately over the whole western district the most active efforts were put forth by our patriotic citizens for enlistments to fill up and complete the regiment. The camp was under the immediate charge of Rev. J. M. Fuller, an earnest and eloquent platform orator on the Union's cause, who earnestly engaged in enlistments, assisted by Maj. J. W. Shedd, Col. Grey, and the captains of the several companies. It was stirring times in Le Roy during the season of its formation. The music of the fife and of the spirit-stirring drum was ever rife in the streets, and the frequent public speeches and addresses kept active this patriotic enthusiasm until the formation of the regiment was complete.

The full complement of men was at length attained, and March 26, 1862, the regiment was ordered to the front under the designation of the 105th Regiment of the State, and the camp broken up. The first regimental officers were Rev. James M. Fuller, colonel; Howard Carroll, of Rochester, lieutenant-colonel; and J. W. Shedd, major. Dr. D. C. Chamberlin received the commission of surgeon of the regiment. The following were captains of the respective companies when they left Camp Upham: Richard Whiteside, James B. Delong, H. E. Smith, Isaac S. Tichenor, George Babcock, Abraham Moore, John McMahon, Patrick W. Bradley, and S. J. Wilber.

Previous to the departure of the regiment for the front a grand ovation was given it by the citizens of Le Roy, and Central Hall was literally packed for the occasion. Miles P. Lampson was chosen president, who made an appropriate and patriotic speech, and L. N. Bangs was chosen secretary. It was the chief purpose of the meeting to present from our citizens an elegant sword and revolver to Col. Fuller prior to his depart-
D. R. Bacon was appointed to make the presentation of them to the Colonel, which he did in an address suited to occasion, which was replied to by the recipient in an eloquent speech, followed by other patriotic speeches, in which the departing regiment received a most hearty godspeed, commending it to the “God of Battles.” On other occasions previous to the departure a sword presentation was made to our townsmen, Major (afterwards Lieut.-Col.) Shedd and to Dr. D. C. Chamberlin of a sword, belt, and cap, the presentation, in behalf of the donors, being made by Gen. C. F. Bissell in appropriate and fitting terms, and accepted by the recipient in a grateful acknowledgement. Of the reverses and sad depletion of the regiment, and the changes of its officers after it entered upon active service, it is not the purpose of this brief sketch of its organization to mention. It belongs to the general history of the war. Arriving at Washington the regiment was placed in Gen. Duryea’s brigade with that of the 97th and 104th N. Y. and 107th Pa. regiments. When the campaign opened Col. Fuller led his regiment to the front and into the field, following Stonewall Jackson across Blue Ridge to Thoroughfare Gap, and returning pitched their tents on the Orange & Alexandria Railroad. They moved across the Rappahannock, where they were first engaged in the battle of Cedar Mountain, August 9, 1862, and acted gallantly. For reasons unexplained two days after this battle Col. Fuller tendered his resignation, which was thrice repeated before its acceptance; and Lieut.-Col. Carroll, a brave and capable officer, was promoted to the colonelcy, J. W. Shedd to that of lieutenant-colonel, and Capt. Whiteside to major. By order of the division commander, Gen. Ricketts, the regiment retraced its steps across the Rappahannock. Gen Pope was in command of the Army of the Potomac. The regiment was engaged in the second battle of Bull Run (or Manassas), South Mountain, and Antietam, where Col. Carroll was wounded and soon died at the hospital in Washington. Lieut.-Col. Shedd was also severely wounded, and Lieut. Buckley was killed. The death of Col. Carroll led to another change of officers, resulting in promoting Lieut.-Col. Shedd to the colonelcy, Whiteside, lieutenant-colonel, and Adjutant Sharp, major. The regiment was in the first battle of Fredericksburg, December 13th, and in the famous march under Gen. Burnside in the winter of 1863, when many officers and privates were taken prisoners. It had become so depleted by these engagements and other causes that in March, 1863, it was consolidated with the 94th N. Y., Col. Root (now of Buffalo) commanding. The 94th, being the senior regiment, retained its numerical designation, and the field officers and staff of the 105th were all mustered out except the surgeon, Dr. D. C. Chamberlin, and the quartermaster.

But it is due to the brave hearts who went from our town to the war, never to return, that at least brief mention should be made of their honored names. Some perished on the bloody field; some in the more terrible and slower death of the southern prison. “They died that the country might live.” There was Olmsted at Andersonville, and either by shock of battle or wasted by disease there were added to this roll of honor a Hazelton, Thomas, Calvert, Hascall, Hoffman, Swift, Graves, Tyrrell, Bell, Clark, Rose, Gladden, Frasier, Avery, O'Connor, Stamp, Houston, Darrow, McLochlan, King, Moody, Rogers, and the Kinnes. Though no monumental stone has been erected to their memory, they will ever be held by a grateful people in lasting remembrance.

"How sleep the brave who sink to rest
By all their country's wishes blest!
* * * * *
There Honor comes a pilgrim gray
To bless the turf that wraps their clay;
And Freedom shall awhile repair
To dwell a weeping hermit there."

Le Roy.—It was not until 1813 that the name of the town was changed and received the name of Le Roy. The following were the first town officers: Dr. William Sheldon, supervisor; Thomas Tufts, town clerk. The other town officers were Benjamin Ganson, Asa Buell, David Le Barron, Philo Pierson, Salmon Turrell, David Biddlecom, Richard Waite, Henry Prindle, G. Newell, L. Fowler, G. Terry, A. Hascall, and J. Hascall. The town took its name from Herman Le Roy, who was an affluent gentleman of French descent of the old school at the beginning of the present century, residing in the city of New York. His connection with the land tracts of Western New York had commenced in behalf of certain residents in Amsterdam, Holland, known afterwards as the Holland Purchase. Being aliens the company could not hold the fee of lands in this country, which disability was afterwards removed by the legislature of New York. The purchase was made in several conveyances of Robert Morris, the distinguished patriot and financial officer of the Revolution, who was tendered the place of Secretary of the Treasury in Washington's first cabinet, and whose large fortune was freely contributed in the support of the war. The tract was bought of the State of Massachusetts, on the failure of Phelps & Gorham to perform their contract, and consisted of 3,300,000 acres, reserving the Indian title, which was gradually, by several treaties, extinguished, the first at Buffalo in 1788 and the second at Big Tree (Genesee), at less than one cent an acre. By later councils these reservations were further reduced, and the last of the once powerful Senecas are now found in the small reservations of Cattaraugus and Tonawanda.

In all these concessions Red Jacket, whom our older citizens remember when he made his home with his people, the Senecas, upon the Genesee, and on the camping-grounds on Wolcott street and Ganson's Brook, was an eloquent and uncompromising opponent. He was facile princeps of his tribe and race. It was displayed when a young man in the first treaty between the Six Nations and the U. S. commissioners, after the close of the Revolutionary war, at Fort Stanwix in October, 1784, where his marvelous eloquence in opposition gave him his Indian name of power, Sagowatha, the "keeper awake." General La Fayette, who was present at this council, was so fascinated with his power that it was not forgotten 40 years after, on his visit to America, when, in an interview with Red Jacket at Buffalo, he inquired for the young Cicero who had so captivated the council, and was surprised to receive answer from the chief himself that he was the man. He had subsequently frequent occasions for the display of his indignant eloquence against the further surrender by his people of their hunting-grounds and council fires; but all in vain. By one treaty after another he saw his own tribe, the Senecas, surrender them for a bare pittance to the white man. He stood firmly and boldly against it in the treaty at Buffalo Creek in July, 1788; again in the council held at Canandaigua in October, 1794, followed by the one at Big Tree (Genesee) in 1797, when still greater concessions by his tribe were made, until at last he lived to see it dwindled to the present narrow reservations from the vast territory it once possessed. It was the old story of the Indians, fate when in conflict with the pale face and civilization, which no eloquence or logic of theirs have yet been able wholly to resist. But with Red Jacket it embittered the close of his life, and he persistently refused to use the speech or the dress of the white man, or conform to his habits, except as the unfortunate victim of the vice it had introduced among his people. So uncompromising was his bitterness toward his conquerors that Gen. Ely S. Parker, a Seneca and one of Gen. Grant's staff, said that among Red Jacket's last requests was that "white men should not dig his grave or bury him." Notwithstanding this hostility Buffalo has done him honor, in admiration of his genius and his eminent service in the War of 1812, by the removal of his remains to Forest Lawn, and erecting in 1883 a noble monument to his memory, with impressive ceremonies, conducted by its historical society. It was a merited honor. Did a William Tell or a Brutus ever display a loftier patriotism? As justly might it be said of Red Jacket as of the latter, "This was the noblest Roman of them all."

It is a sad instance that these and other land speculations, of which there was a mania at the close of the Revolutionary war, should have proved late in life the financial ruin of the patient Morris. So great was the reverse of this opulent merchant prince, who, unaided and alone, sustained the army of Washington during the trying period of 1781, that he was, in the crisis which followed, actually imprisoned for debt, and for a time became the tenant of a prison. We have the testimony of his son, Thomas Morris, that his advances to the government were reimbursed. But he died poor, and his widow was sustained by a dower interest of $1,500 from the Holland Purchase.

The parceling out of these several tracts to different companies has more of an historical than local interest, as the title of the owner and occupant has long been fixed and settled, and each settler now reposes under his own vine and fig tree.

The final sales of the Holland Land Co. were made and the office closed in 1835. Among the early subdivisions of the original Morris tract was what was termed the "Triangle," consisting of 85,000 acres, of which Le Roy, Bayard, and McClvers became the purchasers.
The LeRoy family naturally took a lively interest in the town, where a large landed interest was centered, and from whom it had derived its name. Jacob Le Roy, the son of Herman, came to the village to reside in 1821, having then recently married Charlotte Otis, of Massachusetts. He came as successor of Egbert Benson as land agent of the "Triangle." His brothers, Edward and Daniel Le Roy, followed. The former removed to Canawaugus, where he occupied and cultivated a large farm, which he subsequently sold to Gen. James Wadsworth. Daniel opened a store in Le Roy in 1822, under the firm name of Le Roy & Co., previously occupied by Mr. Annin, on the site of the present store of S. Loucks. Trade had now centered and become fixed on the west side of the Oatka. Daniel did not continue long in business before he returned to New York. In the year 1826 Jacob Le Roy built the grist-mill upon the site of the Stoddard & Platt mill, and commenced flouring on a scale hitherto unknown in the West. It is the present mill of C. F. Prentice. He enlarged the Egbert Benson office to a spacious dwelling, on the east side of the Oatka, known as the Le Roy mansion, now occupied by William Sheldon and the grounds by the Le Roy Academic Institute. His grounds were beautifully laid out, with the choicest fruits and flowers, and he was noted for his wide and generous hospitality. He was a brother-in-law of Daniel Webster, the great orator and statesman, whose visits here are remembered by many of our oldest citizens. In one of the volumes of his published speeches there is a dedication by him to the Le Roy family, highly appreciative and laudatory. It was in one of these visits that Mr. Webster had a reception, which drew a large number of his admirers from the country round, with whom he had free and cordial intercourse, who were not a little surprised that the Marshfield farmer was as much at home in agriculture as in affairs of State, and in advance of all in knowledge of stock. Mr. Le Roy, during his residence in the village, was highly respected and esteemed for his uniform courtesy and liberality. He donated the lot on which the old Episcopal Church and rectory stood, and was one of its principal supporters. This was continued after his removal to the East, to New York, in 1838, where he resided many years, until his decease. He subsequently donated $1,500 to the church. But one of his children, Otis Le Roy, survives him, who is a resident of New York city.

Joshua Lathrop and family removed to Le Roy from Norwich, Vt., in 1824, and he became the successor of Jacob Le Roy in the agency of the land office. His office was in the present brick dwelling of Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, daughter of the late C. B. Thomson, after its use as a store had been abandoned, and his dwelling was on the same premises, still occupied by his son, F. C. Lathrop. Mr. Lathrop continued as agent of the company until its final close, when he became the owner and proprietor of the present Le Roy flouring-mills, and conducted an extensive milling business until his decease. In all of his business relations Mr. Lathrop bore the highest character for strict probity and honor, and he was also noted for his urbanity and courteous manner in his business and social intercourse. He was a member and liberal supporter of the Episcopal Church of the place for a period of 25 years and a continuous member of the vestry. Mr. Lathrop was a man of but few words, but, of exemplary deeds, and through life maintained the reputation of a public spirited and useful citizen. He died in August, 1856, aged 69 years, leaving a widow, since deceased. His present surviving children are Mary, the widow of A. F. Bartow, Esq., Ruth, and Frank C. (the private banker of the village), all residents of Le Roy; Joshua, a produce dealer of New York; and Lydia, the widow of Daniel Pierson, of Cincinnati, O. His daughter Rebecca (since deceased) was married to Rev. G. D. Gillespie, the present bishop of Western Michigan.

The following is a list of the supervisors and town clerks of Le Roy from its organization in 1813 to 1890:

Early industries. Among the early tavern-keepers was Charles Wilber, in 1797, who was also a justice of the peace. He was succeeded by Capt. John Ganson in 1798. Samuel Davis, C. H. Thomas, and Gen. Daniel Davis were tavern-keepers east of the village.

The Eagle Hotel was built in 1825, and was on the site of Auntie Wemple, kept by Maj. James Ganson, who died in Michigan, Ebenezer Hall, Theodore Dwight, Lewis Jackson, and Powell Carpenter, Jr., who was proprietor for 25 years, and died in 1885, aged 82 years. J. W.
Lyon was proprietor in 1868, and Edward Search succeeded him. A Mr. Wilcox was landlord in 1875. W. C. Reed, the present proprietor, succeeded him.

The old Globe and Eagle, which had a sign of a large globe, was kept by Rufus Robertson in 1816, a Mr. Walbridge in 1827, Elisha Stanley, J. H. Stanley, Sornberger, Spencer, Lyman Ballard, and A. G. Collins, who sold to Wiss, when the name was changed.

John Lent kept tavern in the house now occupied by Gen. Bissell, on the hill. His store was also in the same locality. It may be mentioned here that in the "tavern days," before the railroads, stage travel was a large item; for 10 or more stages, with four horses, and six horse freight teams passed Le Roy daily. Freight to Albany was $10 to $30 per ton. Whisky was three cents per drink.

Before the Erie Canal there were over a dozen distilleries in this vicinity. Corn would not pay for transportation; whisky would; and many farmers had their corn made into whisky on shares, and at the distillery hogs and cattle were fattened. The foremost in the business was Thomas Tufts, who was also the last one to close up. Elisha Stanley built one on Fort Hill, on lot 8, in 1812, and a grist-mill near by in 1841. William Morgan had one above Coe's brick yard; J. & M. Colton had one on the hill; and J. H. Lent, who run a mill as well as a hotel. Lampson and Lent were his successors. Dickey had one on the west side of Prentice's mill race. W. Merry had one on the brook near Roanoke road. Fred Foot run one on the flat southeast of Mrs. Johnson's. Joseph Annin had a distillery in 1822, and Jonathan LeBarron had one near the paper-mill on the same ground where Jacob Le Roy owned one. It was the largest west of the Genesee River, and was devoted to the manufacture of proof spirits for the Albany market. There was one also on the Beechnut lot, at the head of the pond.

Elijah Warner built an ashery in 1817, and made potash for five or six years. Thaddeus Joy also had an ashery, and north of the Episcopal Church was one owned by a Mr. Sherman.

Martin O. Coe started an oil-mill as early as 1816. It was afterwards purchased by L. C. Morgan, and in later years was owned by Foreman, Starr & Co., and I. M. Foreman, who sold to a Mr. Rogers. He now makes about 25 barrels per day. The seed was mostly raised in Wyoming County. Martin O. Coe and Uni Hurlburt operated brick yards. About 1812 J. & A. Nobles had a carding factory where Haskins's mill now is, and one Stewart run one where Tomlinson's mill was. Samuel Clifford also run one in 1833. Luther Newton made bed-cord and kept hotel on the road between here and South Le Roy. James Ballard made hats from 1820 to 1831. A. E. Hutchins and D. Sevey made chairs. Richard Waite was the first blacksmith, and Stephen Stillwell was a shoemaker.

Tomlinson's mill, on the Oatka, two miles southwest of Le Roy, was first built in 1831, by John Tomlinson. It was a frame building with three burrs. Formerly a large business was transacted. Thomas Tufts also operated a mill on the same site. Now only a small feed business is located on the spot.

D. & W. Graves operated a tannery below the mill on the flat. Shedd and Ganson were workmen under them, and they afterwards carried on the business in that locality. Jacob Le Roy built a flouring-mill about 1832, about one mile north of the village. In 1869 it was sold to W. F. Jones, who manufactured wrapping-paper there until it was burned in the spring of 1887. Before and after the year 1835 threshing machines were being built at Deacon Webb's foundry, which was located on the bank of the creek near where the Episcopal Church is now located.

Schools.—Like all early settlements of New England stock in the institution of schools Le Roy was not behind. The log school-house followed closely upon the log cabin. As early as 1801 a log school-house was built opposite the old Dr. Sheldon farm, and the first teacher was Luseba Scott, afterwards the wife of James Ganson. She was succeeded by Phoebe Bates, sister of Asher Bates, and in 1803 by Mrs. Stephen Wolcott. The first framed school-house west of Genesee River was erected in 1804, by a joint stock company organized at a meeting where Daniel Davis was chairman and William Coe, secretary. It was formed by a company, of which there were 30 shares at $4 each, of which one-half could be paid in labor, produce, or building materials. The bachelors evinced their interest in the cause of education and the rising generation by taking one share each. The first teacher called was a Mr. Pomeroy, of Albany. He was succeeded by David Hascall. It was located a little east of the primitive log one. On the advent of Thomas Tufts, on West Main street, a school-house was erected opposite the Lent tavern, where religious services were often held, as were also meetings of the Masonic fraternity. Dr. William Coe gave evening instruction in the higher branches after his settlement. Later Rev. Calvin Colton, the first settled pastor of the Presbyterian Church, also gave instruction in the classics.

The Round-house in fact became an educational institution instead of a Masonic lodge, for which it was originally designed. This somewhat noted building in its day had its origin with the Masonic fraternity here in the year 1825. The order had its existence here from the commencement of the settlement, and its meetings had been in the school-house, partly built by it, on the Tufts lot on the corner of Craigie street; also meetings were held in the ball-room of the Ganson tavern. The building was of a circular form, from which it took its name as the Round-house; was 40 feet in diameter, and built of brick. The ceiling on the first floor was 16 feet in height; the second was not as high, but of the same circular form. The mystery of mysteries was designed to be conducted in an upper room, called "the sounding room," from the echoes that followed any sound in it. The square tower in front had also three stories, and above them a belfry of 20 or 24 feet, and the whole height of the imposing Masonic pantheon was 70 feet. But its use for the purpose of its construction was never demanded. The popular excitement, which grew out of the taking off of Morgan in the autumn of 1826, who was spirited through Le Roy, arrested its purpose. The printer Miller, of the Masonic book, was arraigned on a bogus charge before Jacob Bartow, then a justice of peace here; made this the central point of agitation from whence sprung the Anti-Masonic party, destined to spread over the Union. It was, from the circumstances of its origin, and the mystery which veiled the deep damnation of the taking off, the cause of bitter party feeling, which divided families, churches, and communities. Political aspirants soon took advantage of the excitement and made "down with Masonry" the banner cry of the Anti-Masonic party in the State. The first convention was held in Le Roy, of which mention has before been made. It brought many new men to the surface, and the party organization spread into the adjoining states, and it became a National party which nominated William Wirt for president. But it was a meteor party which had its day, and like the baseless fabric of vision passed away. It, too, achieved its good, in exposing the danger of secret societies and binding oaths—which conflict with the safety of the person or the State, and which none more than the present Masonic fraternity now repudiate and denounce.

But it is in its educational use that the Round-house has a conspicuous place. It was never finished by the projectors for the purpose designed.
The lower room was used for religious purposes by the Congregational Church, and for public meetings and lectures. The second story was finished off for a school room in 1828, and occupied as a select school until its demolition in 1859, and the erection of the Universalist Church on its site. It was rented to Mr. Hatch and afterwards to a Mr. Bradley. In 1834 the school passed into the hands of William Le Roy Annin, who still lives, and from his "reminiscences" the present writer is indebted for many of the foregoing items. He gives his personal experience and says in this connection:

"I had been to the Wadsworth school in Genesee at its opening in October, 1827, and had remained about two years. Not then being prepared to enter Harvard College, I spent most of the two other years in teaching and studying privately, and then joined the Sophomore class of that institution and graduated in 1834."

On his graduation he rented the Round-house and opened a classical school, which was a success. William Le Roy Annin is an accomplished scholar, especially in the Greek and Latin classics, and at an advanced age still pursues his favorite reading and studies. He is usually selected by the Regents of the State in the examination of the schools here previous to the award by the board to them of the public moneys.
He was the first child born after the organization of the town.

Afterwards Messrs Daniels and Olmsted had a flourishing school in the building, and still later Joel Whiting, Messrs. Brooks, Reed, McCall, Beckley, and others. The demolition of the Round-house rendered the erection of another and more commodious edifice for school purpose as necessity.

It will revive this period of our early history by giving an extract from a letter written by an intelligent lady of the village, on the 26th of June, 1826, cotemporaneous with the laying of the corner-stone of this Masonic temple. She thus graphically writes:

... "The site of the building is nearly opposite the church, and is to unite taste and elegance in an uncommon degree. Its cost is to be $7,000, $4,000 of which is to be supplied by the different lodges in the State and the remainder by the village. The spirit of Masonry is excessively prevalent in these parts, as the display on Saturday clearly evinced. Among the novelties of the scene I was particularly struck with the ladies and babies walking in procession; the latter of course in the arms of the parent, whose turn it might be to bear the lovely burden. The procession of Masons, headed by a band of music, marched to the base of the temple, halted, parted to the right and left, while the ladies from youth to age, two by two, marched through the lines to the spot where the ceremony of laying the corner-stone was performed: ... from thence in like order to the church, where an oration was pronounced (it being St. John's Day), thence to Ganson's tavern, where 250 females took dinner, and double that number of men—the former within doors, the latter in a bower made for the occasion. The company dispersed, without accident, in vehicles of various form and size, chiefly drawn by mares with colts in train. The whole was a rare exhibition."

The trustees into whose hands the Round house fell were John Lent, I. M. Murphy, Israel Rathbone, William Sheldon, John Jackson, John Clifford, Marshall Smead, James Ganson, Ezekiel Hall, and Jonathan Barron, all of the Masonic order. It was disposed of by them to J. G. Barbor, who held it until the time of its sale to the Universalist Society, when it was demolished.

The Le Roy Academic Institute grew out of this necessity. It was designed from its origin for a first class institution for English and classical instruction for both sexes. It was started by its friends by a stock subscription, which was promptly filled, and the requisite amount raised for an organization which was completed, and in 1864 an incorporation obtained from the legislature of the State. D. R. Bacon was the first president; L. N. Bangs, secretary; and J. R. Olmsted, treasurer. The first term commenced January 5, 1865. Its first principal was J. K. Lombard, from 1863 to 1865, and on the resignation of Mr. Lombard, E. Harlow Russell succeeded him as principal, remaining until 1874. In recognition of the high character of the school the town of Le Roy, by a decisive vote, appropriated $10,000 for the institute. Since its first organization it has maintained, without any diminution, its high standard of instruction in the classical and modern languages, and in the natural sciences as well as in music. The several principals who succeeded Mr. Russell (who resigned to accept the headship of the Normal School at Worcester, Mass.) are as follows: Alvin P. Chapin, 1875; Prof. W. H. Munroe, 1875 to 1879, called from here to the presidency of Deveaux College; and the present principal, F. C. Comstock, who took charge in 1880. The academy was never more flourishing in number of pupils than under the present principal. The officers of the board of trustees for 1890 consist of John Maloney, president; Fred A. Steuber, vice-president; John P. Sampson, secretary; and Augustus E. Miller, treasurer. The value of the grounds, buildings, and other property connected with the institute exceeds $25,000. Seven teachers are employed, and there is an average attendance of over 200 scholars.

Ingham University, for the education of young ladies, has survived under different corporations over a half century of growth, and has attained a National reputation. It was established in Le Roy by Misses Mariette and Emily E. Ingham, who were born in Saybrook, Conn., and who first located in Attica, and after a two years' residence there removed and opened the school as the Le Roy Female Seminary in 1835. The founders at its commencement purchased the fine residence and grounds of Robert Bayard, on the corner of Wolcott and East Main streets, which property (greatly enlarged) the institution has ever since retained. In this purchase the sisters were aided and supported by Albert Brewster, Seth M. Gates, A. P. Hascall, Samuel Comstock, Jonathan P. Darling, A. S. Upham, Enos Bacheler, Lee Comstock, Israel Rathbone, Richard Hollister, and William S. Bradley, none of whom or of the founders now survive. It was first chartered in 1841, with the above as corporators. The school, by the energy, ability, and superior attainments and adaptability of the founders for the work, sprang at once into the first rank of this class of institutions in the State. Miss Mariette, the eldest of the sisters, was a lady of remarkable energy and business capacity; and the younger, then at the head of the school, was equally distinguished for her culture and scholarly attainments, and especially for her tact and skill in the management and securing the confidence of the pupils in the school under her charge. Aside from its advanced curriculum at this period of female institutions it adopted, as a rule, ever since rigidly maintained, that "no teacher will be employed who will not conscientiously make continued efforts for the highest moral and spiritual good of the pupils." Under such a guidance, and with so high a standard, the success of the school was assured from the first. But Mrs. Emily Staunton, the guiding and controlling spirit which directed the institution, was never satisfied with present attainments. After several years of marked growth and prosperity, in which they had seen other similar institutions arise, flourish, and, at last, perish for the want of support, in order to avoid such a catastrophe, they resolved to relinquish their private interests in the institution and the large addition that had been made to the school buildings, and the estate, real and personal, of the founders, and enter upon a novel and radical change. It was the volunteer surrender of this large property, owned and acquired by them, to the Synod of Genesee, who accepted the gift made upon the sole condition that a full collegiate course should be established in the school, and a permanent fund raised for its support. The trust and responsibility was thus placed upon the Synod, and the first charter as a collegiate institute was obtained April 6, 1852, its title being the "Ingham Collegiate Institute," located at Le Roy, N. Y. The corporation thus created consisted of Rev. Charles N. Mattoon, Samuel Skinner, A. P. Hascall, J. B. Skinner, C. Danforth, Moses Taggart, Samuel Comstock, C. Comstock, M. O. Coe, A. F. Bartow, Israel Rathbone, J. G. Bixby, J. P. Darling, Albert Brewster, Phineas Staunton, and Mariette Ingham. Twenty-four trustees were appointed, nine of whom constituted a quorum to do business. The trustees mostly consisted of the same persons, and the corporation was vested with the power to create a Normal school, a seminary, and collegiate departments, to appoint professors and teachers, and to grant diplomas. It will be observed that this institution was thus in advance of all female institutions in the provisions of its charter, in that it was the first to introduce a college curriculum into the education of young ladies, and a charter with power to confer degrees and grant diplomas. In this it preceded South Hadley, Elmira, Farmington, Wells, Packer, and Vassar.

Notwithstanding this material advance it made an effort for a still higher rank in the scale of an educational institution, and asked of the legislature of the State a charter for a university. This was at first refused, on the ground assumed of its inadaptability to a female institution for learning, and a rank hitherto unknown in this or any other State. In the following session of the legislature the charter was persistently urged and finally granted with university privileges, and in April, 1857, the name of the trustees was changed to that of counselors. The Rev. Samuel Hanson Cox, a distinguished clergyman of New York city, was installed in 1857, under imposing ceremonies at the Presbyterian Church, as its first chancellor. His high attainments, as a scholar and divine, were at once applied to elevate the standard of education and make it a university worthy of the name—indeed, a model institution, unique of its kind, for the perfect intellectual training of woman for her preeminent duties and responsibilities. In this, during his many years of active devotion to the duties of his chancellorship, he was eminently successful and gave to the institution a reputation and preeminence which filled it, halls and gained for it a wide and merited popularity.

Colonel Phineas Staunton was temporarily elected vice-chancellor. He was an artist of high merit, and made his branch a specialty in the university. He was the son of General Staunton, a distinguished officer in the War of 1812; was born in Wyoming, N. Y.; was married to Miss Emily E. Ingham in 1847; and from that period became connected with the institution either as professor or as one of its officers. By his own pencil, or by selection as a connoisseur, he made a fine collection of paintings still preserved in the art gallery of the institution. His life-work became devoted to the interests of the university, which was only interrupted by the call of his country in its crisis at the opening of the civil war. This call caused him to drop the pencil and enlist in its service, and on the organization of the 100th Regiment in Buffalo he was chosen lieutenant colonel, and immediately went with it to the front. At the battle of Fair Oaks, which soon followed, he was prostrated by a spent-ball, wounded, and in consequence returned to his home at the university, and there resumed his art work. At a later period he became a member of the scientific expedition organized at Williams College, which proved his last work. He was taken suddenly ill at Quito, South America, from which he did not recover, and there died, and was buried in that city. The expedition was not without its value to the university, for Mrs. Staunton became the purchaser of the large and rare collection of birds and natural objects secured by Prof. Orton, at the head of the expedition, and which now adorn and enrich the collection of the art building. It may be here added that this fine structure (the art gallery and hall) is the best in the State for the purpose of its construction; was erected in 1870, at the cost of some $15,000, by Mrs. Staunton, as a memorial to her husband, and which now stands a noble monument of her devotion to his memory as well as a most valuable accession to the university buildings. These latter have at different periods all been greatly improved and enlarged.

The property valuation of Ingham University (the voluntary surrender by the founders to the corporation), as reported by it to the Regents of the University of New York, in 1875 was $101,000. Times may have affected and reduced somewhat the valuation, but a recent addition of a large brick dormitory, largely the gift of the Alumni Association (an incorporated body), would in great degree offset that diminution. Space will also fail to speak at length of the several chancellors who have succeeded Dr. Cox after his resignation in 1863. There was the Rev. Dr. Samuel D. Burchard, who served until 1872; then Dr. Edward B. Wadsworth, elected in 1883; and the last, Dr. W. W. Totherob. All gave efficient aid in maintaining the university up to that high plane upon which it was founded. On the resignation of the latter, by his removal to Chicago, the chancellorship became vacant and has not yet been filled. It is due here to make brief mention of a few of the able professors in the different departments, who under these several administrations aided in maintaining this high standard and giving to the university its wide-spread popularity. There was in the art department Prof. L. M. Wiles, of New York, who, as a landscape painter, acquired a National reputation, aided by his son Irving. There was in music the accomplished Henri Appi and Mrs. C. S. Cory. There was the able divine, the late Rev. William L. Parsons, in moral philosophy, and his cultured consort, Mrs. Lucy A. C., in the same department and in history, which position she still retains, and whose liberal benefactions to the university, often repeated, merit grateful acknowledgment and recognition. There was Prof. H. J. Schmitz, at one period at the head of the institution, and who was called as principal of the State Normal School at Geneseo. There was the late Rev. Dr. Henry J. Van Lennep, unsurpassed as an oriental scholar, and a voluminous author upon the "Land of the East," the place of his nativity, and whose merited reputation drew pupils from that remote portion of the globe.
By a careful estimate made by Prof. Van Lennep, in 1875, at that period (40 years from its origin) above 5,000 persons in all had here enjoyed the benefits of the institution, and now the number is over 8,000. It is but due to its liberal founder, who then alone survived, Mrs. Emily Ingham Staunton, that during this period more than $30,000 had been given to indigent but well deserving students, and many of these beneficiaries are now occupying positions of great honor and usefulness.

After the granting of the university charter, in 1861, aid to the extent of $25,000 was asked from the legislature, but only $5,000 was obtained, and further appeals to the public resulted in securing only the small sum of $1,400. The Synod of Genesee then relinquished its trust, and in 1883 a new charter was granted, and a new and the present board of trustees organized, as follows: Hon. James H. Loomis, Hon. Henry N. Page, Charles F. Prentice, Schuyler C. Wells, William Lampson, Rev. W. W. Totherob, Butler Ward, Rev. Edward B. Walsworth, Nicholas B. Keeney, Hon. Augustus Frank, Rev. Herman C. Riggs, Augustus E. Miller, Hon. Edward C. Walker, Rev. Samuel Bowden, and Rev. Amasa S. Freeman. When Mrs. Staunton retired from the institution the new board granted her an annuity for life. Its real head is the highly cultivated and endowed lady principal, Miss R. N. Webster, whose experience and executive ability well qualify her for the place, and give her a deserved popularity with the pupils as well as with the officers of the university. There are 18 instructors under her, and the institution for instruction in all branches is maintaining its high standard.

The present faculty of Ingham University consists of Rev. W. W. Totherob, chancellor; Miss R. N. Webster, Mrs. Lucy A. S. Parsons, Miss Ella M. Arnold, Miss E. P. Ballantine, Miss F. L. Beach, Miss J. Dammann, Miss C. A. McPherson, Miss A. Harkort, Mrs. R. W. Bellamy, Miss M. E. Samson, Miss Rose M. Shave, Miss Edith Innis (Reg.), Prof. Herman Dossenbach, Miss E. S. Peeke, Miss M. M. Pomeroy, and Sarah A. Innis, matron.

This article should not close without notice of the recent death of the last of its early founders—Mrs. Emily Ingham Staunton. This estimable lady, whose name must ever be associated with the university which bears it, closed her long and useful life in November, 1889, at the advanced age of 78 years and eight months, at the home of her brother Albert, at Oil City, Pa. Here is no place or space for her life or extended encomium. Her works do follow her. She was the first in the country to conceive and carry out to a successful issue a university charter for female education. Her life-long labor and all of her estate were cheerfully bestowed on this cherished idea. This alone should place her name among the great benefactors of the age. Her remains were brought for burial to the spot she had loved so well, and where all of her life’s labor had been unselfishly devoted. Appropriate honors were here paid to her memory in the University Hall, where a crowded audience assembled to give evidence of their respect and sense of the great loss the community had expericened by her decease. Her remains rest in the university grounds (as she had requested) by the side of the noble cenotaph erected by her to her husband, whose remains repose in a foreign land.

Churches.—The beginning of religious service was coincident with the beginning of the settlement. The primitive barn, the settler's cabin, and the log school-house had their Sabbath gatherings, so that the spiritual wants were not neglected—whenever an itinerant pastor appeared to conduct the service. The Rev. David Perry, a missionary from Massachusetts, was the first preacher, in 1800. There was no organized church, as such, west of the Genesee River until 1803, and this was of the Presbyterian order, at Big Springs (Mumford). It was of Scotch emigrants, of the true "kirk and covenant" stamp, who had in 1799 emigrated and settled there from the old country, and consisted of but five families: John McVean, Hugh McDermott, Donald McPherson, James McLean, and John Anderson. Their first minister was Jedediah Chapman, who occasionally served the Ganson settlement, as did also his successor, Rev. A. Denoon, who came in 1805. The first church service of the Episcopal order was held here in 1802, by the Rev. Davenport Phelps, and who thereafter occasionally officiated, of which mention is made in the notice of that society. Transient visits were made by ministers of other denominations, but mostly of the Presbyterian order. Among the latter were the Rev. Isaiah B. Andrews and John Lindsley. In 1808 the Rev. Mr. Coleman was sent out by the Missionary Society of Connecticut, who spent several months in this and the adjoining settlements. He was succeeded by the Revs. Mr. Phelps, Reuben Parmalee, and Lemuel Parker, the latter pursuing his missionary march westward, it is said to Oregon, but whether thus early in the century this heroic purpose was accomplished the record does not appear.

It was not until February 7, 1812, that the Presbyterian Church was first organized in Le Roy, and it was followed by a union with it of the Congregationalists. They were merged into one society. It was organized by the Revs. Oliver Ayer and Reuben Parmalee, and David Anderson was chosen and ordained deacon. Rev. David Fuller was the first resident clergyman, and its first pastor was the Rev. Calvin Colton. The present church edifice was built in 1826. Mr. Colton built the brick dwelling on the Oatka, now occupied by Dr. Taylor. He subsequently left the ministry and gave his attention to literary pursuits and became an author of some note, of which his Four Years in Great Britain gave him wide reputation. Many of the pastors that followed were distinguished for their zeal, piety, and earnest work in building up the church and society to its present standard of growth and strength. It is here designed to present but the early beginnings, which were quite as favorable for religious advantages as in other new communities. They were indeed greater than could have been expected, when in 1803 there were but four Presbyterian ministers west of Oneida County: Revs. Jedediah Chapman, J. Lindsley, Samuel Leacock, and Jabez Chadwick.
The first services of the Episcopal Church here were conducted by the Rev. Davenport Phelps, a missionary of the church in Western New York. He again officiated in 1804 in the school-house erected by Ezra Platt, on the south side of Trigon Park, on which occasion he performed the rite of baptism in his family. One of these, it is presumed, was Elijah, his son, who, in his manhood, became a prominent member of the society, and was, until his death, one of its vestrymen and wardens. In 1817, under the Rev. Samuel Johnson, a parish was organized with the present name of “St. Mark's Church.” Its first officers were: Timothy Hatch and Hugh Murphy, wardens; Abel Noyes, Solomon Root, George A. Tiffany, Ezra Platt, Thaddeus Stanley, Elisha Stanley, Manly Colton, and Graham Newell, vestrymen.

It is due in this connection to note briefly the name and character of one of the officers of the church, elected at its first organization. Elisha Stanley came to this village in 1811, from Goshen, Conn., and continued his residence until his death, in his 89th year. During his long residence here he was held in high esteem, for his strict integrity, high sense of honor, and exemplary character. He was never behind or faltered in any good work, whether of church, community, or State. Of this estimate of his character the society gave ample testimony by continuing him in his office from its organization in 1817 until the day of his decease, a period of 61 years, 55 of which as a warden of the church. He died in 1868. His son, the Rev. Henry Stanley, rector of the Episcopal Church at Little Falls, preceded him in his decease, in 1870, the latter leaving two daughters who reside here, one the wife of Harry H. Falkner, an insurance agent of the village. Elisha Stanley left but one surviving child, Mrs. Taylor, the wife of Dr. Taylor.

Hugh Murphy, one of the first wardens, was born in Ireland, in 1760, was drafted in the British army, and came to America during the Revolutionary war. He entered our army and was wounded near Philadelphia. In 1785 he married Eunice Botsford, of Newtown, Conn. Mr. Murphy came to Le Roy in 1810, and purchased the farm on which his descendants have ever since lived, on East Main street. He died in 1826, leaving seven children: Amarilla, Joseph, Barnabas, Sarah, Mary, Amos B., and Charlotte. Mary, the only one surviving, now in her 93d year, was in the first class for confirmation, in 1817, by Bishop Hobart. The service was held in the school-house opposite Captain Lent's.

In 1826, while the Rev. Seth W. Beardsley was rector, a stone church, 40x60 feet, was erected on Church street (its site the present cemetery on the street), and was finished and consecrated by Bishop Hobart, August 7, 1827. Of this edifice not “one stone has been left upon another which has not been cast down.” The land was the gift of Jacob Le Roy, and also $1,000 toward the completion of the building, and in 1844 he gave $1,500 additional. The rectors who followed the Rev. Mr Beardsley in the service of the church were as follows, to the period of the erection of the present church edifice: In 1830 the Rev. J. M. Rogers was called to the rectorship, who was followed by the Rev. Dr. F. H. Cummings, in 1831, who subsequently removed to Grand Rapids, Mich., where he died after a long and useful pastorate. Rev. Dr. Kendrick Metcalf became the rector of the parish in 1833, where he continued for eight years. He was a learned divine, and a polished writer, as well as an earnest Christian worker, and was called to the professorship of languages in Hobart College, where he remained until his decease. In 1841 Rev. George D. Gillespie took charge of the parish. He married the daughter of Joshua Lathrop, of Le Roy; his wife has since died. He served the parish until 1846, when he was called to Cincinnati, and to the parishes of Palmyra and Ann Arbor; was subsequently elected and yet remains bishop of Western Michigan. The rectors who followed were the Rev. T. D. Chipman, in 1846, since deceased; in 1850 the Rev. George H. McKnight, the present rector of Trinity Church, Elmira, who continued in the rectorship until 1855, and was succeeded in 1856 to 1860 by the Rev. R. J. Parvin. The sad catastrophe of the burning of a steamboat on the Ohio River, in 1866, brought to a sudden close the life of a most zealous and able Christian churchman. Then followed a brief pastorate of Rev. A. M. Wylie, and his successor was Rev. A. H. Gesner, who served the parish for four years, when, in 1868, the Rev. J. H. Waterbury took the charge. It was under his pastorate that the present church edifice was designed and completed. The corner-stone was laid April 24, 1869, with appropriate church ceremonies. The edifice was formally opened December 22, 1870, and its consecration was on November 23, 1876, by Bishop Coxe, the late Rev. Dr. T. M. Bishop being the rector. Other rectors were L. D. Ferguson, J. H. Weibel (until 1885), Arthur W. Sloan in 1886, and the present rector, Rev. Pierre Cushing. The church has benefitted by a legacy of $2,000 from Albert Hill, and the Sunday-school of $1,000 from Mrs. D. P. Mirl. The number of communicants is 169; Sunday-school scholars 70, with nine teachers. The valuation of their property is $28,000. The rectory is located on Church street, corner of St. Mark. The present vestry is as follows: Wardens, D. R. Bacon and A. O. Comstock; vestrymen, H. H. Falkner, John Eyres, A. E. Miller, S. F. Curtiss, W. H. Smith, William Lampson, T. B. Tuttle, John Wiss, and E. H. Martin, clerk.

The First Presbyterian Church of Le Roy was organized February 7, 1812. The Congregationalists afterwards united with it, and the two societies were merged into one, under the Presbyterian form of government. The early history of this church has already been given. Services were held in the school building on Craigie street, which was used in turn by the Episcopal and Baptist churches, until the completion of a church in 1826. During that year Mrs Colton organized the first Sunday-school. The first members of the church were Moses McCollum, Joel Butler, Nathan Wilcox, David Anderson, Mehitable Judd, Eunice Farnham, Sarah Parmalee, Elizabeth Chamberlin, Sally Seymour, Mercy Buell, Mary Butler, Elizabeth McCollum, and Elizabeth Wilcox. Moses McCollum and Edmund Beach were ruling elders. The present church was remodeled in 1850, and renovated in 1888. It, with the parsonage, has a valuation of $25,000. The church seats about 750 and now has 475 members. The Sunday-school has 300 members. The present officers of the church are C. K. Ward, clerk; S. T. Howard, J. L. Crocker, W. R. Halbert, S. Gillette, M. D. Pratt, ruling elders; M. A. Ladd, C. L. Olmsted, E. L. Miller, and John Hager, deacons; L. J. Bovee, M. D. Pratt, W. C. Donnan, J. P. Sampson, and F. D. Ward, trustees. The pastors have been as follows: 1820, Calvin Colton; 1828, Joseph Myers; 1835, B. B. Stockton; 1843, Ebenezer Mead; 1855, Charles A. Mattoon, D. D.; 1863, E. Whittlesey; 1878, C. H. Taylor, D. D.; 1888, William W. Totherob, D. D.; Rev. James A. Anderson, the present pastor, took charge May 1, 1889.

The First Baptist Church of Le Roy.—In 1806 Elder Peck, a missionary of the Baptist Church, visited the settlement and preached in the school-house. In 1807 Elder Bennett preached a sermon. In 1810 Elder Witherell spent a Sabbath here, and preached in Hines Chamberlain's barn. Rev. Donald Mann, of Caledonia, often preached, walking from his home in the morning and returning at night, a distance of about 20 miles. Elder Leonard Anson was an early preacher, and assisted in the organization of the church. The council which gave fellowship to the church met June 25, 1818, at the school-house near Oliver Langworthy's. Rev. E. Vining was moderator, and Henry Slayton, clerk. The number of members when constituted was 26. Elder Amos Lampson was their first pastor. Services were held alternately at this school-house and one in the village. Hines Chamberlain was chosen deacon. In September following they were received into the association at its annual meeting in Sweden. The present house of worship was erected on Main street, on the eastern limits of the corporation, on land now owned by E. P. Branch. It was commenced in 1823 and completed in 1829. In 1835 it was removed to Church street and located on land purchased of Joshua Lathrop. In May, 1841, the Baptist Society became a corporate body in accordance with the provisions of the statute, under the name of "The First Baptist Society in Le Roy." The trustees were elected and Austin Phelps made president of the board, and P. M. Smith, clerk. In June of this year the land was deeded by John Lathrop to the board of trustees. A parsonage was built on Wolcott street in 1858, at a cost of about $1,800. This was subsequently exchanged for a house on Church street, near the church. In 1881 this was rebuilt. The church property, including parsonage, is valued at $10,500. The names of pastors in the order of their service are Amos Lampson, E. M. Spencer, David Morris, John Minor, Barach Beckwith, Ely Stone, A. Willey, John Miller, W. I. Cram, Ichabod Clark, William Hutchinson, H. Daniels, A. C. Barrell, D. Moore, O. A. F. Spinning, I. Clark, W. F. Basten, E. P. Brigham, D. D. Reed, A. L. Wilkinson, C. M. Rupe, and O. C. Kirkham, the latter of whom came in 1885. The present number of members is 217.
The Methodist Episcopal Church.—The most reliable information we are able to secure points to the fact that Rev. James Mitchell was the first Methodist minister who crossed the Genesee, in 1809. In 1813 the Clarence circuit included Clarence, Batavia, Alexander, Attica, westerly to Buffalo, and Bethany, Warsaw, and adjoining country. Rev. Zachariah Paddock came to this circuit in 1819. He preached at Batavia, then came to Alexander, and put up at Father Hawkins's. The first class of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Le Roy was formed early in 1823, by Alfred Morehouse, who came here from New Rochelle late in 1822. The members of the class were Alfred Morehouse and his wife, Orange Scott and wife, Asenath Judd, John Hoy, Julia Herrick, Mr. and Mrs. I. Herrick, Mrs. Stanley, Alanson Stanley, and Henry Goodenow. The church was legally organized in 1828. It was included in Caledonia circuit. The first preacher was Micah Seager, and Goodwin Stoddard, presiding elder. Services were held once in two weeks in the schoolhouse east of the village, and so continued until 1829, when the first brick church was built and occupied, being dedicated by Bishop Roberts. The cost of the building was $950. In 1882 efforts began towards additional church facilities, and Rev. M. C. Dean, with the aid of George W. Dutton, secured financial aid toward purchasing the present parsonage, it being a necessary step for room for the proposed new church. The interior of the old church was burned out by fire in 1884, which hastened the movement for a new building, and in 1885 pledges were obtained sufficient to warrant contracts being made. The corner-stone was laid in May of the same year. The beautiful stone edifice, the finest in Western New York outside of the cities, was completed in 1886, at a cost of over $25,000, by the diligent and faithful efforts of the pastor, Rev. G. H. Dryer. It has a seating capacity of 450 persons, and the Sunday-school of 400, and is heated by steam. The handsome rose window is a memorial to Rev. Daniel Anderson, who was born in 1795 and died in 1886. He received a license to exhort in 1817, and to preach in 1827. He moved to Le Roy in 1823, and was for over 60 years a devoted worker in the church. Another window is a memorial to William Le Roy Bishop, a true friend and generous benefactor. The pastors have been as follows: 1823, Micah Seager; 1824, J. Hustes; 1825 C. V. Adgate; 1827, W. Hoag; 1829, S. Madison; 1830, R. Parker; 1831, M. Seager; 1832, S. Mattison; 1833, R. L. Waite; 1834, L. B. Castle; 1835, I. Chamberlyne; 1836, G. Osband; 1837–38, J. Latimer; 1839–40, P. E. Brown; 1841, D. D. Buck; 1842, M. Seager; 1843, P. Woodworth; 1844–45, A. Steele; 1846–47, C. C. Houghton; 1848–49, R. L. Waite; 1850, H. R. Smith; 1851–52, J. M. Fuller; 1853–54, A. P. Ripley; 1855, S. C. Clark; 1856–57, J. McEwen; 1858, G. De Lamaty; 1859–60, P. R. Stover; 1861–62, E. A. Rice; 1863, C. Shelling; 1864–66, K. D. Nettleton; 1867–69, P. R. Stover; 1870–71, W. S. Tuttle; 1872, J. Hartwell; 1873, J. Morrow; 1874–75, J. B. Wentworth; 1876, R. F. Kay; 1877–78, R. C. Brownlee; 1879, K. P.
Jervis; 1880–82, M. C. Dean; 1883–85, G. H. Dryer; 1886–89, W. C. Wilbor.

St. Peter’s Catholic Church.—Early in the spring of 1849 Rev. Father Edward Dillon came to the village, finding but few families within its limits, but in the town quite a number desiring the ministrations of the church. The nucleus of a congregation was thus obtained and mass was said in the old “Round-house,” on the site of the present Universalist Church. Services were held monthly thereafter at the house of Dennis Butler. Bishop Timon made his first visit in July of the same year. In September Father Dillon purchased a lot on Pleasant street and erected a wooden church thereon, in which mass was celebrated on the Christmas night following. Father Dillon continued his ministrations until October, 1850. From the time of his leaving till the coming of Rev. Francis O’Farrell the congregation was served by Rev. Fathers Fitzpatrick and Moloney. Rev. Francis O’Farrell was in charge from October, 1852, to 1856. He gave the congregation two services a month, and enlarged the church to meet the increased attendance. Batavia and Attica churches were also under Father O’Farrell’s charge. Father Brown succeeded him for a short period. He was followed by Father F. McGlew, who was here from 1857 to 1860. He officiated three Sundays instead of two, and opened a school in the basement of the church. To meet the increased attendance he bought a lot on Myrtle street (now owned by the Free Methodist Church). In 1860 Rev. Father Thomas Cunningham took charge. He gave service every Sunday, paid for the property on Myrtle street, bought eight acres of ground on Exchange street, and laid out what is known as St. Francis’s Cemetery, and greatly enlarged the church accommodations, besides starting a fund for a new church, that being necessary owing to the rapid growth of his congregation. In December, 1868, the congregation was raised to the status of a parish, and Rev. Daniel De Lacy Moore was appointed the first resident pastor. He took up the work of his predecessor, in preparing for increased accommodations, by purchasing a lot on Lake street and preparing plans for a church, which has resulted in the present large edifice, 60x148 feet, built at a total cost of $29,000. Father Moore was not permitted to witness the result of his efforts, for he died in January, 1871. Father L. Vanderpool, who was assistant to Father Cunningham in 1866–67, came here in December, 1870, and after two years of earnest, devoted work, aided by a hard working and generous congregation, finished the beautiful stone edifice in which they now worship. It was dedicated in December, 1873, by Rt. Rev. St. V. Ryan, bishop of Buffalo. To the cost of the church edifice is to be added an outlay of nearly $9,000 to furnish it with the necessary apparatus. There remains an indebtedness of $7,000 on the church. In addition to their church and parsonage the congregation of St. Peter’s own a cemetery, which is steadily enlarged and improved in keeping with their needs and means. On Monday, September 2, 1889, the new parochial school-house was opened, under the charge of three teachers, with an attendance of 120 scholars. The congregation numbers 1,300 souls.
The Universalist Society was organized in 1831. They held meetings in the "Round-house," which many citizens will remember as an old landmark of the village for a number of years. The first services preached by any clergyman of this denomination was by Rev. Nathaniel Stacy, in 1812, who died in Pennsylvania. Among the early ministers after the formation of the society were Tomlinson, Knapp, Kelsey, Peck, Brayton, and others. In 1858 Rev. Charles Cravens was chosen pastor and reorganized the society. Under his ministration they purchased the old "Round-house" and caused to be erected on its site the present commodious edifice at a cost of $8,000. Twenty-six members participated in this organization, the officers being H. A. Olmsted, G. D. Crofoot, John Thwing, Alba, Paul, and Henry Steuber; A. T. Drake was treasurer, and S. F. Gibbs, clerk. The number of members at this time is 51, under the pastorate of Rev. C. L. Haskell. The present valuation of the property is $5,000. The seating capacity of the church is 250. Mrs. Olive Haaze, who died in 1881, left a legacy of $6,700 to the church, on condition that services are held regularly for 10 years from the time of her death. Rev. F. M. Gibbs succeeded Rev. Cravens, and he was followed by Revs. C. H. Dutton, G. W. Powell, E. W. Fuller, M. L. Hewitt, H. B. Howell, J. F. Gates, De W. Lamphere, M. D. Shumway, and C. L. Haskell.

Machpelah Cemetery is the name bestowed upon a beautiful plat of ground, of about 25 acres in extent, on North street, north of the railroads. The ground was originally bought by Messrs. George W. Blodgett, Abial Robertson, and Chauncey L. Olmsted, who held it for several years and sold lots enough to reimburse them for their outlay. It was transferred to the Cemetery Association at the time of its incorporation, April 30, 1873, by Francis C. Lathrop, Lucius N. Bangs, Henry H. Olmsted, Augustus L. Tryon, William D. Olmsted and Abial Robertson. The grounds are upon an elevation, and are beautifully laid out with an excellent taste displayed in adapting new ideas to the laying out and beautifying of burial plots, which is worthy of imitation. It is pleasant to note the affectionate regard bestowed in finding room for the remains of so many old and honored residents of the village, thus associating their memories with those of later days. Attention is being attracted and encouragement given to the endowment of lots, whereby the plots can be assured of perpetual care and attention. Some $800 in such funds have already been invested in good mortgage securities, and it is hoped that an increased interest will be manifested in this direction. The chapel fund has the sum of $900 securely invested, of which the sum of $800 was the legacy of Mrs. D. P. Mirl. The endowment fund of the cemetery is to be augmented by a legacy from Mrs. Olive Haaze. The present officers are William Huyck, president; F. C. Lathrop, secretary and treasurer. The trustees are William Huyck, N. B. Keeney, L. G. Paul, E. Rogerson, George W. Cook, and F. C. Lathrop.

ing-ground east of the village is worthy of mention. It was opened in 1801. Most of the early pioneers were buried there. That on Clay street, called the Presbyterian burying-ground, is the next oldest, and the Episcopal burying-ground on Church street is next. The one at Fort Hill also contains the remains of many old residents.

Freemasonry.¹—On January 7, 1815, a dispensation was granted to Orange Risdon, James Ganson, Levi Farnham, Hugh Murphy, Salmon Butler, Levi Beardsley, Elisha Severance, Thomas Tufts, John Gilbert, Frederick Fitch, Daniel Biddlecome, John Richards, and Paul E. Day to organize and open a lodge of Free Masons under the name of "Le Roy Lodge." Orange Risdon was the first worshipful master; James Ganson, senior warden; and Levi Farnham, junior warden. The first meeting was held February 16, 1815, and on March 8, 1815, Daniel LeBarron was the first candidate initiated. A charter or warrant was subsequently granted by the Grand Lodge of the State June 11, 1816, under the style and number of Le Roy Lodge, No. 260. For the succeeding 11 years it maintained a prosperous career, and during that time acquired a membership of about 150 Masons. The unfortunate "Morgan episode" then occurred, and produced a local explosion of public and private opinion. The village of Le Roy was in the vortex. Some of the best citizens, who were also members of the fraternity, were divided in sentiment as to the perpetrators of the alleged outrages, and quite a number of them openly renounced further continuance with the institution. Several public meetings and antagonistic conventions were subsequently held, and the culmination of circumstances resulted in the complete collapse of Le Roy Lodge, No. 260, by the surrender of its warrant to the Grand Lodge on September 19, 1827.

For nearly a score of years Le Roy then enjoyed an uninterrupted Masonic slumber, and no attempt whatever was made towards any sort of fraternal assemblage or reorganization. Every cycle of time, however, always brings more or less change in public opinion. Many pronounced opponents had either removed elsewhere or died. The crisis was over, and a healthy reaction followed and wiped out the previous antipathy against secret societies. In the adjoining towns of Bethany and Attica Olive Branch Lodge, No. 39, had maintained only a nominal existence. Its condition was paralytic, sickly, and intensely feeble; in fact a mere skeleton; but at this juncture Lucius Parks, William Sheldon, Azor Curtis, Thomas C. Ladd, Consider Warner, Orator H. Kendall, Daniel Biddlecome, and one or two others, who had always adhered to the fraternity, succeeded in having it removed from Attica to Le Roy, and this change of climate and membership brought both health and life to Masonry in this town.

On January 27, 1847, Olive Branch Lodge, No. 39, held its first meeting in the village of Le Roy, under the mastership of Wor. Bro. Lucius Parks, and at the next meeting (February 24, 1847) Patrick Hassett was the first candidate initiated. Following that date for more than 42 years the membership has been increased by the healthy addition of several hundred of the very best residents of Le Roy and vicinity. Of course many changes have occurred by deaths, removals, etc., and the limits of a gazetteer sketch preclude entering into a detailed account of the various public ceremonials incident to its history. Its activity, however, has been continuous. Its charities have been bountiful, and with its present good sized membership and healthy treasury no reasonable doubt can exist that Olive Branch Lodge will ever cease in the work of brotherly benevolence. The following are the officers of Olive Branch Lodge for 1890: W. M., Harry H. Falkner; S. W., Walter H. Smith; J. W., Frank Darrow; treasurer, Charles N. Vicary; secretary, Henry Steuber; S. D., Rev. Pierre Cushing; J. D., John N. Champion; S. M. C., Fred T. Wilcox; J. M. C., John C. Ross; marshal, Dr. S. W. Skinner; tiler, Cyrus W. Walker; finance committee, S. F. Curtiss, William Huyck, and C. F. Bissell.

Any résumé of Masonry in Le Roy would be incomplete without mention of R. W. John R. Anderson. To that gentleman more than any other living resident of Le Roy belongs the credit of its present prosperity. As the immediate successor of Lucius Parks be brought brains, zeal, and administrative ability to Olive Branch Lodge, and for 18 years (16 continuously, the longest service of any Mason in the State) Brother Anderson was its W. M. and presiding officer, having initiated, passed, and raised 328 members therein during the time. His life-long love for the brotherhood has been unabated. His many public addresses and contributions to the literature of Free Masonry have always been of a high order and rank among the ablest contributions to Masonry, and his official services to the craft produced good results everywhere. His various terms of office outnumber any one in Western New York. His well-known administrative ability brought Olive Branch Lodge from obscurity to prominence, and gave it a fame as extended as are the limits of the State, and he was second to none in his devotion to the fraternity. As district deputy grand master he exercised supervision over Genesee, Wyoming, Monroe, Orleans, and Livingston counties for six years; as past junior grand warden of the Grand Lodge of the State of New York his well earned reputation is widely known throughout the commonwealth; as grand steward of the Grand Lodge his work was most efficient and equally compensating to the craft; as deputy grand lecturer his work has been of the highest order and benefit to the brethren. He has also acceptably filled the office of assistant grand lecturer of the Grand Chapter of the State of New York. He revived Royal Arch Masonry at Le Roy after a struggle of seven years, and restored it to its pristine eminence by organizing Le Roy Chapter, No. 183, and was appointed its first high priest and served continuously for nine years. He was petitioning member of Batavia Encampment of Knights Templars, and was appointed its first generalissimo. As sovereign grand inspector of 33 in the Scottish Rite he has acquired the highest Masonic distinction ever obtained by any resident of Genesee County; and "that long may he live" is the earnest desire of his many friends.

The semi-centennial celebration of Olive Branch Lodge was celebrated at Starr Hall, June 22, 1870, followed by a banquet at Central Hall, where 1,000 persons were fed at the tables. Visiting brethren from different parts of the State took part in the ceremonies. W. S. Brown, the worshipful master of the lodge, delivered the historical sketch, and R. W. John R. Anderson the principal address. A poem, written for the occasion by William H. C. Hosmer, of Avon, was also delivered by that gentleman.

Le Roy Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, No. 183, was organized pursuant to and by virtue of a dispensation duly issued under the hand and seal of the most excellent Royal Arch Chapter of the State of New York, for that purpose, bearing date of the 12th day of December, A. D. 1864, and granted upon the petition of and directed to companions. John R. Anderson was to be first high priest; Comp. C. Fitch Bissell, first king; and Comp. Marcus L. Babcock, first scribe; and to companions John Butterfield, William Sheldon, Lucius Parks, Consider Warner, Orator H. Kendall, Albert Brewster, William Barnett, Nelson Thayer, William M. Irish, Charles Cravens, Thomas C. Ladd, William M. Tompkins, Robert F. Stage, and Robert McKay, petitioners. Of these petitioners companions Anderson and Bissell are the only ones left in Le Roy. Henry Moody, D. J. Bissell, and Frank Darrow are the principal officers for 1890.

Royal Arcanum received its charter in April, 1882, with 20 charter members. There are at present 33 members, and it is in a flourishing condition. The present officers are Dr. Skinner, regent; G. Strobel, V. R.; E. J. Rumsey, secretary; John Anderson, col.; and T. B. Tuttle, treasurer.

Hope Lodge, No. 76, A. O. U. W., was opened in Le Roy in March, 1877, with about 30 charter members. The present number is 57, showing a steady increase. Its officers are I. C. Mason, P. M.; L. Sellinger, M. W.; M. A. Merritt, fin.; R. M. Dillon, O.; A. K. Drury, recording secretary; A. Harsch, financial secretary; D. E. Curtiss, recorder.

Charity Lodge, No. 53, E. Q. M. A., was organized in 1879. The first officers were A. L. Tompkins, president; L. G. Paul, P. P.; E. D. Shepard, V. P.; S. A. Ball, treasurer; F. A. Steuber, financial secretary; and John Wiss, recording secretary. There were about 35 charter members; there are now about 40 members. The present officers are Harry H. Falkner, P. P.; L. Sellinger, V. P.; F. A. Steuber, treasurer; E. D. Shepard, secretary; and Rev. Pierre Cushing, trustee.

Knights of Labor, No. 9,647, was first started here about 1886. It has had a membership of over 100, but now has only 40.

St. Patrick's T. A. S., No. 275, incorporated in 1869, has 55 active members. Its officers are F. J. Kemp, president; O. Foughey, V. P.; F. Hoy, recording secretary; F. Tulley, financial secretary; H. Coyle, corresponding secretary; W. H. Brown, treasurer; C. Leahy, marshal.
Branch 72, C. M. B. A.—The present officers are as follows: President, Owen Foughey; first vice-president, W. H. Brown; second vice-president, Richard Holland; secretary, Thomas M. Burns; assistant secretary, Thomas H. Linsler; financial secretary, John Martin; treasurer, John Maloney; marshal, Peter Coleman; guard, Peter Cain; trustees, Thomas H. Murnan, M. Muller; representative to Grand Council, James L. Morris; alternate, William Elmore; spiritual adviser, Rev. L. W. Vandepoel.

Staunton Post, No. 396, G. A. R., was organized September 6, 1883, by the resident surviving members of the late war. The present officers are M. P. Pierson, commander; D. E. Curtis, S. V. C.; W. H. Brown, J. V. C.; James Morton, Y. M.; Louis Barr, surgeon; E. J. Niles, chaplain.

Royal Templars of Temperance.—The present officers are S. H. Murdock, counsel; Mrs. A. Paul, vice-counsel; and C. L. Carlton, chaplain.

The Le Roy Gas Light Company was organized in July, 1860, with a paid in capital of $25,000. Nathan Randall was chosen president; P. H. Agan, treasurer; and C. M. Randall, secretary and superintendent. L. M. Bangs and C. L. Olmsted were among the first organizers. At first only 12 street lamps were put up; five years ago there were 48; now there are 122. There are about five and a-half miles of pipe laid. The same company controls the electric light plant now in operation. The officers of the company are D. J. Bissell, president; M. P. Lampson, secretary and treasurer; John C. Bissell, superintendent.

The fire department.—The old method of extinguishing fires by means of buckets, distributed among the villagers, who kept them on hand for use, was superseded in 1834 by a veritable (piano) engine, operated by two cranks, one on either side, turned by hand; this in turn was succeeded by a Silsby (break) engine, costing perhaps $250. Up to this time, about 1850, there was a semblance of organization; but on February 8, 1851, the department was formed and organized, with John W. Shedd, chief; John G. Barber, first assistant; and A. O. Comstock, secretary. The department at present consists of three companies: one chemical, one hose, and one hook and ladder company, whose chief is John Wiss; first assistant, T. W. Larkin; second assistant, W. P. Randall; secretary, S. F. Comstock.

The Firemen’s Benevolent Association was chartered in 1851, and consists of the active members of the fire department. Its first officers were John W. Shedd, president; A. D. Lampkins, vice-president; J. H. Lent, secretary; and J. J. Tompkins, treasurer. This association is supported by a two per cent. tax, authorized by the legislature, upon non-resident insurance companies doing business in the State. The association has a fund of over $4,000 invested in bonds and mortgages, and a contingent fund of $300 in the bank. In February, 1889, the sum of $160 was given to each company. The present officers are S. P. Hooker, president; F. L. B. Taft, vice-president; John Wiss, treasurer; and F. M. Comstock, secretary.

The chief engineer of the fire department is John Wiss, first assistant, Frank Seiz, second assistant, W. P. Randall; and there are about 70 active members.

Fires.—There is scarcely a business house in Le Roy village that is not reared over the ashes of its predecessor. In an old file of the Gazette is this startling announcement: "Destructive Fire in Le Roy—all the Business Portions in Ruins." At 3 o'clock in the morning of January 17, 1855, a fire broke out in an old wooden building occupied by Grummon and Pinney, by the former as the printing office of the Genesee Herald. Mr. Pinney was a tobacconist. The fire spread both ways till everything between Drake's grocery and Mill street was consumed. The loss was estimated at $100,000, and among the sufferers were Barton & Olmsted, Browning & Kelsey, Samson & Elmore, Foreman & Sons, James Annin, Hascall & Bangs, Olmsted and Adams. This was the largest fire that has ever visited Le Roy. It was 14 years before another really large one occurred. In 1869 a fire broke out in the rear part of Mr. Steuber's cabinet shop. Eighteen buildings in all were destroyed, all those between the old town hall and Mr. Maloney's grocery being burned. The latter was afterwards torn down to make room for new buildings. Le Roy has lost few of its dwelling places by fire. The Bacon Place and the Shayer house are recalled. In the summer of 1875 the Starr block was burned, and with an adjacent block, stores, offices, the public library, which cost so much noble labor, and old Starr Hall with its host of memories.

Newspapers.—In the early settlement the first newspapers published were the Ontario Gazette and Western Repository, and were issued from Canandaigua in 1804. The mail was brought on horseback once a fortnight by Phineas P. Bates, the mail carrier between Canandaigua and Fort Niagara. His horn was hailed with great delight by the settlers. Previous to the establishment of the mail route letters had to be sent by private hands. John Metcalf succeeded Mr. Bates.

The Le Roy Gazette was commenced in 1826 by I. O. Balch. It was a four-page (13x21) sheet, with four columns to the page. At that time the village was very small, and while business was brisk the merchants had not been initiated into the benefits of advertising, and consequently the income from a paper was limited. Mr. Balch's successors in the paper were in the following order: Starr & Hotchkiss, D. D. Ward, Richard Hollister, Rufus Robertson, F. Goodrich, Hon. S. M. Gates, Martin O. Coe, and Cyrus Thompson. The latter, in 1840, sold to C. B. Thomson, who was editor and proprietor for 44 years. In May, 1885, Messrs. Marcellus & Hand bought out Mr. Thomson, and in September, 1887, G. E. Marcellus became, and is now, sole owner.

George E. Marcellus was born in Monroe County, and came to Le Roy in 1877. His father, George W. Marcellus, was a minister. Desiring to engage in newspaper work George E. entered the office of the Courier, and was for some time local editor of that paper. Upon the retirement of Mr. Thomson from the Gazette he, in company with Mr. Hand, assumed control of that paper, enlarged it one column, introduced new features, and notably increased the circulation. For the past two years Mr. Marcellus has been the sole proprietor of the paper. He has enlarged his facilities for job and press work, and fitted up a tasty and convenient office, thus making his a model establishment.

Charles Bartell Thomson, the fourth son of Joseph and Sarah Thomson, was born in Cohocton, N. Y., in 1815. At the age of 15 years he entered Judge Hovey's office, at Mount Morris, to learn the printers' trade. After a time he was publisher of the Livingston County Journal. In 1840 he came to Le Roy from Washington, D. C., purchased the Le Roy Gazette, and at the time of his decease was the oldest continual editor in Western New York. Mr. Thomson was a man of decided opinions. For 50 years he was a strong supporter, first of the Whig party and then of the Republican party, from which his paper never swerved or changed. During this period he was ever a strong advocate of temperance and good order, as well as of all improvements for the growth and prosperity of the place. He died at Le Roy in 1887, at the age of 72 years, leaving a widow, Sarah H., who survived him only a few months, and a daughter, Elizabeth, who was married to a Mr. Brown, a lawyer, formerly of Binghamton, N. Y., and now a resident of Le Roy, on the Thomson homestead. Mr. Brown is a practitioner in the city of Buffalo.

There were other papers which had a short life. O. A. Brownson, afterwards in high repute among the Roman Catholics for his religious journal, published in Boston, was the editor of the Genesee Republican and Herald of Reform in 1829, an agrarian and infidel paper. In 1844 Edward Bliss established, and for two or three years conducted, the Le Roy Courier. In 1854 William C. Grummond commenced the Genesee Herald, and in April, 1857, Thomas B. Tufts the Le Roy Advertiser, discontinuing it in July, 1858. All of the latter had but a brief existence.

The Le Roy Times was established in Le Roy in June, 1881, by Charles Morgan and his son, Frank H. Morgan, the latter having since that time managed both newspaper and job office. The paper is a weekly of eight-page form, and 48 columns, pasted and trimmed, and the job department has a city equipment of type, with steam-power presses. In 1886 the Le Roy Times Company, with a capital stock of $10,000, was incorporated, Charles Morgan being made president, and F. H. Morgan, secretary and manager of the office. Manager Morgan was born in Le Roy in 1852, prepared for college at Phillips Academy, Exeter, N. H., and graduated in 1876 from Harvard College, Mass. During the next year he was an editorial writer for various papers, was one of the editorial staff of the Buffalo Courier, but giving up this position, owing to impaired health, he, in 1878, bought an interest in the Index at Meadville, Pa., where he remained over three years. He came thence to Le Roy to establish the Times, in a field then already covered by two newspapers. He succeeded in creating a demand for such a live weekly chronicle of news as has been developed by his excellent tact and management.

The Genesee Courier, published by George M. Howe, and now completing its 20th volume, was started in 1870 as a straight out and out Democrat organ for the people in this and Livingston County. The issuing of this publication at that time was rendered possible by an ardent admirer of the editor and proprietor; thus a beginning was made under very favorable circumstances, and the publication has been kept up to this time without any diminution in the spirit which prompted it, nor loss in circulation. George M. Howe, the editor and proprietor, was born in Yorkshire, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., March 15, 1833, and came here in 1849. He learned the trade of printer with Col. William Seaver (long editor of the Spirit of the Times of Batavia), and then assisted in the office of the Le Roy Gazette, while C. B Thomson was in charge of that paper. From that office he gained an experience which fully qualified him in becoming the editor and proprietor of the Courier. Mr. Howe has identified himself with the growth and prosperity of the village; has held the office of trustee for five years, and president of the board for two years. During the recent agitation regarding the introduction of the electric light in the village, and when all the members but he resigned, he was elected president, which office he held for seven months, and was the only member during that time, carrying alone the responsibilities of disbursements for the corporation, the like of which had never been done before in any town in the State. Mr. Howe married Isabella Walker, daughter of Andrew Walker, of Scotch ancestry.

The Bank of Le Roy.—The first bank organized in Le Roy was December 28, 1838, under the name of the Genesee County Bank. Its first board of directors was Israel Rathbone, M. P. Lampson, John Lent, Elisha Stanley, Samuel Skinner, I. N. Stage, A. Wilcox, Marshall Smead, Lucius Parks, J. C. Ferris, and Noah Starr. Its first officers were Israel Rathbone, president; John Lent, vice-president; M. P. Lampson, cashier. Subsequently M. P. Lampson became and remained for several years the president of the bank, and S. T. Howard, cashier. On the decease of Mr. Rathbone D. R. Bacon was chosen a director to represent his estate. Other changes occurred among the directors, among them being S. B. Skinner, T. Brown, Warren Fay, and R. H. Smith. The bank continued to do a successful banking business under the supervision of its president, Mr. Lampson, until it was closed and merged in the First National Bank of Le Roy, in January, 1864. D. R. Bacon is the sole survivor of the old bank directors. On the death of M. P. Lampson his son William succeeded him as president, and has since remained at the head of the institution, now called the Bank of Le Roy, which was chartered July 1, 1889, under the State law. Its present officers are William Lampson, president; Butler Ward, cashier; W. C. Dorman, assistant cashier; and William and M. P. Lampson, R. Ballard, Butler Ward, and John Maloney, directors.

F. C. Lathrop is a private banker of Le Roy, where he has been engaged in that business for many years.

Salt interests—During the period of the early settlement of this section, up to about 1815, when the hard working pioneers were striving to make homes for themselves, when no luxuries were to be thought of, and their means limited, one of the necessities then (as always) was salt, which was not attainable without an effort. At that time, with wheat only about three shillings per bushel, and salt from $10 to $12 per barrel, it took 30 bushels of wheat to pay for one barrel of salt, that commodity being hauled from "Onondaga Salt Springs," attended with great expense. Little did the settlers in early times dream of having such an immense store of salt beneath them as to make the value of one bushel of wheat equivalent to a barrel of salt. And yet for a period of 75 or 80 years, during the rapid increase in growth of the Genesee country, all this immense wealth has laid dormant, and from its first inception in 1878 has only attained its present status by slow, hard stages, with periods of great discouragements, ending with a well-earned measure of success.

Salt having been discovered at Wyoming in 1878 some of the leading citizens of Le Roy, believing it could be found here, were induced, through the active efforts of N. B. Keeney, to contribute a fund of $1,500 to test the enterprise. The above named gentleman was enabled to interest C. M. Everest, of Rochester, in the undertaking, and with the guarantee of the sum just mentioned Mr. Everest assumed the responsibility of the work, agreeing to bore for salt to the Niagara formation, or not to exceed 1,000 feet in depth. Mr. Everest, on his part, was anxious to discover oil. C. B. Matthews, of Wyoming, was engaged by Mr. Everest to look after his interests. He secured Mr. Higley, of Bradford, Pa., who contracted to drill for salt or oil. A beginning was made December 4, 1878. In February, 1879, such progress had been made that gas was reached at a depth of 500 feet, and also brine, which came up with such force as to cover the derrick with water, and, freezing, presented a grand sight. At this stage of the work, for some unknown reason, Matthews ceased operations, and, abandoning the work, demanded payment for his labors, by the advice of Mr. Everest. The citizens refused to accede to their claims, on the ground that the contract had not been carried out. A long litigation ensued, extending to the fall of 1881, when Mr. Everest, ascertaining he had been deceived by Matthews, made a proposition to the citizens to put down another (No. 2) well. This was begun, under the superintendence of A. E. Miller, by Curtis & Whitaker, with John Eyres representing the citizens. In this venture four citizens guaranteed to Mr. Everest the sum of $1,300 if he would assume all other risks. This second test-well developed brine at the depth of 615 feet and a salt vein of 20 to 25 feet, and so satisfied the four citizens that they desired to make other tests with Mr. Everest, but, his other engagements not permitting it, he declined, and turned over his interests to the other parties, who began cleaning out the first well, which they found to be plugged with iron obstructions. So difficult an undertaking did this prove that the summer of 1882 was occupied in that work, which proved very expensive. The idea, up to this time, was to demonstrate to the citizens the presence of salt in this locality, seeing that the Warsaw experiments had proved successful.

Work was practically abandoned until the spring of 1883, when, under the auspices of the American Chemical Co., of West Bay City, Mich., a small plant, equal to an output of 100 barrels per day, was started, and the first salt made and shipped in September, amounting to one car load. The process of the above company proving a failure, the works were remodeled in May and June, 1884, and the grainer process adopted. At this juncture, and after the failure of the American Chemical Co., it became necessary for the parties interested in the enterprise to determine whether future business warranted an increase of capital sufficient to enter upon the manufacture of salt on an enlarged scale. To this end it was decided to put down another well, this time at the junction of the R. & P. and D., L. & W. railroads in Pavilion, on the Gilmore farm, three miles south of Le Roy. A well drilled there, to the depth of 840 feet, developed a vein of salt 51 feet thick, a strata of limestone rock being found above and below the salt. This experiment decided the planning for a permanent business, and to locate the future plant at Le Roy, where the railroads offered unusual facilities for shipment. In the fall of 1884 C. F. Prentice, S. C. Wells, A. E. Miller, and N. B. Keeney organized the Le Roy Salt Company, and Mr. Miller was put in full charge of the works. Two grainers were put in with four boilers, so that it resulted in 14,000 barrels of salt being shipped that fall with the aid of 14 workmen.

While this result was fairly satisfactory for a new business, with a small force, it was clearly evident the output could be increased, and good results follow, if an addition could be made to the plant. Grasping the situation in a broad and comprehensive manner additions were made to the buildings, new grainers erected, boilers introduced, and a capital of $30,000 employed, all proving a success. Changes, however, have been made constantly for a more economical production, until, by the energy and enterprise of the company, under the careful superintendence of A. E. Miller, the production has reached 600 barrels per day. The force employed is now 75 hands. Ten boilers of 80 horse-power each furnish the steam and motive power; 11 grainers are in operation night and day; a storage capacity of over 100,000 bushels is crowded to its limits; and a capital of $150,000 is employed. The first block erected was 36x300 feet. The main building is now 136x300 feet, with an addition 40x136 feet. The company has eight wells from which to pump brine. In January, 1889, S. C. Wells disposed of his interest, which is now owned by the other members.
To the members of the Le Roy Salt Co. this community is largely indebted for such an enterprise in their midst, which has brought prosperity to the town, produced a more active business in all lines of trade, caused the building of many new houses, and the improvement of many more. The pay-roll, aggregating $32,000 per year, turns $600 cash into the channels of trade every Monday.

A. E. Miller, superintendent and general manager of the Le Roy Salt Co., was born August 4, 1840, in Chesterfield, Mass., a son of Lawrence and Alzada (Clapp) Miller. Lawrence Miller, a native of Bavaria, and a graduate of Berlin College, came to the United States in 1835, settling in Massachusetts. In 1841 the family came to Byron, where Mr. Miller died in 1847. He had one son, A. E. Miller, and two daughters. A. E. Miller received only a common school education, but began teaching at the early age of 16 years, and so continued until 28 years of age, when he engaged in farming for a few years. In 1872 he began the drug business, associated with T. B. Tuttle, which he carried on until 1884, when he was called upon to take charge of the extensive interests of the Le Roy Salt Co., since which time he has given his whole attention to that industry, and, by his active business management and judgment, has created a business second to none in this locality. Through the respect and confidence of his townsmen Mr. Miller has been placed in offices of trust, having been a member five years, and president three years, of the board of trustees of the village. He married Louise, daughter of John Burden, and they have two children, Maud L. and Jessie B. The family are members of St. Mark's Episcopal Church.

Malt-houses.—The present malt-houses were originally built for car-shops by A. S. Upham, where 100 men were employed. They are stone buildings, 50 feet wide and 300 and 312 feet long. After their use as car-shops was abandoned they were idle for some time, when they came into the possession of Hugel & Co., who fitted them up into malt-houses. They carried on the business for a time, and then sold to Bergdoll & Co. After a time William Huyck & Co. (in 1872) took charge, from whom the present owners, W. D. Matthews & Co., bought in 1878. They employ from October 1st to June 1st about 75 hands, and malt in that time from 600,000 to 700,000 bushels of barley, principally that which is grown in Canada. The superintendent of the business, Edward Roger- son, was born in Yorkshire, Eng., January 27, 1850, where he was educated. He came to Toronto with an uncle, was engaged in the dry goods and hat and cap business for a while, and then became interested in the malting industry. He married Marian R. Matthews, and they have four children: Marian I., Edward A., Vida S., and Wheeler D. His wife died in January, 1888. The family are members of the Methodist Church, and have contributed most liberally to the erection of the new edifice.

The Le Roy roller flour-mills were erected in 1822 by Jacob Le Roy. On his removal to New York Joshua Lathrop continued the manufacture of flour for some time. The present owner, C. F. Prentice, with J. D. Cam-ERON, came into possession of them in 1866. In a few years Mr. Prentice purchased Mr. Cameron's interest. It was a seven-burr mill, but has been changed to a roller-mill, using the Stevens process, and has a capacity of 200 barrels per day, as well as ample facilities for grinding feed. The building is very capacious, being five stories in height, and has a storage capacity of 15,000 bushels.

John Brown's cooper shop is a busy place in the season of fruit. He makes from 5,000 to 25,000 barrels per year. He has been in the business here since 1853, and is now located on Myrtle street.

L. Sellinger's cider and vinegar works are located on Myrtle street. In 1865 the building was used as a brewery, and operated as such until 1883. There are two vaults for storage.

N. B. Keeney & Son.—The present extensive produce business of N. B. Keeney & Son was started in 1864 by N. B. Keeney, who purchased of I. B. Phelps a building on Lake street, near the railroad, designing to do a general produce business. His warehouse being destroyed by fire, in 1874, he rebuilt the following year on a larger scale and with better facilities to accommodate a rapidly increasing trade. In 1888 the firm erected a six story iron-clad building west of the old one, in which they placed all the modern appliances for conducting their business. The are extensive growers and contractors of seeds, principally peas and beans, of which they have over 2,500 acres under contract. They also have branch houses at Pearl Creek, N. Y., Traverse City, Mich., Valley Springs, Dak., and Oshawa, Ont. In their Le Roy establishment are employed about 75 persons, among whom are distributed annually wages to the amount of $10,000, thus greatly benefitting many persons, and advancing the growth and welfare of the place.

N. B. Keeney was born October 4, 1820, one mile west of Le Roy. He was a son of Joseph and Mary (Bishop) Keeney, natives of New London, Conn. Joseph Keeney, son of William, and a farmer, came to Genesee County in the spring of 1815, and in June of the same year he settled on 95 acres one mile west of Le Roy village. He died in 1846, aged 66 years. He and his wife, Mary, were of the 26 constituent members of the First Baptist Church organized at Roanoke in 1816. Mrs. Keeney died in 1877, at the age of 94 years, having been a worthy and consistent member of the Le Roy Baptist Church 61 years. Joseph and Mary Keeney had 10 children, of whom Allen, J. Bishop, Nicholas B., and Mrs. Emma L. Bixby are living. Of N. B. Keeney it can truly be said he is the architect of his own fortunes. Receiving as good education as the schools of his early day offered he commenced work for himself at the age of 18 years, and lived on a farm till 1862, when he moved to Stafford, where he commenced the produce business, and in 1864 removed to Le Roy, where he has since resided. Mr. Keeney married Mary M., daughter of Calvin Ely, of Lancaster, N. Y., by whom he had two children, Calvin N. and Martha J. His wife died in 1877. He afterward married Hortense A. Murdock, who was a daughter of Rawson Harmon, of Wheatland. The family are members of the Baptist Church. Calvin N. Keeney, the present energetic member and manager of the firm of N. B. Keeney & Son, was born in Le Roy, February 6, 1849. He was educated at Le Roy Academy, and at the age of 18 years began assisting his father in his business, and in 1870 was admitted as partner. In 1880 he married Charlotte, daughter of Rev. Dr. A. S. Freeman, of Haverstraw, N. Y., and they have two children, Ruth Mary and Charlotte Freeman.

Shiloh's Family Remedies.—These celebrated proprietary articles are manufactured by S. C. Wells & Co., in a capacious four-story brick building, at No. 1 Church street, in Le Roy village. The arrangement of the building upon the banks of the Oatka River ensures well lighted rooms in every part. The structure is 45x60 feet in size, and is supplied with an elevator and all the modern improvements to aid in simplifying and lessen the labor of the manufacturers. It was built in 1877 and enlarged in 1882, and it is again becoming too small for the firm's constantly increasing business. Being among the first manufacturing interests established here it has contributed largely to the growth of the village, and by extensive advertising in every county in the Union Messrs. Wells & Co. have undoubtedly made the name of Le Roy more familiar to the public than all other local interests combined. The firm is composed of Schuyler C. and George H. Wells.

Decker & Titman's fruit distillery was established in 1872, on the bank of the creek opposite Haskins's mill, on Munson street, with a capacity of 500 bushels of fruit per day. This is the only one in the county. The cider building is 40x50, and the still building 45x50 feet.

John H. Haskins's grist-mill, located on Gilbert street, on the site of an old carding-mill built as early as 1812, is noted for the excellent quality of the flour produced. This property has been in the Haskins family for upwards of 45 years.

M. A. Ladd's carriage and wagon shop was established in 1854. The building is 26x80 feet in size, two stories, and built of stone. Mr. Ladd employs eight or 10 men throughout the year. Thomas-Ladd, father of M. A., came here in 1818 and opened a wagon shop on the opposite side of the street from the present works, and worked at his trade about 40 years.

There have been several fruit evaporators established in Le Roy, but the business is not conducted as extensively as formerly.

Lawson & Houston's new livery stable is located in the rear of the Ross block. It was started January 12, 1890. They keep a first-class establishment.

W. S. Brown, a manufacturer of and dealer in all kinds of wagons and carriages, is located at 60 Main street. He is also an extensive dealer in lime and stone, handling over 85,000 bushels of lime in this vicinity each year. In his carriage establishment about 15 hands are employed. The factory was established in 1857.

The Genesee Steam Laundry, the first and only one in Le Roy, was es-established December 25, 1888, by Edward A. Robbins, at 4 Main street. This is a model establishment, having modern machinery and appliances, and turns out a fine class of work.

Jerome French's broom factory is located on Union street, where he has been in the manufacturing business for over 20 years. He makes about 75 dozen brooms and 50 dozen brush brooms per month. He first began the business at the old Rockwell Hotel, two and one-half miles south of Le Roy, about 1850, and has since been engaged in the broom trade, manufacturing and selling for other people. He also has a farm of 51 acres, and resides at 6 Union street. His first work on brooms was done by hand.

Thomas Gallagher & Son's broom factory, located on Exchange street, was started about 1875. They do a business of about 50 dozen brooms and brushes per week.

Stone quarries.—The stone quarries of Le Roy have been noted for the excellent quality of product, as well as the large quantities shipped. At one time George H. Holmes employed as many as 135 men and 40 stonecutters, shipping 50 car loads per day, fully one-half being used in Buffalo. He has also been a large manufacturer of lime, running two kilns, or about 700 bushels per day. The lime from these kilns is remarkable for its strength. Livingston D. Howell now operates a quarry opened by him in 1873, shipping 25 to 30 carloads per week, the stone being used on all the railroad bridges in this part of the State.

Morris & Strobel's stone quarries are located one-half mile north of Le Roy village, on the Oatka Creek. The firm employs from 50 to 60 hands in getting out building material of blue limestone and stone for railroad bridges.

W. M. Wattles has extensive monumental works on East Main street. They were started about 45 years ago by a Mr. Kenfield. A Mr. Starr afterwards obtained possession, and was succeeded by Starr & Gordon, and afterwards by James & Morrison. About 1864 C. Strobel took charge, and in March, 1889, W. M. Wattles purchased the works. He handles all kinds of marble and granite.

The Le Roy planing mill was established by Chauncey Olmsted, and was the first of the kind in the county. It was burned, then rebuilt, and again destroyed by fire. William Olmsted then owned the mill for a time, and was succeeded by Laramee & Smith. Olmsted & McKenzie built the present mill in 1872. The owners after this were McKenzie, King & Sage, Hartwell & Sage, and King. In 1879 Frost & Murdoch bought it and continued until 1885, when S. H. Murdoch, the present proprietor, obtained possession.

J. T. Warren's foundry and machine shop is situated on Mill street. He established it in 1878, by purchasing the old Catholic Church. This is the only shop of the kind in the village, and the principal business is model and novelty work.

Elias O. Albee was born June 7, 1841, in Norfolk, St. Lawrence County.
He was a son of Isaac and Sophia (Lincoln) Albee, natives of Vermont, who, after marriage, came to St. Lawrence County. Mr Albee was a contractor and builder, a farmer, and a leading member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He reared seven children. In 1852 he came to Wyoming County. His first wife died in 1876. He then married Nancy (Griswold) Dimock, and is now 84 years of age. Elias O. Albee was reared on the farm. When 11 years of age he earned $1.50 per day, and at the age of 16 finished his first house alone. He went to Buffalo and worked three years in Dart Brothers' planing-mill, and later was three years on the Erie Railroad as brakeman. He was foreman for one year for Holmes Brothers, was contractor and builder eight years in Buffalo, lived at Attica and Darien three years each, spent five years in Batavia, and came to Le Roy in 1880, where he has since resided. He married for his first wife Jennie Austin, and for his second wife Anna E., daughter of Francis and Mary (Seymour) Pinder, of English descent, who settled in Le Roy in 1849. Mr. and Mrs. Albee had six children, three of whom are now living. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Rev. James A. Anderson was born in Ohio County, W. Va., March 1, 1854, a son of James and Rhoda (Thomas) Anderson, who were natives of North Ireland and Washington County, respectively. James Anderson came to West Virginia with his parents in 1820, was a farmer, and reared two sons and five daughters. James A., the youngest, was raised on the farm, was educated at the district schools, and at 16 years of age went to the West Alexander Academy, preparing for the Westminster College at New Wilmington, Pa., where he graduated as A. B. in the class of 1877. He then entered the United Presbyterian Seminary at Allegheny, graduating in the class of 1880. He was ordained by the Mansfield Presbytery, November 9, 1880. He taught at Atwood Academy, Armstrong County, Pa. His first charge was at Mansfield, Ohio, where he remained over six years, and was in Beulah, Monroe County, for two years. In May, 1889, he came to Le Roy. December 30, 1879, he married Julia M., daughter of Hon. William M. Francis, of Wilmington, Pa. He has three children, James F., Joseph Junkin, and William.

James Annin was born July 29, 1828, in Le Roy. His parents, Joseph and Melinda (Wells) Annin, were born in New Jersey and Milford, Conn., respectively. Joseph Annin came to Cayuga County, thence to Le Roy, and engaged in the mercantile business, being one of the earliest in the village. They had children as follows: William Le Roy, the first male child born in the town after the name was changed from Bellona to Le Roy, George W., Joseph W., Catharine, James, Charles, and Sarah. Joseph Annin died in 1835, aged 45 years. He was a son of William Annin, who was an early pioneer of Cayuga County, and was one of the earliest pioneer teachers of that section. James Annin, son of Joseph, was reared in Le Roy village. After his mother's death, and at the age of 11 years, he began to earn his own livelihood. He entered a dry goods store at Mount Morris. In the fall of 1840 he returned to Le Roy, and with Russels & Sampson began the trade of jeweler. After three years’ experience he went to Boston and finished his trade. Six years later he returned to Le Roy and opened a store near the Eagle Hotel, where he remained one year, after which he carried on business at various places until the Lampson House was complete, when he entered the room he now occupies. Mr. Annin is the oldest merchant now doing business in Le Roy. He has since beginning business repaired over 65,000 watches, engraved over 4,000 coffin plates, and has made over $80,000. He married, August 30, 1849, Priscilla W., daughter of William Keith, of Boston, by whom he had seven children, viz.: James, Jr., Charles H., of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Elizabeth W., Hattie K., also of Grand Rapids; Frank, of Toledo, O.; Herbert E., of Grand Rapids; and Lillian G. Mrs. Annin died in September, 1879.

Rev. Samuel Bowden, A. M., S. T. D., was born in the city of New York, August 26, 1822. His parents, Andrew Bowden and Rose Witherspoon, were both Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, a race from which our country has derived so many of its most valued and useful citizens. His mother was a relative of John Witherspoon, the well-known signer of the Declaration of Independence. She came to New York city with her parents when she was a young child, and always remained a resident of that city. His father was born January 12, 1786. When 26 years of age he left his father’s house and sailed for America, expecting a prosperous passage; but while he was on the ocean war was declared between Great Britain and the United States. In those days news traveled slowly. As the ship neared the American shores a British war vessel approached, stopped, and boarded the merchantman. The able-bodied men were taken away and pressed into the British service. A few days afterward they were landed at Halifax. Mr. Bowden was offered a good position in the British cavalry, as he was a man of unusual power and a superior horseman.

But it was not his object in leaving his native land to become a British soldier. His mind was made up from the first to become a merchant in the city of New York, and that object he lost not sight of for a moment. At the earliest opportunity he escaped from Halifax, boarded a smuggling boat, with the captain of which he had made the necessary arrangements, crossed the Bay of Fundy, narrowly escaping death by drowning, and landed in Maine, then a part of Massachusetts, and almost entirely a trackless wilderness. Ignorant of the country, with nothing to sustain him but his unflagging trust in God and a stout heart, he started on his long journey. It was nearly all prosecuted on foot, through the most of Maine, Massachusetts, and Connecticut. Yet with all these hardships he used to say, “Within a little over three months after leaving my father’s house I was seated at a communion table, in Dr. McLeod’s church, in the city of New York.” His long journey had almost exhausted his means; still, in about three years, he commenced business as a merchant in the same building where he and his sons prosecuted it
the age of 62, and devoted himself to the care of his invalid wife, and to works of active beneficence. In 1876 came his great sorrow, the death of his wife, after a singularly happy union of 62 years. After her death he lived six years, and died August 17, 1882, at the advanced age of nearly 97 years. To the last he was strong of body, and his mental powers were absolutely unimpaired; with scarcely a day’s illness he quietly closed his eyes and passed within the vail.

Samuel Bowden, the subject of this sketch, was the fifth child in a family of six sons and one daughter. Four of his five brothers still survive. All the family attended private schools in the city, and the sons with one exception went into the father’s business. Samuel Bowden entered Columbia College, N. Y., and graduated in 1840, with the degree of A. B. In 1843 he received the degree of A. M. from his Alma Mater. Meanwhile he had devoted himself to the work of the Christian ministry, and after a four years’ course of theological study, chiefly prosecuted in the city of Allegheny, Pa., he was licensed to preach October 29, 1844. His health having become impaired by so long and constant study, he then spent one year in European travel, and another year in travel through our own country. While he was traveling he was called to the pastorate of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of York, Livgington County, N. Y. This call he accepted, and he was ordained and installed as pastor December 31, 1846. In this pastorate he remained until 1876, when his health again broke down through excessive study and labor. He was obliged again, as in 1844, to obtain relief in travel; after spending some months in Florida and South Carolina he spent the summer among the mountains of Switzerland. Upon his return, not finding his health sufficiently reëstablished, he resigned his pastoral charge. For three or four years he preached occasionally as strength permitted.

In 1882 he removed to Le Roy, for the purpose of educating his dughters in Ingham University. Finding that his health would probably permit the resumption of regular work he has now been for seven years the stated supply of the Tonawanda Valley Presbyterian Church at Johnstown, Wyoming County, making his home, however, in Le Roy.

Mr. Bowden has been twice married, first, to Maria, daughter of James Beattie, of Orange County, N. Y., her surviving children being Charlotte Jane and Margaret I. His first wife died in 1858. In 1864 he married his second wife, Mary E., daughter of John Donnan, of York. She died in 1873, leaving three daughters, Mary R., Elizabeth D., and Emma S.
The trustees of Columbia College, New York, this year conferred on Mr.
Bowden the honorary degree of S. T. D.

D. R. Bacon, an old resident of Le Roy, came here in 1839, and formed a law partnership with the Hon. Seth M. Gates, then member of Congress from this distirct. This partnership was continued through Mr. Gates’s second term in Congress, and until the latter's permanent removal from the village to Warsaw, N. Y. Mr. Bacon was born in Hamilton, Madson County, N. Y., April 19, 1812. His residence here had been preceded by his father, Rufus Bacon, and his brother, L. S. Bacon, in 1831. His father purchased a farm at the west end of the village, adjoining that of Capt. Lent, where he built his home and occupied it as a family mansion until his removal to Rochester in 1850. D. R. Bacon's early education was at Hamilton Academy, where he prepared for college, and was graduated at Union College in 1831. His law studies were pursued in the offices of Hon. Joshua A. Spencer, of Utica, and Judge Philo Gridley, and he was admitted to the bar in 1835. For a brief period after his admission he was engaged in the office of Stephen G. Austin, of Buffalo. In 1836 the N. Y. & E. Railroad Co. was constructing the western division of its road, and Mr. Bacon was employed by the company in obtaining the right of way from Olean to Dunkirk.
In consequence of this employment he removed to Olean, where he remained until, from want of State aid, the work was temporarily suspended, when he removed to and settled in Le Roy. Mr. Bacon married, in 1844, Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Israel Rathbone, of Le Roy, and Lucy Anderson, née Ganson. He was elected secretary of the Genesee Mutual Insurance Co., which he held until his temporary removal to New York city. He also formed a law partnership with James Summerfield. His residence in New York was but for two or three years, when, by a sudden affliction in the family of his brother, L. S.
Bacon, (resulting in the death of his children,) he returned to Le Roy to engage in his brother's extensive stove manufacturing business, in which he became a partner, and resulted in the relinquishment of his law business, which was never afterwards fully resumed. On the removal of his brother to Rochester Mr. Bacon continued the business in company with Harry Backus until its final discontinuance in 1853. His father also removed to Rochester, where he died in 1854, at the age of 74 years, and was buried in Mount Hope Cemetery. Mr. Bacon purchased the homestead, which was destroyed by fire in 1854, and rebuilt by him. He sold it to the late Rufus Palmer, and it is now owned by Gen. Bissell.
Mr. Bacon's present residence is on Trigon Prak, the former residence of Stewart Chamberlin.

In politics Mr. Bacon was an earnest and active supporter, by pen and otherwise, of the Whig party, and of the Republican party from its organization, but was no seeker for political honors. He was appointed postmaster by President Lincoln, which office he held during the war.
Liberal and public spirited, Mr. Bacon is always ready to promote social order and morality, contributing within his means to churches and schools.
His tastes and pursuits are essentially literary, and contributions from his pen in the public press for the past 30 years unfold a style that is concise and vigorous, the result of careful study and preparation. Mr.
Bacon early united with the Episcopal Church in the village, and from his first residence here, except at brief intervals, has been chosen one of its officers, and is at present one of its wardens. He has a family of four sons and one daughter. His eldest son, Walter, has for the last 10 years been a resident of London, Eng., where he is president of one of the tramway railroad companies. Edward is a leading railroad lawyer of New York city, and is the recently elected president of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railroad. His son Lathrop is a stock broker, and John is at the head of the Meriden Britannia Co's house in New York city. His daughter Mary married Oliver Allen, Jr., of the woolen manufacturing firm of O. Allen & Son, of Mumford, N. Y. It is with his daughter that Mr. Bacon and his wife have their residence in Le Roy.

Schuyler C. Wells, for 20 years past numbered among the most successful business men of Genesee County, was born in Poultney, Vt., February 6, 1840. Reared upon his father’s extensive farm he had ample opportunity for developing a naturally ambitious and persevering spirit. From the age of 15 years he took the lead in the management of the farm when not engaged in his studies at Troy Conference Academy, one of the most noted educational institutions of Vermont, which is located in his native town, and where he received a thorough business education. By judicious management of the opportunities afforded him he had accumulated, of his own earnings, when 25 years of age, a sum sufficient to enable him to enter business for himself.

From boyhood up he had always had a natural fondness for drugs and medicines, and only refrained from preparing himself for a physician, not being content with the limited opportunities to make a financial success out of the legitimate fields of the profession. In the fall of 1866 he decided to enter the drug trade at Le Roy, and with that end in view negotiated for the purchase of Medical Hall. Dr. L. S. Hooker, his brother-in-law, then a practicing physician in Wisconsin, was sought, to whom he divulged his plans, the result being a copartnership under the firm name of Hooker & Wells. This partnership existed for three years, during which time Mr. Wells applied himself to the study of medicine, and the building up of their drug trade. His restless and inquiring mind led him to devote his attention closely to the observation of the immediate results of certain formulas in respect to their favorable action upon various diseases that afflict the human system. The unusual success of these formulas ultimately created a great demand for them. During this time Mr. Wells had other projects in view, and was successful in securing the sole right to manufacture and sell “McLea’s Patent Pail Ear” and “Eave Trough Former"—articles of merit and usefulness. Having confidence in the merits of these articles, and believing there was money to be made out of them, he sold out his interest in the drug business, and formed a co-partnership for three years with James P. Kneeland, for their manufacture and sale, under the firm name of Wells & Kneeland. Through his energy and push they built a large factory, and equipped it with steam-power and stamping presses, and built up an extensive business, being compelled to run night and day to fill their orders. Many men lost their heads and judgment over the success of the enterprise, and numerous were the applicants anxious to purchase an interest in the concern. A favorable proposition to purchase Mr. Wells's interest having been made to him, he sold out a two-thirds interest at a handsome profit, after which a stock company was organized, but after it went out of his control the business soon went to pieces. He now again engaged in the drug trade alone, and with increased capital and facilities laid the foundation for his greater success. Taking up his formulas where he left off, two years before, he brought out the several products now known as "Shiloh's Family Remedies," and which, from a small beginning in his own store in 1871, has grown to be the most important and successful business enterprise of the county. In 1873 he sold his interest in the store and devoted his whole attention to the introduction of his popular Remedies, which are now known and sold in every part of the United States, and in many foreign countries.

In 1877, to keep pace with his growing trade, Mr. Wells was obliged to seek enlarged quarters, which resulted in his building the commodious four story brick block on Church street, a few rods below Main street bridge, to which, in 1882, he erected an addition, doubling its capacity, the whole being now occupied by the business of the firm. His phenomenal success stimulated many imitators who sprung up throughout the county like mushrooms, but their feeble breath scarcely disturbed the autumn leaves, and one by one they soon became extinct, with perhaps a single exception. In 1882 he sold to his brother, George H. Wells, a one-third interest in his Shiloh's Family Remedies, and the business is carried on under the firm name of S. C. Wells & Co.

In September, 1865, Mr. Wells married Anna E., daughter of S. P. Hooker, then president of the bank at Poultney, Vt., and a prominent manufacturer there. Their children are Josephine H., Anna E., and Schuyler C., Jr.

In 1880 he purchased "Dreamland," a villa property on the elevation of East Main street, just within the corporate limits of the village. This fine property Mr. Wells has greatly improved, and having bought adjoining lands now has a stock farm of 200 acres. The residence has been remodeled, and is now, with its beautiful surroundings, considered one of the most elegant homes in Genesee County.

Always an active man, and never satisfied unless with business enough to keep two men occupied, Mr. Wells, who had been fond of a horse from boyhood, determined to go into the breeding of fashionable trotters and roadsters for recreation and pleasure. With him to wish is to act, and going to Kentucky he purchased, as his pioneer stallion, "St. Gothard," a son of "George Wilkes," which he brought back to "Dreamland," paying what was considered at that time an extravagant price. To-day no horse in the State stands higher in the estimation of Kentucky breeders than "St. Gothard." The breeding of fashionable horses, and the training incident thereto, demanded barns and buildings of large proportions; hence Mr. Wells built one of the most complete, largest, and commodious stock barns in the State, with room for 125 horses, a fast half mile track, and an eighth-mile track, the latter entirely under cover. His stallions, brood mares, and colts number about 100 head. Dreamland, with its equipments, buildings, and stock, is one of the most complete enterprises of its kind in the United States. He organized the New York State Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, and was elected president of the organization, and served one term.

At the reorganization of Ingham University he was chosen one of the 15 incorporators and trustees. To him more than to any one else is due the magnificent Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he is a trustee, as not only being the largest contributor to it, but also giving much of his time and executive ability, which was of even more importance than his purse. He was one of the original incorporators of the Le Roy Salt Co., going into it as much for the benefit of the village as for personal gain.

Mr. Wells is a very successful man, and there are few whose abilities are as varied. Yet in the prime of life, he is constantly looking for new fields for investment, and finds a real pleasure in work which to the average man would be too exhaustive. His wealth has been accumulated from many counties, and to that extent has enriched this county.

Mr. Wells's grandfather was Noah Wells, a native of Colchester, Conn., who settled in Poultney, Vt., in 1795. He married Lucy Broughton, and their children were Abbie L., Anna R., and Pomeroy. The latter, the father of Schuyler C., was born in Poultney, December 3, 1810, on the Wells farm, where he also died. He married Rebecca Ann Blossom. Four children were born to them, namely: Helen (Mrs. George W. Gibson), of Schenectady, now deceased; Schuyler C.; Adelbert, who was drowned in 1856; and George H., who is the junior member of the present firm of S. C. Wells & Co.

George H. Wells, son of Pomeroy and Rebecca Ann (Blossom) Wells, was born June 12, 1848, in Poultney, Vt., and received his education in the common schools and Linsley Commercial College. At the age of 17 he went to Rutland, Vt., and entered a dry goods store as salesman. Upon reaching his majority he embarked in the flour and grain business at Poultney, which he sold in 1876, and came to Le Roy, where he has since been engaged with his brother S. C. in the manufacture and sale of the celebrated "Shiloh's Remedies," having charge of the correspondence. Mr. Wells is one of the substantial and wealthy citizens of Le Roy. He has a pleasant home, and in his domestic and social relations he is kind and genial. Strangers always find him courteous and pleasant. He is liberal and public-spirited, and a free and cheerful giver to public enterprises that tend to promote the best interests of his community. Mr. Wells has been twice married, first to Alice C., daughter of Robert Bull. She died April 21, 1874, leaving one child, Helen. He married for his second wife Mary B., daughter of John R. and Sophia G. (Blodgett) Anderson, of Le Roy, by whom he has one child, Mary Blossom.

In 1807 Stephen first came to Genesee County and settled on 200 acres four miles southeast of Le Roy village. Here he cleared two acres and erected a cabin, and in March, 1808, purchased this tract for $600. This same year he brought his wife and resided on this farm for the rest of his life. His family consisted of nine children, as follows: Asahel, Daniel, Richard, Emeline, Stephen, Jr., Harry, Harriet, William Rosman, and Eunice, all of whom were born on this farm. He died April 26, 1869. His wife died June 13, 1863. He was a son of Gurden Walkley, of Haddam, Conn., and a soldier in the Revolutionary war. About 1844 he purchased 100 acres one-half mile south of Asbury Church, and in 1866 moved to Le Roy village, where he died February 24, 1887. He reared two sons, Miller M. and Rosman L. The latter received his education in the common schools and Lima Academy, and also spent two years in Genesee College. At the age of 24 he began life for himself, residing in Pavilion until 1884, when he located on the old homestead, which he now owns. He married, October 18, 1865, Mary E., daughter of Benjamin F. and Elizabeth Peck, of Alden, Erie County, and they have one son, Franklin L. Fisher, of Bergen, with whom he remained until 21 years of age, when he engaged in the drug business at Corfu for three years. In October, 1874, he removed to this town. March 19, 1872, he married Genevieve A., daughter of Henry D. Thurston, of Livonia, N. Y. He has had four children, viz.: Ralph T., Fred T., Dean A., and Marion, three of whom survive. Mr. Wilcox has been a resident of this town for the past 15 years. By persistent work and close attention to business he has built up a fine trade. The stock he carries, consisting of drugs, chemicals, trusses, fancy goods, and stationery, is complete and attractive.

The present proprietor of the Wiss House is the widow of John Wiss, who was born in Landau, Bavaria. He came to this country and settled in New York city in 1847, where he carried on business as tailor. In 1856 he came to Batavia, and in 1858 to Le Roy, and opened a hotel on the site of the Lampson House. In 1869 he bought out the proprietor of the Collins House (formerly the Globe and Eagle), and named it the "Wiss House." He died in March, 1873. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Wiss reared a family of seven children, viz.: John, a prominent business man of Batavia, Carrie, Louisa A., Frank, George, Lute, and Joseph. Mrs. Anna K. Wiss was born in Ettelwang, Berne, Germany. She has conducted the prosperous business left by her late husband with a fidelity and attention to its cares that is seldom equalled, and has caused this hostelry to become one of the three well-known hotels of Le Roy.

John Wiss, son of John and Anna (Barr) Wiss, was born in Williamsburg (now Brooklyn), N. Y., January 2, 1852. Receiving his education at Le Roy Academy at the early age of 14 he began clerking in a drug store at Schenectady, where he remained one year, when he was with Smith & Co., of Churchville, for one year, and for seven years was with Foreman & Rider and F. W. Foreman of Le Roy. At his father's death he assumed charge of the Wiss House, and in 1873 he purchased the store of F. W. Foreman, a business of 30 years standing. Mr. Wiss has a fine and elegant stock of goods. He has been chief of the fire department for three years, treasurer of the village for 12 years, is treasurer of the Firemen's Benevolent Association, and one of the vestrymen of St. Mark's Episcopal Church. Many of his descendants ranked among the most influential and prominent men of Massachusetts. One, Moses Wingate, of Haverhill, Mass., was a very prominent Mason, and his 101st birthday was celebrated by the Masonic fraternity October 25, 1869. Henry L. Wingate is self educated, having attended school but little. At the age of 14 he went to sea, being gone about three and one-half years. After an absence of seven years he returned home. He was for a time connected with the Baltimore & Susquehanna Railroad, and in February, 1833, came to New York city, and in October of the same year to Le Roy, where he has since resided. He has followed painting for 60 years. April 13, 1836, he married Mrs. Mary Ferren, who was born in Cazenovia, March 2, 1805, and was a daughter of John and Esther (Clark) Plato, of Batavia. lineal descendant of the John Hancock family. Albert S. received his education in the common schools and Perry Academy. At the age of 18 he went to Mount Vernon, Ia., and spent three years with an uncle. After his return home, in 1859, he began the study of dentistry with Dr. Scraton, of Perry, and in 1862 came to Le Roy, where he has since successfully practiced his profession. His social and genial qualities, for which he is distinguished, have endeared him to all who know him. He married, November 29, 1866, Marietta, daughter of Francis and Caroline (Woodard) Fordham, who were born in Vermont, and had eight children. Francis Fordham was a son of Silas. They were among the very earliest settlers of Genesee County, settling four miles north of Le Roy prior to the War of 1812. Dr. and Mrs. Westlake have one child, Caroline Louise. OAKFIELD.

OAKFIELD.—The primitive history of Oakfield, its town officials, its early improvements and societies, must necessarily be incorporated with Elba, because it was a portion of that town during its settlement, and until the growth of the original Elba had called for a division of its territory, and April 11, 1842, this town was set off from the western part. The name "Oakfield" was given it from the large surface of oak timber and oak openings covering the territory. The TOWN OF OAKFIELD.

The town is in range 2 of towns, which ranges are numbered from the east Transit line, and in township No. 13, numbering from the Pennsylvania line. It is one of the northern tier and lies west of the center of the county. Its surface is quite level, gently undulating, and sloping to the north and west. The soil is a deep sandy loam, with a clay subsoil, and very fertile.

The town is well watered by the Oak Orchard Creek, which flows westerly through the northern part, and by one of its tributaries that flows northerly into it, affording ample power for mills and manufacturing; and pure water is easily obtainable from its many springs and living wells. The Tonawanda Swamp extends across the northern portion, along Oak Orchard Creek, and this is heavily timbered. It is said that the best and richest land of the town will be found here when it is brought into cultivation.

The western part of the town contains one of the finest plaster beds in the State, extending from the west border of the town east two miles, and is half a mile in width. Salt springs, from which much salt was manufactured at an early day, are found near the center of the town. Oakfield is bounded on the north by Barre, Orleans County, west by Alabama, south by Batavia, and east by Elba. A great portion of its area was embraced in the Tonawanda Reservation, as described in the history of the Holland Purchase title, in preceding pages, the title of which was not obtained from the Indians till 1829. It contains 15,379 acres, being six miles north and south, and four east and west.

In this town are Indian mounds and earthworks that have gone into history as the most remarkable and best preserved of any in the State. The best preserved, according to Harper's Magazine, is about half a mile west of Caryville, and is known as the "Old Fort," consisting of a ditch and breastworks, including about 10 acres of land. The ditch is now about six feet in depth, calculating from the top of the embankments, and contains every evidence of artificial grading and engineering skill. In a part of the works, under cultivation, are traced ancient lodges and a supply of broken pottery. The west side of the fort is formed by a ravine, through which flows "Dry Creek." Trees, apparently 300 years old, have grown upon the works, and on the west side are passages with sides built up of stone. A mile to the northeast is "bone fort," which, when the first settlers came, was yet perfect in detail, but scattered fragments of bones only mark the spot now. Rev. Samuel Kirkland in 1788 visited the spot, and says the Senecas called these forts Te-gat-ai-nea-ghgne, or "double-fortified town"—a town with a fort at each end. The several gateway openings, the way dug to the water near the center, the great age of the works as shown by the forest, and other marked evidences lead to the conclusion that this was the citadel of the ancient Senecas, and was proof against invading tribes. These works are upon what is known as the Armstrong farm, and after a few generations will be preserved only in the written history of the white man. An examination of the fort in 1846 verified Rev. Mr. Kirkland's report of 1788, of a "double-fortified town," or a town with a fort at each end. This was at that time on the farm owned by John Smith. There was also one on the farm of Moses True, about one mile northeast from the above fort.

Early settlers.—The settlement of the town was begun in 1801, when Aaron White and Erastus Wolcott came in. Mr. White, while serving as a captain in the War of 1812, was killed at the battle of Black Rock. Gideon Dunham also came in 1801, settled in the oak openings, and gave the name to Dunham's Grove. His son, Col. Shubael Dunham, deceased, has left for record the fact that the road along the Tonawanda Creek, from Batavia to Bush's, thence north to the openings, was cut through in 1801–02. Erastus Wolcott, Peter Rice, and Christopher Ken-yon also came that year, and Peter Lewis, from Vermont, came the next year and settled near Mr. Dunham. Daniel Ayer and Job Babcock settled in 1802, and in 1803 we find the following persons in the town: Hiram Smith, Silas Pratt, William McGrath, George Lathrop, Darius Ayer, Philip Adkins, Lemuel L. Clark, and James Robinson. In 1804 the following settled: Rufus Hastings, Roraback Robinson, Benjamin Chase, Solomon Baker, Samuel Jerome, Sr., and Samuel Jerome, Jr. The following are reported as having settled in 1806: Micajah Green, Caleb Blodgett, Jr., George Hoge, Eldridge Buntley, George and John Harper, Nicholas Bentley, James Crossett, David Woodworth, David Clark, William Parrish, Ezra Thomas, and Caleb Blodgett, Sr.

Elijah Blodgett, originally from Vermont, came in 1807 from Ontario County, and settled at what is now Mechanicsville. He died in 1839, aged 89 years. William McCrillius came in 1810, and George W., John, and Jeremiah H. Gardner in 1811. George Driggs was one of the first who settled on the north line of the Reservation, in 1811, and he cut the Lewiston road from Alabama to Walsworth's tavern. Russell Nobles, John Orr, Mr. Terrill, Othniel Brown, Laurens Armstrong, Harvey Hubbell, and others, of New England, were early settlers. Aaron Brown, also an early settler who served in the War of 1812, came to Oakfield in 1815, from Chili, and was the first to locate in the north part of the town, on road 4, where his son George now lives. Another settler of that year, and one who was also in the War of 1812, was John Underhill. His son Alfred came with him, and is now living on the old place. Isaac Stringham settled at an early day on the Shulitz farm, on road 6. Reuben Norton came from Pennsylvania to Elba, thence to Oakfield, and settled on a farm where Arthur J., a grandson, now lives. David C. Reed came in 1825 and located lots 52 and 53, on road 10, called Temple Hill road, which is owned by Seymour Reed.

The first birth in the town was Calvin Nobles, in 1806, a son of Russell Nobles, who will be remembered by the older residents as the early "fiddler" of the Purchase, and to whose left-handed bowing and scraping many of the pioneers bowed and scraped in the mazes of the dance as he visited from cabin to cabin. He had no competitor. He and his old violin mark the advent of music upon the Holland Purchase. In those times, in sleigh or ox-sled rides, at recreations that followed log-house raisings, logging bees, road cuttings, at Christmas and New Year's frolics, Noble and his fiddle formed an accustomed and necessary part. Gideon Dunham opened the first tavern, and Mr. Davis soon followed in the same business. Oliver Wolcott was also an early tavern-keeper. Christopher Kenyon erected the first mills, in 1811, and Othniel Brown commenced wool-carding and cloth-dressing in 1829. The latter erected a good woolen factory in 1835, which was an important factor of the town for many years. A great portion of the town being included in the Reservation, and the thriving village of Batavia being only a few miles distant, with Elba as the center of the town proper, the opening of a store in this part of the town was not considered practicable; but in 1829, after the sale of the Reservation lands, its settlement followed so rapidly that within a few years this part of the town was fully developed. In 1833 Col. Alfred Cary started the first store at Caryville, now Oakfield postoffice, and for years was successful in business, giving the name to the village, and occupying a prominent position in the county.

The town clerk's office was destroyed by fire June 15, 1866, which swept away the books, records, and papers belonging to the town from its organization to that time; but we here give the first officers as elected: Moses True, supervisor; George Burden, town clerk; William Wolcott, John C. Gardner, John G. Satterlee, assessors; John G. Satterlee, justice; John G. Gardner, Perez Howland, and George E. Martin, commissioners of highways.

The supervisors have served as follows:

Moses True, four years; William Wolcott, seven years; John G. Gardner, two years; Clitus Wolcott, three years; William C. McCrillis, two years; Addison Armstrong, two years; William Wolcott, one year; Parley V. Ingalsbe, three years; Homer D. Waldo, two years; Charles H. Chamberlain, two years; Asa A. Woodruff, three years; William Wolcott, two years; Darius King, two years; Norman Drake, two years; Julius Reed, one year; J. J. Stedman, one year; A. B. Rathbone, two years; C. H. Chamberlain, since 1886.

The following have served as town clerks:

CARY (Oakfield p. o.) was settled as soon as the territory could be severed from the Reservation, and at once became the center of the town. It was named in honor of Col. Alfred Cary, who was an early and enterprising business man. It lies south of the center of the town, six miles northwest of Batavia village, on the Lewiston road, and is a thriving place. The West Shore Railroad has a station here, and as a market for grain and produce Oakfield is noted as one of the best on the line of the road. The village contains 700 inhabitants, who have the best of religious and educational advantages, and the places of business keep pace with the rapid development of the rich territory around. There are four churches (Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian, German, and Episcopal), the Oakfield Seminary, a postoffice, a bank, three dry goods stores, two hardware stores, one foundry, one evaporator and cider-mill, three hotels, one grist-mill, two drug stores, two harness shops, a tailor shop, one furniture store, two barber shops, a grocery store, one jewelry store, a boot and shoe store, three meat markets, one wagon shop, one manufactory of plows and agricultural implements, one lumber yard, one stave and coopering factory, one bank, three firms buying grain, and about 200 dwellings. The name Caryville was changed to Plain Brook in 1837, and soon after called by its present name. The village was incorporated in 1858, under the laws of the State, and August 7th of that year the following were declared the officers of the village by an election at the Olcott House: Andrew Thompson, Virgil C. Calkins, Asa A. Woodruff, Abner C. Dodge, and Seres P. Champlin, trustees; Rice Baldwin, Samuel Fellows, and Horace R. Holt, assessors; Solomon H. Parmalee, clerk; Cyrus Pond, treasurer; Thomas Brown, collector; Dewitt C. Colony, poundmaster; Samuel March, A. A. Woodruff, and S. P. Champlin, inspectors of election. To Oakfield belongs the honor of electing the first Prohibition village president in Western New York, William W. Stevens being elected to that office in March, 1890. The other officers for this year are H. C. Martin, treasurer; James L. Plate, collector; and A. T. Heckroth, A. A. Grinnell, and C. L. Calkins, trustees; A. E. Howland, chief engineer fire department.

EAST OAKFIELD, lying about three miles northeast of Oakfield, contains a postoffice, one store, blacksmith shop, and a feed, saw, and cider-mill.

The first preaching in this town was by Freewill Baptists, and afterwards by the Methodists, about 1830. The services were held in a log school-house, which stood on what is now the green in front of the Seminary.

St. Michael's Episcopal Church was organized June 14, 1858, by Rev. G. C. V. Eastman, who was also the first rector. There were 25 members at the organization. After struggling along for years without any suitable place for worship efforts were made which resulted in the building of a neat and commodious church edifice, which was consecrated in 1885 by Rt. Rev. Bishop Coxe. The structure is of wood, of churchly design, and is a credit to the energies of so small a parish. There are at present 48 communicants, with 50 scholars, seven teachers, and three officers in the Sunday-school. Rev. Curtis C. Gove, A. M., is the present rector. He came from North Adams, Mass. The house of worship and grounds cost $6,000.

The Oakfield Presbyterian Church was organized in December, 1833, by Rev. C. Fitch. In 1837 there were 87 members, and Rev. E. H. Stratton was the pastor. The first church edifice was a frame building put up in 1843. In 1848 there were 98 members, and H. Gregg was pastor. There are now 71 members in the society, presided over by Rev. E. N. Manley. The value of the church and grounds is estimated at $6,000. The edifice will comfortably seat 300 persons, and there are 121 members belonging to the Sunday-school.

The Oakfield Methodist Episcopal Church was organized by Rev. Hiram May about 1832, with six members. A church was built in 1839, of wood, and cost $1,600. This society was at first served by ministers from adjoining towns. Their present pastor is Rev. E. C. Dodge. The property of the society is valued at $5,000. The edifice will seat 250 persons, and the Sunday-school has about 125 members.

The German Methodist Episcopal Church was organized November 1, 1886, by Carl Stocker, Lewis Shultz, Carl Bloom, John Harloff, Gottleib Wayback, and Fred Harloff, with about 30 members. Rev. Carl Stocker was the pastor. A church was erected, of wood, in 1886, funds to the amount of $1,800 being procured by general subscription. There are now 40 members, and Rev. D. Pape is pastor. L. Meyers is superintendent of the Sabbath-school.

Cary Collegiate Seminary is pleasantly situated in Oakfield, and has ever been favored with a most able and efficient faculty, which has raised the institution to an important rank among the educational institutions of the State. It was founded in 1840, mainly through the liberality and efforts of Col. Alfred Cary, after whom it was named. This gentleman afterwards endowed the institution with $20,000, which, well invested, is a partial support. The buildings were erected during the next three years, and in 1845 the first meeting was held. The school is under the supervision of the Regents of the University of the State, and the property is in the hands of a board of trustees, of which the bishop of Western New York is the head. The first principal was W. Reynolds, with Miss E. A.
Richard as assistant. In 1865 Rev. James R. Coe assumed control of the school, and continued until his death, in March, 1874, leaving a perpetual monument to his name. The school was very successful under the administration of Mr. Coe, and too much credit cannot be accorded to him for his efforts put forth in the interest of the institution. This seminary has for its object the preparation of the young for the duties and business of life, under the influence of Christian principles. The best men of the country have been, and are, among its trustees and patrons. It is now under the auspices of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Its buildings and grounds are ample, and its library and philosophical laboratory adequate to the high standing of the school. It is properly classified according to Regents' examinations, and in every manner is its high educational and moral standard kept up. The present trustees are Rt. Rev. A. Cleveland Coxe, D. D., LL. D., president; Abner C. Dodge, vice-president; Arthur B. Rathbone, secretary; Henry Caple, treasurer; Gad B. Worthington, N. S. Godfrey, Hon. Robert W. Nichol, W. C. Simpson, J. L. Macomber, W. C. Dunlap, Dr. Albert P. Jackson, I. J. Stedman, H. Halsey, T. L. Nichol, Rev. W. A. Hitchcock, D. D., John W. Heal, W. D. Olmsted, Rev. A. J. Warner, E. T. Chamberlin, Hon. Safford E. North, F. E. Wright, Rev. Charles F. J. Wrigley, Hon. Herbert P. Bissell, and Rev. Pierre Cushing. The instructors are Rev. Curtis C. Gove, A. M., head-master; Miss Anna M. Thompson, M. A., preceptress; Miss Mary G. Armstrong, assistant; and Miss S. A. Buell, instrumental music.

Newspapers—About two years since a Mr. Van Hoesen started an eight-page story and general newspaper called the Fireside Journal, and continued it for nearly two years. Industries.—The completion of the West Shore Railroad running through the towns in the northern part of Genesee County caused a material increase and growth of population in the villages through which it passed, and Oakfield has been more benefitted than all others. The cooperage business is a lively one in the fruit season, and E. S. Thayer, whose shop is located on South street, manages to supply the Tarba's mill, in the northeast part of the town, on road 3, was built in 1886, and burned April 17, 1889, and immediately rebuilt. In 61 days (or June 18th) from the time it was burned the shop was in running order. There are about 60 hands employed, who make 6,000 sets of barrel heads per month. There are over 1,000 acres in the town covered with a very superior plaster stone, from which to get a supply.

PAVILION was formed from Covington, Wyoming County, May 19, 1841. A portion from the townships of Le Roy and Stafford was annexed March 22, 1842. The surface is undulating in the north, and in the south hilly. The principal stream is the Oatka Creek, which flows north through the center of the town. The town received its name from Harmon J. Betts in 1825. He was a native of Saratoga, and gave the name from the hotel of the same name in that village. Joseph Ellicott surveyed the first road across the present town of Pavilion, extending in a straight line from Batavia village to Leicester, through the village of Pavilion. About the time Mr. Ellicott made this survey the State surveyed a road from Canawaugus, Indian village, on the Genesee River, at Avon, extending in a straight line to Buffalo, called the new State road; that road centers the town of Pavilion, and passes through what was known as Bradley’s Corners, near Pavilion Center.

The following is a list of the early settlers, and is as accurate as can be given at the present time:

In further explanation of the preceding list it must be borne in mind that the settlement of Le Roy and the north half of Pavilion are coincident, and are so connected that our readers will find much valuable material in the sketch of that town (kindly furnished us by D. R. Bacon).
Hence we refer them to that town for matters pertaining to Pavilion of the portion taken from Le Roy in 1842.

Former historians give the name of Peter Crosman, who came in 1809, as being the first settler in the town. Our researches enable us to mention settlements as having been made earlier, viz.: Isaac D. Lyon in 1805, the Lawrence family in 1807, Richard Walkley and the McWethys in 1809, and quite a family of Terrills the same year. We wish here to call attention to the fact that our information is obtained from a personal interview of every resident of the town, a very large proportion of whom are descendants of the first settlers, and whose sources of information ought to be regarded with some degree of confidence, even though some of them are anxious to anticipate, by a year or so, the date of priority of settlement. These earliest pioneers all endured hardships in their journey to the Genesee country, and a continuance of them for many years after, and generally the experience of one is that of all. Therefore it is not necessary to enter into detail the story of each as it has been told to us from their sons and daughters. There were some whose names are difficult to obtain, who made complete failures, and yet some credit is due even them. Of them it can be truly said: “Unreliable and incomplete is any history that fails to notice that numerous, laborious, and unfortunate portion of the population who took up land, cleared and fenced it, failed to perfect their title, and after years of agonizing labor sold for what they could get, or were closed out by the sheriff without getting anything. Farms cleared up and partly paid for by those who were obliged to leave them make up a melancholy and voluminous unwritten record. Frequently the buildings and improvements cost more than the land sold for, to say nothing about the money advanced, which was about one-third the original price.”

A brief sketch here of some of the early happenings will be found interesting. Ezra Terrill, who died in 1885, aged 97 years, came from Vermont in 1809, and first went to Byron with Roswell Newell. He later returned to the East and induced his father, Zebulon, to accompany him to the Genesee country. He purchased three-quarters of a section—360 acres—near Union Corners, and built a log house near Edward Cheney’s present residence. He married Roxanna Elliott, who made flax with which to purchase glass for windows. His father was a shoemaker. Daniel Lord came in 1811. He was a tailor, and with his wife made clothing for the soldiers who were in the War of 1812. Elijah, father of Ezra Cheney, and who lived where Mr. Hazleton now resides, was a prisoner of the War of 1812. He was taken to Halifax, discharged at Boston, and begged his way home to his family. Capt. James Sprague, one of the prominent business men and farmers of Covington, was born in 1766, near New London, Conn. In 1798 he married Abiah Carpenter, and they lived in Massachusetts, where all their children were born. In 1812 they moved to Covington, and he built a saw-mill on the Oatka in company with Aaron Spaulding, it being the first saw mill in the neighborhood, and a very great convenience to the new settlers. Soon afterwards he erected a carding and cloth-dressing establishment. In 1826 he built the grist-mill now owned by William Crosman. He subsequently established his sons in business in Pavilion—James in cloth-dressing, and William and Daniel as merchants, while Paul took charge of the grist-mill, and Erastus of the farm of 400 acres. William, on retiring from mercantile business, practiced medicine successfully (see chapter on the Medical Society of the county). Capt. Sprague was respected as a man of energy and integrity, and of much public spirit. For a long time he stood first in wealth and enterprise in Covington. He died in Pavilion in 1849 John Nobles, who came in 1817, married Mary, daughter of Capt. Sprague, and attended to his mill. He lived to be over 84 years old. Leman Bradley, of Vermont, came on foot in 1811, with Calvin Lewis, and located one mile northeast of Pavilion on 50 acres. He served in the War of 1812, returned to Vermont, and with his family came about 1816 and located where William S. Bradley now lives. He was a commander of militia. His father, John F. M. Bradley, of Connecticut, was born in 1769, and died in 1868, at the age of 100 years.

Amasa Allen, son of a Revolutionary soldier, married Lucinda Loomis, and settled in 1811 near where Samuel Phelps lived. Their log cabin was covered with elm bark, a blanket was used for a door, and hewed planks of basswood used for a floor. He died in 1834. His sons were Amasa, Chauncey, and Capt. Issachar, the latter a captain of militia. Shoes were a scarce commodity when the Allen boys went to school to Rodema Judd, and they were fortunate enough one winter to kill a deer that could not travel, by reason of the crust upon the snow, and with the skin they made themselves comfortable moccasins, so they were enabled to defy the cold of that winter.

Dr. Daniel White, the first physician in what was Covington, was a surgeon in the War of 1812. He was very skillful, had a large practice over what is now Pavilion, gave calomel and whisky freely as the fashion was, and was more companionable than constant as his wife believed. He was a leading member and champion of the Masonic order. While leading a grand Masonic procession on "St. John's day," at Pavilion, arrayed in royal robes, his wife, who had more temper than self-respect, and who frequently gave her husband the benefit of it, brought up the rear, clad in the most slatternly garments imaginable. Their daughter Volina was the first child born in the town.

During the War of 1812 all able-bodied men were summoned to the frontier, leaving but few male persons at home, who were not all able to get crops in and gathered, so that it devolved upon the women to give their attention to much necessary farming in order to procure the means of sustenance. Planting bees were quite common, as by united effort only were they enabled to get their planting done and crops gathered. We were told that when an engagement was taking place at Buffalo, or Fort Erie, every peal of cannon could be heard, and it was common for dishes to be jarred by the concussions. The cold year of 1816 proved a hard one for the farmers of that day, as but little sustenance could be raised for the pioneers.

Money was not to be had; all kinds of produce was high, and many derived their food from herbage and from roots found in the forest.
Some of the settlers (in the Scotch settlement, east), having been longer in the new country, and having raised more crops, were able to supply the necessities of their less fortunate neighbors, and they came to their relief.

"In those days there were no pianos nor guitars in the county, and the girls made music upon the spinning wheel, and the notes practiced upon were flax and wool. The flax was to be spun into threads of a certain number, and in the evening of a party each girl was to bring her skein of thread. Those who lived on the direct road came in wagons. Others lived in the woods, where some of the prettiest girls were found, and they mounted a horse behind a young man, with a blanket to sit upon, and were dressed in their every-day apparel, with woolen stockings and strong shoes on their feet. They would dash through the woods on some trail, through brush, and over every obstacle in their way, carrying their ball dress and skein of thread in a bundle in their hand. A few minutes at the toilet put them in a condition for the dance. Others, living a mile or so away, thought it no great task to come on foot. In the ball room their rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, and blooming health gave pleasure to all who beheld them. The supper was prepared by the hardy pioneer's wife (and well done, too) from the products of the farm, and with the addition of tea, coffee, sugar, and some light wine, was all that was thought necessary. As no barn could hold the horses they were picketed around the wagons and fences. As daylight appeared the girls would duff their ball dresses, don the homespun, and return to their homes in the woods."

The early school teachers were Laura Terrill, Louis Moon, Daniel Walker, Mary Hill (who married Leman Bradley), and Rodema Judd.
The latter taught school at Union Corners, and one of her scholars says he has seen her many a time eat a dinner of pudding and milk brought in a pail from home. The first death was that of a child of Reuben Burnham in 1812.

Seth Smith opened the first tavern, on the Leicester road, at Pavilion, in 1815, and Horace Bates the first store at the same place in 1817.
Miller Mills had a tavern at Union Corners quite early. Bial Lathrop had the first mill, in 1816, on the Oatka. Elliott Terrill was an early shoemaker, and one Barrett had a tannery and shoe shop at Union Cor-ers. A blacksmith shop was built in Pavilion in 1820, by a Mr. Whitaker, where Mr. Buckingham now holds forth. In 1832 Stephen J.
Branch made chairs.

The pioneers very early gave attention to religious matters, and when it was announced that a meeting would be held at some school-house or the cabin of a settler the people would gather from miles around to give thanks for their protection amidst all the dangers incident to the new settlement. Elder Leonard Anson was probably the first one who held ser-
ing 400 persons. The society at present has about 126 members, with Rev. W. T. Walton, of London, Eng., pastor. The church property is valued at $4,000. The Sunday school, which is presided over by Darius Covell, has about 100 members. Rev. H. B. Ewell, one of the pastors of this church, was born in Middlebury in 1811, and preached in Pavilion from 1838 until his death in 1884. The cemetery around the church is very old, the first interment, that of Peter Crosman, being made in 1812.

About 1830 a meeting-house was built near the brick school-house and used by the Methodists, but as early as 1810 the Genesee Conference sent its itinerants all through Genesee County, and meetings were held by its missionaries. The preachers were zealous, self denying, and often illiterate, but were never allowed to read their sermons. Single men were allowed $80 per year, and their board cost them nothing, as they were welcome comers. A large share of the settlers were Methodists. Among the preachers who came were Elders Millard, Church, Anson, Badger, Segar, Story, May, Hamilton, Davis, Wait, and Comfort.

The First Methodist Episcopal Church of Pavilion was formed in connection with one at Moscow, Livingston County, N. Y., in connection with the Covington Methodist Episcopal Church, and moved from Covington to Pavilion in 1840, and which is a part of the history of the same. There are now 95 members belonging to the society, presided over by Rev. George H. Van Vradenburg. There are also about 125 members in the Sunday-school. The valuation of the church property is $6,000.

The First Universalist Society of Pavilion was organized October 10, 1831, by James Sprague, who was chosen moderator, and Elijah Olmsted. There were 38 members that composed the first meeting. Rev. L. L. Sadler was the first minister. The present church was erected in 1832, at a cost of $2,100. Capt. James Sprague, Jr., was the leading man of the society in its early days, and foremost in its support. Some of its ministers have been Alfred Peck in 1834, A. Kelsey in 1840, J. Davy, J. S. Brown, N. M. Fisk, Orville Brayton, Charles Cravens, Charles Dutton, and M. D. Shumway. The society is not increasing in numbers, and at present they have no settled minister, but sometimes are supplied from Le Roy. The cemetery adjacent to the Universalist Church was the first used as such in the town, in 1812.

There is a very prosperous, but small, community of Catholics at Pavilion, under the charge of an energetic and much beloved priest, Rev. Father T. B. Milde.

We find that Asbury Church was built in 1832 at Union Corners, and cost $1,500. Rev. Hiram May was on this circuit, and was very active in obtaining funds for its erection and completion. It was used by the Methodists until 1876, when the Free Methodists undertook to continue meetings, but without success. Isaac Walker was one of the trustees, and meetings were held at his house before the erection of the church.
A union church was built at Pavilion Center at an early day, and was used by all sects. It is now in use as a town hall.

Clarissa Starr, a relative of Noah Starr, has the credit of starting the first Sunday-school organized at Pavilion while it was a part of Covington. She was assisted by Captain Betts, who was a good singer.

W. Olmsted, and to Mr. Bailey again in 1843, who built a stone mill in 1848. In 1879 George Gaugel bought the concern. The present proprietor is Frank Gaugel. A saw-mill has also been maintained at the same place, and a heading-mill is now operated there.

The Pavilion grist and saw-mill was erected by Henry Chilson in December, 1888. It is run by steam, and has a capacity of 300 bushels of grain per day. It is located at the depot of the R. & P. Railroad.

The present warehouse was built by John C. Doty, who uses it for the produce and grain trade. Dr. William B. Sprague had previously built two warehouses on the spot, but they were destroyed by fire. He also engaged in the evaporation of apples where Mr. Trescott has his present spacious buildings.

B. F. Trescott, in addition to his evaporator, is the proprietor of a fruit farm of 28 acres. He has seven acres of Niagara grapes, besides many acres in raspberries, and annually raises about 1,200 bushels of a superior variety of pop-corn on about 12 acres of ground, keeping six or more hands busy. He came from Livingston County, has built a nice home in the village, on South Lake street, and is one of the most energetic and active citizens. Mr. Crosby also has a factory.

Levi had six children, Emery, Sarah Moore, Mary Coe, Daniel, Nancy Moore, and John. The Wards are of English origin. John Ward received a common school education, and married, March 29, 1835, Mercy, daughter of Cyril Shumway, who was one of the first settlers, about 1815. They had eight children, viz.: Hannah Hutchinson, Nancy Duguid, George, Henry, Elizabeth, Frank, Emma, and William S.

PEMBROKE.

PEMBROKE was formed from Batavia, June 8, 1812. It is the central town on the west border of the county, and is bounded on the north by Alabama, east by Batavia, south by Darien, and west by Erie County. Its surface is gently undulating. The principal streams are the Tonawanda and Murder creeks. The former flows through the northeast corner, and the latter through the south and southwest part. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. The Tonawanda Indian Reservation occupies a portion of the north part of the town.

The names of nearly all of the early settlers are given in the sketch of Darien, to which we call the attention of our readers. The first settlement was made by David Goss in 1804, who located where Mr. Ellinwood now resides, and erected a dwelling which he used for a tavern. Samuel Carr settled at Richville in 1808, and also kept a tavern. He built the first grist and saw-mills. John Barr in 1812 kept a store at the same place. John Long and his father, Dr. David, settled in 1808, at what is now Corfu, and from their settlement the place was for a time called Long's Corners. John Murray was an early inn-keeper, in 1811. The oldest house in Corfu is that erected by Jonas Kinne, who came in 1812 and soon built a roomy two-story house, and opened it to the public as "Kinne tavern." He died in 1822, and his widow kept it many years after. It was headquarters for town meetings, elections, and trainings. The first school teacher was Anna Horton, in 1811. The first marriage was that of Ansel Hastings and Polly Long, in 1812.

Among the persons who were former residents of Pembroke may be mentioned Calvin Cummings, who came to Bushville in 1816. His son John was a shoemaker. George Dennison was a farmer and cooper. In 1847 he had in his employ 25 hands. In 1868 he bought a mill and built another shop, doing an extensive business. Reuben Millett came about 1827, located at East Pembroke, conducted a wool-carding and cloth-dressing-mill, and soon was proprietor of the hotel that was burned in 1854. He was station agent from 1853 until his death in 1883. Burnham Barber came in 1829, and lived here about 40 years. He was a carpenter, millwright, and farmer.

The villages in the town are Corfu, Indian Falls, Richville, East Pembroke, and Mogadore, or North Pembroke.
CORFU (p. o.) was incorporated May 1, 1868. The first board of trustees were H. P. Porter, president, Daniel Carter, R. W. Kinne, E. W. Croft, and George Newell. A. Billington was the first clerk, and N. Read, treasurer. The present officers are Dwight Dimock, president, Ira S. Mann, William Crawford, M. Doyle, and Lester Webb. J. W. Safford is clerk, and A. J. Smith, treasurer. There are about 100 houses within the corporation, and a population of 450. The village sprang into existence by the building of the Central Railroad. Corfu contains many new modern built houses, and puts on an air of thrift not often seen in country villages. The main industry is the propagation of cut flowers for the Buffalo and Rochester markets, there being three large greenhouses doing an immense business in this line. One, that of T. A. & L. Webb, is devoted exclusively to carnations, of which they have nearly 10,000 plants, in two houses, 21 feet wide by 50 feet long, with a smaller house 18x50. E. M. Giddings and Mrs. Charles Tyrrell are also engaged in the business of propagating cut flowers.

George and Henry Porter, Seloy Kidder, and Alanson Fisher were early merchants. Among the physicians who have practiced in Corfu may be mentioned Dr. Rumsey, from Bethany, 30 years ago; Dr. Sullings and Dr. McPherson, who were here four years; Dr. Fuller, who went to Buffalo; Dr. Hinman, a pupil of Dr. Hutchins, of Batavia, who is now in Michigan; and Dr. Scott, who was here four years, and returned to Medina. The first minister in Pembroke was the Rev. Joshua Spencer, a Congregationalist, who organized the first church in the town in 1810, at Corfu, or Long’s Corners.

The First Presbyterian Church of Pembroke was organized in 1817, by Rev. Hugh Wallis, who moved into town in 1816 with his family, and resided here for many years. He acted as general missionary on the Holland Purchase. In 1825 there were 25 members, and F. B. Reed acted as stated supply. The Rev. L. B. Sullivan came about the year 1828. In 1830 there were 42 members. In 1831 a wood building was erected, capable of seating 100 persons. In 1833 John Sherer was the minister in charge, when Rev. A. C. Page succeeded him, and the society consisted of 161 members. He had charge until 1842. S. C. Brown succeeded him in 1845, and in 1846 there were 114 members. Rev. D. Chichester was the next minister. Others followed, and the church is still prosperous. The present number of members is about 100, under the pastoral charge of Rev. John McK. Brayton. The present house will seat 300, and cost $4,000.

The First Methodist Protestant Church of Pembroke, located in Corfu, was organized in 1845, by Rev. A. C. Paine, M. D., with 15 members. In 1853 they built a brick edifice, which is still in use, and which was repaired and renovated in 1889 at a cost of $200. At present there are 60 members, and Rev. W. T. Edds is the pastor in charge. The original cost of the edifice was $3,000, but it now has a valuation of $4,000, and will seat about 175 persons. The members of the Sunday-school number about 80.
St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church of Corfu.—Services were begun in May, 1876, by the Rev. Jay Cooke, and an interest was developed such as warranted a church being erected, the corner-stone of which was laid June 14, 1880. There are now about 35 communicants, and Rev. A. A. Brockway is the pastor. The church cost $3,000, and will seat 125 persons. The members of St. James's Church of Batavia first started a mission at this place.

All Souls' Union Church of Corfu was organized in July, 1881, by C. C. Richardson, with about 27 members, and he was its first pastor. The same year a building was erected at a cost of $4,000, which will seat 200 persons.

In February, 1819, 20 persons, residents of Alexander and Pembroke, associated themselves as an organization to keep and maintain a public library. They met at the house of Eben North, and called the association the "Franklin Library." Perhaps as an indirect result of this movement the formation of the "Corfu Ladies' Library" may be due. Such a society was organized October 31, 1872, and has been in active operation since. The officers consist of a president, secretary, treasurer, and librarian. An admission fee of $1 is charged, with yearly dues of 60 cents, and by the aid of entertainments the funds of the society are augmented so as to keep up a new supply of books.

The D. W. Kinne Post, No. 635, G. A. R., was organized September 10, 1888, and was named in honor of Daniel W. Kinne, son of Royal, who was killed near Petersburg, Va. The post meets in Good Templars Hall. The citizens presented the order on Decoration Day, 1889, with an elegant silk flag.

Corfu Lodge, No. 120, was organized in 1878. There are at present 17 members. The officers are Dwight Dimock, M. W.; A. K. Carrier, O.; W. D. Edwards, financial secretary; J. W. Safford, recording secretary; T. A. Webb, recorder; and A. K. Carrier, trustee for three years.

The cornet band of Corfu was formed in September, 1886, with 14 pieces W. H. Nehrbos is leader, and H. M. Smith is secretary.

Corfu Grange, No. 142, P. of H., has for its master George W. Thomas, and C. D. Silliman is secretary.

Evergreen Hill Cemetery of Corfu.—About 32 years ago interments were first made in the plat of ground lying north of the village of Corfu. In January, 1878, a movement was agitated towards incorporating a cemetery, which resulted in an organization being formed through the efforts of the citizens, and in February, 1878, the Evergreen Hill Cemetery was started with nine trustees, viz.: James Tyrrell, H. P. Porter, Dr. F. W. Crane, Charles Griffith, E. A. Brown, N. Hartshorn, R. W. Kinne, John Lincoln, and James A. Harrown. The grounds comprise three acres and form a beautiful adjunct to the surrounding country.

Church street steam-mills of Corfu, Henry W. Francis, proprietor, are located on Church street, and are furnished with one run of stones for grinding meal and provender, a set of reduction rollers for making graham, and a bolt for sifting meal. The machinery is run by a 15-horse-power engine, and turns out 250 bushels of feed and meal and eight barrels of graham in 10 hours. Mr. Francis does custom work, and deals in flour, feed, and grain.

The Corfu roller-mills are located near the depot, on the New York Central Railroad. The power is supplied by a 50-horse-power steam engine. The mills have two runs of stones, a seven-break roller flouring-mill, and one roller-mill for grinding provender. The proprietor, Warren Gorton, turns out only work of the best quality. The flour mills have a capacity of grinding 50 barrels per day. Mr. Gorton deals in grain, flour, and feed, and does custom grinding.

Richville, a small village in the western part of the town, was named in honor of a prominent business man, C. B. Rich. He was a clerk for Kimberly and Trumbull Cary, of Batavia, who started him in business under the name of C. B. Rich & Co. The firm dissolved in 1832. In early days Benjamin Blodgett was a hotel-keeper at Richville. One evening an extra coach stopped at his door, and a lady with servant maids alighted and entered the house. The lady directed the maids to inspect the house and see if it was fit for her to stop in. After doing so they reported "all right"; and her ladyship directed one of the maids to instruct the driver to put up his horses, as they would stop all night. Mr. Blodgett, who had been nervous regarding the proceedings, which he considered an imputation upon his care of the house, here broke in with "No, you won't, madam." "Why not?" said the lady. "Because I own this house." "Do you know who you are talking to?" said she; "I am the Countess of Sligo, and I desire to stop here through the night." "Well, madam," gruffly replied Mr. Blodgett, "I am the Earl of Pembroke, and you can't stay." That settled it and she went on, and the hotel was often referred to as "Earl of Pembroke's castle." Mr. Blodgett was at one time the editor of the Batavia Spirit of the Times. His "inn" was a high-toned house—the "Astor" House of Western New York. He charged 50 cents for a meal, even in early times, but they were worth it. Ten or a dozen stages passed his house daily, but the advent of the railroad made a great change in the tavern business.

The Genesee roller-mills (Messrs. Lee & Garrett, proprietors) are located in Richville, on Murder Creek, and are run by water with steam as auxiliary. Their flouring machinery is now the best and latest improved, and the mills have a capacity of 40 barrels of flour per day. Their buckwheat flour is unsurpassed and has a wide celebrity. They are doing a wholesale and retail business, and their local trade is very extensive. They are dealers in flour, feed, and grain, and do custom grinding and exchanging.

The Church of the Disciples of Christ was organized at Richville by J. C. Goodrich in 1867. There were at first 75 members, and W. H. Rogers was the first pastor. The nucleus of this church was a small one at Newstead, Erie County, where Mr. Goodrich held services. In 1868 they erected a house of worship, of wood, which they still own, and which is valued at $3,500. They now have 110 members, with J. C. Goodrich as pastor. The Sunday-school has about 125 teachers and scholars.

Indian Falls is a post village located in the north part of Pembroke, on Tonawanda Creek, and has two grist-mills, several stores and churches, an hotel, and a population of about 250.

The model roller-mills of Indian Falls were built by the present proprietors, Gilmore & Co., in 1879. They are located on Tonawanda Creek, which affords an ample power, with a head of 41 feet. The mills are furnished with a full set of rolls, of the Stevens patent, manufactured by J. T. Noyes, of Buffalo, and have a capacity of turning out 50 barrels of flour every 24 hours. They also do custom grinding, and are wholesale and retail dealers in flour, feed, and grain. In connection with the roller-mills the company owns and operates a plaster-mill, which has a capacity of one ton per hour.

Indian Falls grist and flouring-mill, D. K. Chaddock, of Batavia, proprietor, is located about one-quarter of a mile above the falls on Tonawanda Creek. The mills are furnished with four runs of stones, and have a capacity of 80 barrels of flour per day. The proprietor does custom work; and deals in flour, feed, and grain.

Pastor John Siegrist, of the Evangelical Association, was the means of starting a church at Indian Falls in 1865, with 16 members. In 1866 they built a house of worship costing $1,100. A. Getser is the present pastor, and the membership is 40, with about 40 persons in the Sunday-school. Their property has a valuation of $1,500.

In 1868 the Rev. D. M. L Rollin, of the Freewill Baptist denomination, organized a church with 11 members. They built a church edifice in 1877, of wood, which cost $2,000, and capable of seating 250 persons. Rev. W. W. Holt is the minister in charge.

There is also a Methodist Church at Indian Falls.

East Pembroke has a population of about 300 inhabitants. It is located on Tonawanda Creek, and on the Batavia and Tonawanda branch of the N. Y. C. & H. R. Railroad, and has three churches, a seminary, an hotel, a grist-mill, saw mill, stave and heading-mill, a wool-carding-mill, and a cheese factory.

The Batavia and Pembroke Baptist Church was organized at East Pembroke, February 18, 1826. The following were the constituent members: Benjamin Wells, Daniel McCracken, Chauncy Wolcott, William Upton, Mary A. McCracken, Lydia Wolcott, and Sally Harrington. Benjamin Wells was moderator. Previous to this organization meetings were held in private houses and school-houses. Elder Amos Lampson was the first pastor. They built a frame church in 1840, and in 1867 erected a brick building costing $7,000, and capable of seating 400 persons. They have a membership of 70, with about 138 in the Sunday-school. Rev. J. M. Derby is the pastor.

The Presbyterian Church of Pembroke and Batavia was organized
December 24, 1854, by Rev. William Lusk, of Batavia. Daniel C. Houghton was the first pastor, and the number of members was 22. The same year they erected a building, of wood, costing $5,000, and capable of seating 280 persons. They now have an edifice valued at $6,000 and a membership of 100, with Rev. Theron L. Waldo in charge. There are 140 members in the Sabbath-school.

St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church at East Pembroke was organized by Father Cunningham in 1868. The church is increasing in numbers. They now have 200 members under the charge of Rev. T. H. Barrett, and expect to build a new edifice this year.

The East Pembroke Rural Seminary is the result of the forethought of enterprising citizens of the village, and is a credit to the originators of the enterprise. It was formed in 1856, Rev. Mr. Horton, a Presbyterian minister, generously donating land for the purpose, the fee in the same being held by trustees so long as used for school purposes. The institution has been exceedingly prosperous in years gone by; but, like all other rural educational institutions, is affected by the larger schools and colleges that have been endowed. The trustees, with a few of the more energetic citizens, raised money enough lately to thoroughly repair the building, and invited Miss Thrall, of Batavia, to occupy the same. The school is now in a flourishing condition, having 30 scholars.

Owen Lodge, No. 432, I. O. O. F.—Pembroke Lodge, No. 353, I. O. O. F., was instituted July 12, 1850, and after a hard struggle surrendered its charter in 1859. The First Christian Church of Pembroke, located at North Pembroke, was organized June 30, 1849, by Rev. Joseph Weeks, with 15 members. They built a house of worship in 1850, which was remodeled and enlarged in 1888. They now have 75 members, with Rev. Warren Vreeland as pastor. Their property has a valuation of $2,500.

The Excelsior flouring-mills of North Pembroke. Frank Ladd, proprietor, are located on Tonawanda Creek, which furnishes a sufficient power, and on the site of a mill built by Holland Earl about 1836. There has always been a mill on this site. Mr. Ladd has thoroughly remodeled his mills, and has put in new and improved machinery for grinding flour and buckwheat. The capacity of the mills is 50 barrels of flour every 24 hours.

William E. Babcock, born near Troy, N. Y., was one of 10 children. His father, Reuben Babcock, Jr., was captain of a rifle company during the War of 1812, but did not serve as such in that war. His grandfather was in the Revolutionary war. Mr. Babcock's parents removed from Troy to Pembroke in 1833. He had only three months' schooling after he was 13 years old. After attaining his majority he prosecuted his trade as contractor and builder, and gave special attention to bridge building for several years. He has also been engaged in several manufacturing enterprises, and for one year and a half was in mercantile business. In 1880 he became the proprietor of the East Pembroke custom and merchant flouring-mills, to which he has since given his attention. Mr. Babcock possesses good financial abilities, and has been quite successful. He was elected collector of taxes, and performed the duties of that office so acceptably that he was re-elected the ensuing year by an increased majority—the largest on the ticket. He was elected to another town office the ensuing year, but declined to serve.

Joel W. Bates, M. D., was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1852. He received an academic education, and commenced the study of his profession with Drs. Carson and Bogart, of Whitby, was one year with Dr. Floor, of Youngstown, Ohio, and one term at Toronto University. He passed the examination of the medical board of Toronto and graduated from the Eclectic Medical Institute of Cincinnati, Ohio, in January, 1875. He was three years at Kinmount, Victoria County, and in 1879 settled at Indian Falls, this county, where he has built up a good and successful practice. In 1880 he married M. Eugima McWain, of Pembroke.

John Boyce was born in Suffolk County, England, February 2, 1804, and married Mary Mullinger, of his native town. In 1836 he, with his family, emigrated to America in a sailing vessel, was nine weeks in making the passage, and landed in Montreal. He went to Buffalo, where he resided nearly two years, and eventually made a permanent home on a new farm of 50 acres on the town line between Bennington and Sheldon. He first resided in a log house in the town first named. By the aid of their son John, Jr., who worked out among the farmers, money was secured toward making a payment on an additional 90 acres. John Boyce, Sr., died in July, 1876. Mrs. Boyce died some years before. They were parents of seven sons, all of whom are living except the youngest, who died at the age of 14 years. Mr. Boyce was a true Christian worker.

John Boyce, Jr., born in England, March 20, 1825, resided with his father until 21 years of age. Mr. Boyce worked for the farmers until he was 27. In 1851 he married Betsey H. Safford, of Elba, and settled permanently in Pembroke in 1853. They now reside on a fine farm of 250 acres, two and one-half miles northeast of Corfu. They have three sons and nine daughters. Mr. Boyce is a prominent citizen of Pembroke, is a Republican, has served his town six terms, a period of 18 years, as assessor, and has been appointed executor or administrator in settling quite a number of estates. He is a breeder of thoroughbred Jerseys, from which Mrs. Boyce manufactures a gilt-edge quality of butter. Mr. Boyce is a member and elder of the Presbyterian Church of Corfu, and one of its trustees. The Boyce homestead in Sheldon is still in the Boyce family, and is owned by William, brother of John Boyce, of Pembroke.

Thomas Lloyd was born in Wales, educated in England, and became a member of the English Church, but afterwards became a Quaker. About the time William Penn came to America Mr. Lloyd left his native country and settled in Pennsylvania. He occupied the positions of president of the council, chief of the commission, and also deputy governor of the colony under Penn. He finally retired from office in 1694. He married Sarah Ann Nugget, and they had six children—four sons and two daughters,—whose descendants have scattered over the entire continent. About 1809 three of the sons emigrated to Canada, and settled in the townships of King and Whitchurch, and from them the Canadian branch of the great Lloyd family is descended. In June, 1889, the Lloyd family held a reunion at Aurora, Canada, with 800 in attendance.

Sarah Lloyd, daughter of William and granddaughter of Thomas, who emigrated to America, was born near Williamsport, Pa., and married John Bennet, a native of England, born in 1787. A few years later he emigrated to Kings County, Canada, about 30 miles north of Toronto, where he had peaceful possession of his home until the commencement of the War of 1812. Because he refused to bear arms against the United States he was cast into prison in Toronto, where he remained until York (now Toronto) was taken by the United States army. He immediately joined the American army and served to the close of the war. Soon after he removed his family to Batavia, and settled on a new farm. His patriotism cost him a good farm of 100 acres in Canada. Mr. Bennet eventually removed from Genesee County to Michigan, where he died at an advanced age. Mrs. Bennet died at the home of her son, Henry L., in 1848.

Henry L. Bennett was born near Williamsport, Pa., June 26, 1809, was reared in Batavia, and has always been a farmer. He married Jane Simpson in 1836, and they had three sons and five daughters. All of his sons served in the Union army in the late war. James F. Bennett, the oldest, received three gun-shot wounds; William and Hiram escaped unwounded, but returned with impaired health and shattered constitutions. Henry L. Bennett has been a prominent man in Genesee County, where he has resided the past 70 years. He commenced his political career with the old Whig party, and upon the organization of the Republican party he became one of its loyal members. Mr. Bennett has held many of the offices of his town. He has served as constable about 50 years, and has been deputy sheriff many years.

Hon. John W. Brown, second son of Cyrus and Milla (Lawrence) Brown, was born in Sharon, N. H., July 7, 1817. He attended the common school of his district in Pembroke until 16 years old. Since then he has acquired a good practical education by close study and a course of reading by himself. January 1, 1838, he married Lorette R., daughter of Winthrop and Ruth Noble, of Batavia, and settled on a portion of the homestead. He commenced his political life with the "old line Whig" party, and joined the Republican party at its organization. He has been honored by his town with the office of supervisor five years—1862–64, inclusive, and again in 1866. He was efficient in filling the quota of Pembroke during the war, and was chairman of the county committee of three appointed for the purpose of raising and paying soldiers' bounties. In 1865 and 1866 he represented his county in the State legislature, where he did efficient work. Mr. Brown has also held other prominent town offices. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have had born to them 11 children, eight of whom are now living. They celebrated their "golden wedding" in 1887. In financial matters Mr. Brown has been fairly successful.

John Brown, son of John, came to Alexander early. He was a carpenter, served in the War of 1812, and married Mary Sheldon, of Canada. They had 11 children, of whom Mrs. Charles H. Davis is the only one living. They settled in "Buck House" (built in 1815), which was a noted tavern and place for holding town meetings.

Edward A. Brown was born in South Bristol, Ontario County, N. Y., December 10, 1826. He acquired a good practical education, and began an active business life with correct habits and a good constitution. January 15, 1853, he married Sue D. Witwer, of Williamsville, Erie County. Mr. Brown, at the age of 22 years, embarked in the livery and omnibus business in Williamsville, which he conducted for eight years. He then (1858) removed to Richville, in Pembroke, and engaged in the manufacture and sale of lumber, which he prosecuted until the spring of 1870, when he sold his mills and bought the fine farm where he now resides, near the center of the town. Mr. Brown still retains much of the push and energy that characterized him in his early life. He has a fine herd of Jersey cows, breeds fine horses, and has erected a good set of buildings. He is a prominent man in town affairs, has been a staunch Republican since 1860, and has the confidence of his fellow townsmen, who have placed him at the head of the affairs of his town as their supervisor in the years 1869, '70, '72, and '73. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are parents of two daughters, viz.: Eva (Mrs. W. T. Bunell), whose husband is a farmer in Pembroke, and Esther V. (Mrs. F. V. Brown), whose husband is a Christian minister in Auburn, N. Y.
Lewis Burgess, born in Ovid, N. Y., April 9, 1809, married Effie Mook, and settled at North Pembroke about 1837, on a farm of 50 acres, partly cleared. Mr. Sutherland has seen about two generations come and go. He gives a vivid description of the event of filling the Erie Canal with water for the first time. The men in charge of the feeders, from Buffalo to Albany, were signalled to open the gates, beginning at Buffalo, by the booming of cannon along the entire waterway. He and all others in early days were clad in homespun, and he well remembers when the luxury of "cotton factory" (cloth) was introduced at 50 cents per yard. He remained a prisoner about one hour, was taken by guards to a camping-place, and while his captors were forming the camp he mounted his own horse and escaped to the Union lines. Two sabre wounds were all that he received just before he was captured. He participated in the battles of Winchester, Cedar Mountain, second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Chancellorsville, Spotsylvania, North Anna River, Petersburg, June 30, 1864, and July 30th, Pegram Farm, Stony Creek, Dinwiddie Court House, High Bridge, and Appomattox. He was educated in the old log school-house with the old Dutch fire-place and stick chimney. Sometimes the scholars carried raw meat (sausage) for their dinner, and roasted it, Indian-style, over the roaring fire, on a long, sharpened stick. Mr. Ward remained on the homestead with his parents until 26 years of age. In 1844 he removed to Pembroke and settled on the Indian Reservation, but was warned off by the Indian chiefs. A few weeks later he met the "chief" at a feast and dance, and told him that he should return to his claim. Mr. Ward's facetious remarks so amused the chief that when he did return he was never seriously molested by his redskin neighbors. He was an ambitious, hard working young man, and soon made for himself a good home, where he remained until the fall of 1883, when he removed to his present home in the village of Indian Falls. Mr. Ward married, first, in 1840, Cath-settled on 200 acres which he purchased of John Long. He was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Corfu, and late in life moved to Rochester.

He died in Gates, over 80 years of age. He was a graduate of Yale, and was a sound and acceptable preacher. His oldest son, Hugh, lived on the old homestead until his death in 1881.

Seth Wakeman, at one time a prominent lawyer of Batavia, resided in Pembroke. He attended the district school. The family were very poor, the father dying in 1813. Seth removed to Batavia in 1837, and began the study of law. He was county treasurer at one time, and also a mem-er of Assembly.

STAFFORD.

STAFFORD has the best claim, we think, of being the locality of the earliest settlement on the Holland Purchase. James Brisbane, the first merchant on the Purchase, came here in 1798, with a load of goods, or supplies, for the surveyors employed by Mr. Ellicott, and opened a store-house or station at this place, from which event it was called Trans-sit store-house. The location of the store-house cannot now be clearly definite, but it is believed to be on the west side of the creek, and north of the present bridge, in the village of Stafford. In the spring of 1799 James Dewey, one of the surveyors, was waiting there with a gang of hands to start upon an expedition as soon as the weather would permit. At the request of Mr. Brisbane he cleared 10 acres of land west of the Transit, which was mainly sowed with oats. This is supposed to be a portion of the land now owned by I. M. Peck, whose father, Richard, bought the property from Joseph Ellicott.

Upon an old map made by Joseph Ellicott in 1800, for the Holland Land Company, we find the name "Walther," as indicating a settlement at this place. Walther was induced to settle here by reason of a proposition made to him by Mr. Ellicott for the Holland Land Company, who appreciated the importance of places of entertainment for the early land seekers and settlers. Mr. Busti, the agent, gave authority "to contract with six reputable individuals to locate themselves on the road from the Transit line to Buffalo Creek, about 10 miles apart, and open houses of entertainment for travelers; in consideration for which they are to have from 50 to 150 acres of land each, at a liberal time for payment, without interest, at the lowest price per acre." Three persons accepted the offer, one being Frederick Walther, who was then residing on the land, who took 150 acres west of and adjoining the eastern Transit, including the company's store-house. Because of his officiousness he proved to be an undesirable settler for those days, and soon left the county. Thus was begun the actual settlement of the town and village of Stafford, but the name "Transit" was retained and a postoffice of that name kept until 1841. It is said that Ira Gilbert was the first postmaster. Orin De Wolf was his deputy. Gilbert also at one time kept the old Churchill tavern, long known as the temperance tavern, on the road to Batavia.

The town was formed March 24, 1820, being taken from parts of Le Roy and Batavia. It contains 20,000 acres of land, is undulating in character, and has a very productive soil, upon which good crops of wheat, beans, potatoes, and general farm produce are always grown. Portions of the town are underlaid with limestone, much of which is used for building purposes. The town is well watered by Black Creek, flowing north through the central portion, and Bigelow Creek, which flows through the west portion into Byron. Horseshoe Lake is situated on the latter creek, and has become a pleasant summer resort.

In 1802 Col. William Rumsey, from Hubbardton, Vt., came and settled on "Stafford Hill," the highest point of land in the town. He was a surveyor in the employ of Joseph Ellicott, and a colonel of militia, and represented the county in the legislature. Joseph E. Rumsey also came with his father the same year, and eventually moved to Chicago. Nathan Marvin bought a large tract of land at Transit (Stafford) in 1803, comprising farms now owned by Mrs. Bagot, the former proprietor being Richard Radley, who bought the property in 1831. Marvin moved to and died in Ohio. John Debow settled on the Webber farm in 1804. General Worthy Lovell Churchill located near Rumsey. His wife died in 1803, and soon after occurred the birth of a child, being respectively the first death and birth in the town. Gen. Churchill was in the War of 1812, was in command of the 164th Regt. of State militia, and was sheriff of the county from 1820 to 1825. In 1836 he owned the place (now the Mead estate) near Horseshoe Pond, and died there. Zenas Bigelow, in 1804, located the farm now owned by the Dowd estate, near the creek that bears his name. Other settlers came in the years following, among whom were D. Hall in 1808, and in 1809 Eben Eggleston, who kept tavern on the Big Tree or Leicester road. The same year Leonard King, who settled in the east part of the town, came in, as did also Josiah Churchill and H. Rumsey, the latter of whom located on lot 5, where Arthur Prole now lives. In 1810 we note the advent of Malachai Tyler, Phineas White (who married Polly Beswick), and John Bean. Mr. Tyler settled east of Beech Creek. He had a wood turning shop, and made chairs, bowls, and spinning-wheels, and was a blacksmith. In 1811 Amos Stow built a saw-mill on Bigelow Creek, and Seymour Ensign a grist mill. He also carried on wool-carding and cloth-dressing, being assisted in the latter work by a Scotchman, named Falconer, who afterwards was taken prisoner in the War of 1812. The same year (1811) came Nathan Bannister and Betsey Bigelow, the latter locating on lot 11, near school-house No. 2. In 1812 came Elisha Prentice and Capt. Nathan Cash, and in 1813 Merritt King. Peter Stage, in 1814, located on lot 7, where John Webber now lives. In 1815 Eden Foster and Noble Daniels came in. The latter located where Perry Randall now resides. In 1816 came Adger Lathrop and David McCracken. Abel Cross came in 1817. In 1818 came Chester Scott, who also located land in Elba, and as late as 1833 kept a distillery. B. Clark, Joel Phileo, J. J. Reynolds, and John S. Blair came in 1819. On the old Genesee road, neighbors to the Rumseys and Churchills, were B. Bristol and Mr. Van Alst, who came in 1821.

Upon the Craigie tract, in the southeast portion of the town, the persons who first took up land were J. Bushnell, in 1815, and D. Biddlecum. Following them were C. Sweetland in 1817, D. Laid in 1821, E. Wright in 1823, S. Plant in 1824, E. W. Cobb in 1827, E. Northrop in 1820, Mr. Sweetland and Mr. Lent in 1825, and Mr. Bannister and Mr. Coon in 1826. Others from 1827 to 1835 were Tanner, Snow, Tomlinson, Beckley, Pratt, and Lewis. On the old Genesee road east of the village the early settlers were as follows: In 1823, J. Reynolds; 1824, Z. Terry, Otis Drury, A. Hubbard, and A. Bangs; 1825, J. Stage; 1826, C. Kelsey; 1827, J. Ellis; 1829, Ira Danolds; and 1830, O. H. Kendall, T. Judd, R. Blish, J. Iden, Mr. Stutterd, Moses Smith, and Hinsdale and Smith Kellogg.

Settlements upon the Pultney lands of the Connecticut tract were delayed, and the earliest we can get any trace of are Nathaniel Watson and Daniel Prentice in 1812, and the family of Stephen Randall, who came in 1815. Mr. Randall had nine children to help him maintain a home in the wilderness. They started from New Hampshire in the winter, were on the road three weeks, and reached Le Roy February 2d. He bought the farm now occupied by Perry Randall, upon which he moved within 24 hours after their arrival. There were 15 acres, of which only three acres had been cleared, but happily a log house had already been built. There was no road to the place, so they left their teams and luggage one and a half miles away. Clark Daniels also came in 1815, as did also John, the father of Jay Lathrop. The Moses located here in 1826, and others scattered along in the years following, until about 1831, when the settlements were rapidly made by Englishmen who were attracted to the lands in this section.

Three separate tracts, or large original divisions of land, are represented in the town. The first in order of settlement is the Holland Purchase, forming the western part; the Craigie tract, of 46 lots, varying from 87 to 115 acres each, in the southeast portion; and the Pultney lands of the Connecticut tract, in all 80 lots, from 100 to 120 acres each, located in the northern and eastern portions of the town.

The town is well laid out, the drainage good, and the death rate for 1888 only seven per 1,000. Two physicians are located in the town, but are not kept very busy, owing to its healthful location. Since 1803, and to within a few years, the village has been quite prosperous. It is mainly settled by English people, and partakes of the character of an English village. Most of the village residents are farmers, and with their nearness to each other form a happy society of their own entirely unlike that of any other village in the county. The first English settler was John Webber, who came in 1817. He was followed by a Mr. Stutterd in 1830, and soon a large and influential colony of Devonshire people were congregated in the town, thousands of miles from their native land, to make new homes for themselves and families. A fair business is transacted in the village. The buying and shipping of grain and produce of all kinds is extensively carried on, assisted by excellent railroad facilities, there being two depots for that purpose. During the busy season it is not uncommon to ship 1,000 car loads of the products of the soil from this village.

The first school was kept and taught by Esther Sprout in 1806. At one time Richard Radley kept a private school in the building east of the Episcopal Church, which was very prosperous, and of great utility to the English settlers in carrying out their ideas of instruction to the young. The district schools are generally well built, and the educational facilities for teaching the young are of a good and practical order. There are 10 district schools, with a school population of 612, employing 14 teachers. The site of school No. 8, on lot 124, in the north part of the town, was deeded in 1822 to "Walter Campbell and others, in trust," for school purposes. Upon the same lot, in 1834, a small portion was set apart for a burying-ground. The old cobblestone school-house, in the northwestern part of the town, was built over 50 years ago.

Early merchants.—As has already been stated the first settlement of the county was made in Stafford, and with it was the advent of trade. Mr.
Brisbane seems to be the first merchant, coming in 1799 from Williamsburgh, on the Genesee River. His clerk was John Thompson. He dealt in all kinds of goods necessary for the new settlement. Mr. Brisbane removed to Batavia in 1802, it being decided to establish the county seat there. Settlement in the village progressed on the opening up of the adjoining lands, making it a center for trade, and an inducement for mechanics, merchants, and tavern-keepers to pursue their callings. In 1820 Samuel A. Bigelow opened a store, and remained until 1826. Ira Dan-olds came in 1827 and engaged in trade, and in connection with his brother operated a distillery. They built the stone structure (still standing) in 1827, which they used as a store, and later added a third story to be used as a lodge room. It was so used by Olive Branch Lodge, and it was here that David C. Miller, editor of a Batavia paper, was taken, when arrested, and rescued by his friends. Robert Stage followed in 1829, and others in succession until 1843. That year came the March family, consisting of three brothers—William, Samuel, and Isaac. C. W.
March, another brother, came in 1869. In 1864 Stephen Crocker and his brother George and Dr. L. M. Haynes came in, and they were all engaged in trade. John Burden and J. & E. B. Sanders were also early merchants.

The entertainment of travelers in early times caused the erection of many taverns. Jonathan Bemis was a landlord as early as 1804. David Danolds was among the earliest, and he kept the old log tavern where Walther first opened. The building stood just west of the stone storehouse. Henry Peck had a place of entertainment in 1827. Isaac Newton Stage kept for 30 years where Mr. Heal now owns. He died in 1858. Others who preceded Mr. Heal were Wolfe, White, Fisk, and Odell. Ira Gilbert, who was the first postmaster, also kept tavern in the western part of the town, at a place once called "Churchill tavern," and for some time after "Temperance tavern." A Mr. Heacock married Gilbert's widow, and the Temperance House was continued by them.
Churchill had for a sign a plow, which was fastened upon the stump of a tree, 25 feet from the ground.

Besides the hotels kept at Morganville, when it was a prosperou-village, was one opened by a Mr. Eggleston in 1809, on the Big Tree road, in the southwestern part of the town. This was afterwards kept by Mr.
Lee, and later by Mr. Bartholf, and retained the name of Checkered taver (being painted in checker style) for a long time. It was finally purchased by Mr. Wemple.

Present industries.—John Passmore is engaged in making a superior quality of cider at his mill on road 46. He manufactures 50 barrels per day, having a 16-horse power engine and all the latest improvements.
His cider has attained a wide reputation for purity, and shipments are made all over the country. The mill was built in 1876.

The cider-mill at Stafford village is owned by E. M. Pamphilon and Charles and Alonzo Dezendorf. It was built in 1883, has a capacity of 30 barrels per day, and is run by steam.
An evaporator for drying fruit is located near the depot, and is a source of employment to many hands in the fruit season.

One of the principal industries of Stafford village is the finely equipped storage warehouse and feed-mill owned and operated by Sanders & Son, who are also extensive grain and produce buyers.

Morganville, so-named from Morgan of Masonic notoriety, is situated about one and one-half miles north of the village of Stafford, on Black Creek, and has a population of over 100. Twenty years ago considerable business was transacted here, there being several mills and machine shops. The fall of the creek in that locality is 30 feet, which affords valuable water-power. The location of the new Geneva and Buffalo Railroad, just south of the village, and the new depot contemplated, will undoubtedly cause business to revive in that section.

The Christian Church, located on the main street, was built in 1833, by a union of Christians and Universalists. The latter all died or moved away, and since 1870 the church has been termed Christian. The same denomination built a church in the eastern part of the town in 1836, which was sold in 1867. The church was organized in 1816 by Rev. Joseph Badger, with 40 members. The first pastor was H. Thompson. The present number of members is 70, under the pastoral charge of Rev. John B. Clark, and there are about 70 Sunday-school scholars. The church will seat about 250 persons, and is valued at about $4,000.

Charles Lathrop built a brick hotel in 1835, and kept it several years. The house is now owned by H. Stone, but not used as an hotel. There was an hotel nearly opposite, kept in 1833 by Jerome Randall, in the house now owned by Edwin Ross.

The present grist-mill in Morganville was built about 1878, by John Simmons. It is of stone, 40x60 feet, three stories high, has two runs of stone, and does a custom and flouring business. It is now run by Robert M. Parkerson. The first mill on the present site was built by Adget Lathrop about 1820. R Fisher built an addition afterwards. This mill was burned in 1874. The wagon shop, built about 1853, is now owned by Albert H. White, who bought it in 1886, and has since carried on the business. He manufactures wagons, carriages, sleighs, potato diggers, etc. Besides these Morganville has a postoffice, store, harness shop, blacksmith shop, and a pottery.

It is said the first postoffice in Morganville was established about 1838, with Germain Lathrop as postmaster. The building used as such was built in 1820, and is now used for the same purpose. The old Remington harness shop is one of the few existing landmarks of the locality, being built by Hazen Moss in 1825. Another interesting building is the stone school-house, built previous to 1830, which was arranged for holding religious exercises, having a pulpit on one end. Robert Fisher is to be credited for his efforts in establishing business at Morganville. He it was who built the stone mill and set on foot various enterprises that caused it to be a busy place from 20 to 40 years ago. He was the postmaster in 1869. David Rogers, a mechanic, about 1820, made the first cultivator with a wheel. His shop was in the old stone building erected by Mr. Bronson.

ROANOKE is a hamlet in the extreme southeast part of the town, near the Pavilion line. It was named by Major John Ganson in honor of John Randolph, of Virginia, whose residence in that State was so-called. The main branch of Oatka Creek skirts the southern part of the village, affording excellent power for grist and saw mills. A store, cooper shop, blacksmith shop, and about 25 houses make a good locality for business. J. H. Ganson and Jonathan Lay were prominent men in early times. They operated the old furnace.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at Roanoke was organized as a union church in 1840, with about 50 members, and with Rev. Daniel Burke as pastor. A church edifice was built in 1843, costing $1,500, and capable of seating about 170 persons. Services are only held occasionally.

The Roanoke roller-mills, located on the Oatka, have a full set of rolls and three runs of stones, and are operated by H. C. Duguid & Son, who have operated them since 1887. They were built in 1835 by Lay, Ganson & Co.

In 1840 S. Pierce operated the old (Northrop) woolen factory. Knowlton, Rich & Co. were there in 1845, and Shaffer & Hardy in 1853, when it was burned.

During the war of the Rebellion the town contributed nobly its share of clothing, money, and men for upholding the cause of the Union, and the heavy demands were readily responded to by each and every citizen. In all 50 men left the town for the field of battle, 23 of whom gave up their lives for the cause of their country. The return of those who survived was the occasion of great rejoicing, and public homage was accorded them; while for the martyrs a beautiful monument was erected, in a conspicuous place in Rural Cemetery, where yearly the citizens vie with each other in honoring the memory of the names given herewith, and which are inscribed upon the shaft: John Ball, Martin R. Bowan, Christ Cooper, Mortimore M. Cummings, Thomas Gayton, David Greening, John Folk, George Jerry, Francis Lander, William F. Lewis, William F. Mills, George Merlin, Alonzo Nichols, Thomas Passmore, Jr., Isaac Page, Thomas Phelps, William Rudd, Riley Stevens, Dewitt Van Alst, John T. Twamley, William Webber, F. B. Wright, and Charles Willmore.

Religion has always had a strong hold upon the residents of this town, and manifested itself as early as 1810, when services were conducted at the house of Col. Rumsey by the Rev. William Green. From this inspiration the Baptist Church was started, and a stone structure, a part of which is now in existence, was erected in 1815, nearly one half a mile west of the Transit, on the road to Batavia. The building is now used as a tenement. The Rev. Amos Lampson was the first minister of this church. In 1821 a Congregational Church was organized, which afterwards adopted the Presbyterian form of government. Rev. Mr. Huxley was the minister until about 1825, when L. Judson, until 1836, officiated under the patronage of the Missionary Society. Then followed Louis Mills, and afterwards H. G. Ward. A union church was kept up for some time, but dissatisfaction arose as to occupancy of the building, and separation was the result.

Owing to the influx of so many Church of England families about the year 1830 a movement was made towards the formation of an Episcopal Church. Previous to this the adherents of that church were compelled to go to Batavia or Le Roy. As early, however, as February 16, 1823, E. Mix, Lucius Smith, and Richard Smith, of Batavia, organized St. Phillips's Protestant Episcopal Church, but no records exist concerning it. In February, 1833, a parish was organized at Stafford village, under the name of Trinity parish, with the Rev. John P. Robinson in charge. In October, 1834, there were 40 communicants. Services were held in the old stone (or union) church for want of an edifice of their own. In 1841, through the activity of the members, a church was built and consecrated in 1842 by Rt. Rev. Bishop Delancey, under the title of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church. Richard and John Warren, Sr., were chosen wardens. Rev. George D. Gillespie, now bishop of Western Michigan, was the rector. In 1843 Rev. Stephen C. Millett was rector. He resigned in 1845, and John P. Calhoun succeeded him in 1846. He was followed by Rev. Milton Ward, and he by Rev. Philemon E. Coe in 1850. Rev. Richard Radley took charge in 1851, and served for 19 years, or until 1870. He died in 1879. Other rectors followed until 1882, when the Rev. Mr. Edson came, and in 1888 the Rev. E. R. Armstrong, the present rector. The present house of worship is a substantial structure, built of wood on a stone foundation, and is capable of seating 300 persons. It cost $2,500. The present value of church property is $3,500. The membership of the church is 200, and the Sunday school has over 80 children.

Stafford Rural Cemetery Association.—Soon after the Holland Purchase was opened for settlement Col. Nathan Marvin purchased the lands now owned by Mrs Mary E. Bagot and Mrs. E. S. Wood. The early burials on these grounds, where Mrs. Bagot's small orchard now is, were Col. Marvin and Peter Stage. Four acres of land was set apart for town purposes: one acre for burial purposes, one acre for a town house on the Clip knock road, and two acres for church and school purposes, the whole forming a square of four acres. The land for burials was found unfit for the purpose, and Col. Marvin exchanged for an acre lying west of the Transit road, the location of the present cemetery. Burials were made on that plat thereafter, and an enclosure was made by Maj. Harvey Sweetland. In 1831 Mr. Marvin sold his lands to Richard Radley, reserving the acre for a cemetery, the school-house site, and ground where his children were buried. These reservations were afterward conveyed to Isaac N. Stage and the town of Stafford. The grounds were soon neglected and grew up to weeds and brush, and disorder generally prevailed. In August, 1865, the ladies of Stafford exhibited the usual energy of the sex by agitating the subject, and calling attention to the necessity of a reform in cemetery matters, which resulted in an entertainment, from which $65 was realized. From this time the subject was thoroughly ventilated, committees were appointed, and the above association was duly organized under the law of the State pertaining to cemeteries. Israel M. Peck was chosen president; Stephen Crocker, vice-president; C. W. March, secretary; and J. I. Stutterd, treasurer. After this the title to the land was vested in the corporation, additional land bought, and by a systematic plan lots and walks were laid out, the energy of its officers being met by the usual amount of prejudice and opposition, but the general good of the community triumphed. At a town meeting in 1868 $900 was taxed and voted to be expended for a soldiers' monument. One was finally erected at a cost of $950, containing names of 23 soldiers, former residents who gave up their lives in the Rebellion. The association has a fund of nearly $2,000, the interest of which is spent in caring for the grounds, the fund being augmented constantly by the sale of lots. The people of the town are justly proud of the few persons who gave their time and energies to the accomplishment of so beneficent an object. The present officers are Israel M. Peck, president; John H. Drury, vice-president; and John Sanders, secretary.

Stafford Benefit Association was originally organized in 1870, and the rules by which it is now governed were adopted at its reorganization in 1877. It was incorporated in 1881. The society is one of the most prosperous of its kind in the State. Its present officers are I. M. Peck, president (who has served as such for 11 years); O. J. De Wolf, vice-president; E. M. Pamphilon, secretary; and Archie D. Sanders, treasurer. In 19 years there have been 37 deaths. There were 100 applications for membership in 1888. The standing for 1887 was as follows: total income from fees, dues, and assessments, $1,612; disbursements for losses, claims, salaries, etc., $1,445; policies in force, 415; policies for the year, 68.

Stafford Lodge, No. 222, I. O. O. F., was organized in 1867, with the following charter members: William Barnett, John Sanders, John Passmore, I. M. Peck, and A. Keller. It has been a flourishing organization, having at one time 85 members. Its numbers now about 40. A large fund amounting now to $1,400 has been accumulated for the benefit of its members.

Transit Lodge, No. 363, was organized in October, 1823, with Dr. Samuel S. Butler as master; Eden Foster, S. W.; and Jacob Wade, J. W. It was dedicated in September, 1825, and Rev. Lucius Smith, of Batavia, preached a sermon on the occasion. It survived only a few years.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bagot, only daughter of George and Mary (Radley)
Bagot, was born in 1833. Her father was among the first of a party of Englishmen to settle in the town, in 1831. She was baptized in Trinity Church by Rev. John Robertson. Her grandfather was one of the first wardens, remaining as such till his death in 1862. She received her education at the school of her uncle, Rev. Richard Radley, and completed her studies in Le Roy. During a visit to Elk City, Mich., in 1879, she married Richard Bagot, a prominent merchant and citizen, and at one time county clerk and treasurer. Mrs. Bagot’s father and mother died the next year, and she returned to Stafford to settle the estate. She still carries on the 180-acre farm left her, besides spending much time in travel, passing her winters in Florida with her husband, whose interests in that State and Michigan are extensive.

Stephen Crocker, son of George and Sarah, was born in Bishop’s Tawton, Devonshire, Eng., February 26, 1808. His father was a prominent farmer, holding 200 acres. He died in 1850. Mr. Crocker was educated at the public schools, finishing his studies at Barnstable. On leaving school he remained with his father until 1831, when he, with a party of Devonshire Englishmen, came to America, being among the first English settlers in this town. In July of that year he bought the Anson Bristol farm on the “Clipknock road.” In September, 1832, he married Susanna, eldest daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Radley. In 1836, with two others, he went to St. Louis, and in 1839 returned to England, where he remained until 1841, when he returned to the United States with his parents and family. He was assessor of the town for six years, and during the Rebellion enrolled the citizens who went to war. Later he was one of the “war committee,” doing efficient service, has been road commissioner for six years, and held the office of poormaster for about 20 years. He has also been elected town clerk, and during the administration of President Cleveland was appointed postmaster. Although a staunch Democrat his Republican friends have given him their suffrage. Mrs. Crocker died in 1879. They had one child, Elizabeth, born in 1833, who was the first one baptized in Trinity Episcopal Church at Stafford, by the then rector, John Robertson. She received her education at Mrs. Bryan’s school in Batavia, and at the Ingham University of Le Roy. In 1855 she married Dr. Thomas, son of Rev. B. King, D. D., who was pastor of the church at Rockaway, N. J., for 50 years. Mr. King died in 1867, and two years later she married William Wood, son of Leonard, of Devonshire, Eng., by whom she had two children, Leonard and Gertrude. Mr. Wood died in 1884. In 1885 Mrs. Wood removed from “Wood’s farm,” Morganville, to the rectory in Stafford, and is now living with her father.

Miss Carrie Douglass, fifth child of Leander and Isabella Douglass, was born in Byron. She was educated at Stafford and Le Roy. Her ability as an artist is of no common order. Her paintings of scenery and fruit are excellent, and for some time she carried on a studio in New York. She studied with Col. P. Staunton, of the Le Roy Art School, and later with Frost Johnson, of New York. She is a niece of A. Hart Norris, and spends most of her winters at Spring Garden, Florida, where she has the management of the Norris Spring Garden silk farm. The father of Miss Douglass died on the Douglass homestead in 1872, and her mother in 1882. Besides attending to the duties of her 100-acre farm, and keeping up her artistic studies, she gives much of her attention to the Episcopal Church, of which she is a member, and attends to the wants of the deserving sick and poor in her section of the town.

John De Wolf, born near Hartford, Conn., married Lucy Jackson, and they had 12 children. In April, 1805, he moved to Batavia, when there were but two framed houses there—James Cochran's and William Keyes's. He was a cabinetmaker, and carried on that business there. In 1814 he located in Stafford, on road 29, on the farm now owned by John Mullen. He died in 1868, aged 86 years. Five of his children are living: Harlow and Peter reside in Michigan; Zorada (Mrs. James Manning) resides in Batavia; and John and Orin reside in Stafford. Orin was born April 6, 1804, in East Bloomfield, and came to Batavia in 1805. He has resided here since 1814. He married Zobede Perkins, and they have had 14 children, of whom 11 are living. Mr. De Wolf is a blacksmith, and settled on the place where he now lives in 1830, carrying on the business since. He was deputy postmaster under Mr. Gilbert, at Transit (now Stafford), and served as constable in 1835 and '36. He was elected justice of the peace in 1852, and has held the office ever since, being elected six times without opposition. John, his brother, was born October 10, 1805, married Eliza Fales, and had a family of 10 children. He is a farmer.

Anthony Waterman came from Cummington, Mass., where he was born in 1791. He married Sophia Bannister in 1816, and settled in Stafford, on road 22, on the farm now owned by his son Oscar. In 1834 he built the brick house now used as a residence by Oscar. Mr. Waterman had 11 children, five of whom are living. He died in 1882, and his wife in 1873. Oscar F. Waterman was born in Stafford, July 13, 1827, and has always resided on the homestead. His brother Bennett, born December 21, 1837, married Isabella Cash, and they have one son. Florence, William, and Harlow Waterman reside in Le Roy, and Harwell in Michigan.

Hon. John Sanders, born in Devonshire, Eng., in 1822, where he was educated, came to Stafford in 1841, and settled upon a farm which he carried on for years. He then opened a store in the village, and pursued the mercantile business until his death, February 2, 1882. He was a member of Assembly for 1879 and '80, and held the office of supervisor several years. He married Elizabeth Dovell, and had seven children, of whom three are living. Edwin B. Sanders, brother of John, and also a native of Devonshire, was born October 8, 1841, and was a son of Henry, who came here in 1841. He entered his brother's store when young, and became a partner in 1864. He took sole charge of the business in 1874, carrying it on until 1884, when E. M. Pamphilon became a partner. Mr. Sanders was postmaster for 22 years and town clerk 19 years. He died April 25, 1887. Mrs. Ann Sanders, the widow of Henry, is still living in Stafford, aged 92 years.

Maj. Harvey Sweetland, a native of Connecticut, settled in Stafford in 1810, on the farm now owned by Robert Call. He was one of the most enterprising of settlers, was ever ready to lend a helping hand to his neighbors, was foremost in every enterprise for the benefit of the town, and held various offices, among them being that of supervisor. He built the old stone church, and died in 1849. He received his title of major from being the organizer of a band. His brother John came to this county with him, and both served in the War of 1812. John was a brave man, was appointed a captain of militia, and lost his life in the cause. Another brother, Caleb, lived here until 1840, when he moved to Michigan. A son of Harvey Sweetland, Charles J., resides in Stafford.

Otis Drury came here in 1810. In 1839 he built the stone house where J. H. Drury now lives.
SUMMER VACATIONS.

FOR the general health and enjoyment of people who have the leisure and opportunity a summer tour or vacation has come to be regarded almost a necessity. It is our purpose in this sketch to remind the people of Genesee County that one of the pleasantest and cheapest outings may be had by purchasing of the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad Company an excursion ticket, at reduced rates, from Rochester to the Thousand Islands, where a few weeks or a few days may be enjoyed among the labyrinths of that wonderful archipelago, with headquarters at Clayton or Alexandria Bay, or at Round Island, Thousand Island, Central, Westminster, or Grand View parks, from any of which points excursions to Kingston, Brockville, Ogdensburg, and among the islands are of daily occurrence, and where fishing and picnic parties find ample opportunities for enjoyment. If one desires the route may be continued to Ottawa, the Dominion capital, or to Montreal, Quebec, and up the Saguenay, from where one’s steps may be retraced; or extended to the seaboard, via Lake Champlain, Portland, or Boston, and thence home by either of the several routes.

By sending 10 cents in stamps to Theodore Butterfield, general passenger agent of the R., W. & O. Railroad, at Oswego, N. Y., a guide book of tours, containing also several fine maps, will be mailed to the applicant.

By the way what a wonderful road the R., W. & O. has become! stretching more than 650 miles in length through the counties of Oneida, Lewis, Jefferson, St. Lawrence, Oswego, Cayuga, Wayne, Monroe, Orleans, and Niagara, and has terminal stations at Utica, Rome, Syracuse, Rochester, Niagara Falls, Suspension Bridge, Oswego, Sackets Harbor, Cape Vincent, Clayton, Ogdensburg, Norwood, and Massena, connecting in all with more than 20 other roads, and has besides more than 15 junctions and crossings with its own branches and with other roads. The aforesaid book of tourists’ routes contains a map of the railroad, one of the Thousand Island region, one of the Adirondack region, another of the White Mountain region, a general map of all eastern resorts, and nine other maps of great value to tourists. The company will sell excursion tickets over all the routes mentioned in their lists.

This great railroad, under its present progressive management, has become one of the most important railways in the country. No effort has been spared to make it the greatest tourist route in America. The road has been practically rebuilt in the last five years, the track having been relaid with heavy steel rails and thoroughly ballasted with gravel and stone. New, heavy, and powerful locomotives, specially designed to haul heavy passenger trains at a high rate of speed, have been placed in service; and the passenger equipment has been raised to the highest standard. New coaches recently purchased are of the most magnificent style, with vestibules and all the latest modern improvements. Fast limited express trains are run between Niagara Falls, Syracuse, and Clayton, to the Thousand Islands, and also between New York, Albany, Utica, and Clayton. Wagner buffet sleeping cars are run between Chicago, Niagara Falls, Rochester, and the Adirondack Mountains, White Mountains, Portland, Me., and the sea coast resorts in Maine. Through sleeping cars are also run from New York and Albany to Clayton, Thousand Islands, and the Adirondack region. These limited express trains are run particularly for tourist travel, and make quick time, avoiding stops, and performing the same service as that of the great trunk lines of the country.

PART FIRST.

BATAVIA.—The following sketch was furnished us only in time to find a place in this,

Errata:

Paul Knowlton, son of Abraham and Martha Knowlton, was born April 17, 1736, and died June 27, 1799. He married Lucy Forbush, of Hardwick, Mass., in November, 1769. Their son Daniel, who was born December 9, 1775, and died July 4, 1847, married, in 1803, Mary Heminway, in Worcester County, Mass. She was born June 27, 1786, and died October 8, 1874. They emigrated to Genesee County in 1816, and located in Pavilion upon a farm. Their children were Mary, Pamela, Adaline, Daniel, Venus, Hepzibah, Thaddeus, and Levi. Thaddeus was born March 31, 1822, and married Phebe, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Bugby) Stewart, May 28, 1845. Her mother’s parents, Richard and Phebe (Boyce) Bugby, were orthodox Quakers, and lived on a farm in Rhinebeck, Dutchess County, N. Y. Her mother, Sarah, was born in 1795, and died February 16, 1861. She was the second daughter in a family of 10 children, and married Joseph Stewart in 1816. He was born in 1794 and died in 1884, and served as a soldier in the War of 1812. Their children were Seneca, Catharine, Phebe, Martha, Richard, Mary, Joseph, Elzada, Eliza, Hosea (who served three years in the Rebellion), and Cecelia. They moved to Warsaw, Wyoming County, in 1835. Thaddeus and Phebe (Stewart) Knowlton lived most of the time on the farm upon which his father located in 1816 until 1885, when they removed to Batavia village, where they now reside. They have had children born to them as follows: Daniel Stewart, September 30, 1853; Frank Joseph, December 25, 1856, who died August 19, 1859; and Eva Frances, October 18, 1860. Daniel married, January 27, 1876, Nelly Vernoy, of La Grange, Wyoming County, who was born October 24, 1854. They have had three children, viz.: Edna Blanche, born April 1, 1877, who died January 21, 1886; Elsie Maude, born November 14, 1878; Mabel Phebe, born October 21, 1883.
